SYRUPS

It is estimated that more than half the time of both jobber and retail grocers' salesmen is wasted in trying to sell unknown brands of goods. This time is money ill spent, and costs the Proprietor more than the little extra profit he may get on the unknown brand he is pushing.

TOWLE'S LOG CABIN SYRUPS

WERE AWARDED THE

GOLD MEDAL AT THE ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION

For Absolute Purity and Richness of Flavor.

TOWLE'S LOG CABIN SYRUPS have always taken the first prize wherever exhibited in competition with other syrups.

THE LOG CABIN can makes the product a unique shelf package; it is always uniform in quality and flavor; never varies season by season, and every can is guaranteed and may be returned and money refunded if not satisfactory.

TOWLE'S LOG CABIN MAPLE is the pure, wholesome, delicious maple direct from the kettles of the Maple Bush of Vermont.

TOWLE'S LOG CABIN PENOCHE SYRUP is the refinement, under a special process, of a perfect cane sugar syrup with a flavor not unlike that of pure sap maple.

When you buy LOG CABIN syrups to sell, you buy a product which has no equal in the United States. This is declared to be true by the Committee on Awards of the great Exposition where TOWLE'S LOG CABIN Syrups have been exhibited.

SAN FRANCISCO TRADE JOURNAL.

The San Francisco Trade Journal's Seventh Annual Fish and Fruit Review, out this week, is a splendid record of Pacific Coast progress for 1905. It is right in line with the increasing importance of California and the whole Pacific Coast, in the eyes of the world, as a great and growing section of the United States.

ORGANIZATION

Progress of the Movement Towards Securing Co-Operation Among the Retail Grocers of California, and an Outline of Ultimate Possibilities.

By AARON H. POWERS
Editor of the Retail Grocers' Advocate and Organizer for State Grocers' Association.

It is almost nine years since the writer of this article first took up the work of assisting the retail grocers to better trade conditions.

In the beginning, the individual retail grocers were not well acquainted and therefore were unable to act in unison. There had been no one to study the problem of organization carefully. As a consequence, the grocers did not realize how much they might do to better themselves if they should only act together.

The many abuses from which the grocers suffered, arose almost entirely through the disorganized condition of the trade. In this way, the grocers are themselves responsible for the manner in which they are victimized.

The wholesaler or manufacturer, approaching each grocer separately, is able to play upon his ignorance and often upon his suspicions of his neighbors. And in this way, they induce him to do unwise things by representing to him that, while the policy might not be exactly wise, yet it was no more than what his neighbor would do to him if the occasion presented.

When the grocers are organized, and are able to carefully examine the different details of the various propositions that are brought to them from time to time, they realize the full extent of the false position taken by the salesmen and each man, knowing that his neighbor would not consider the proposition, is able to turn it down with good grace.

Great Value of a Properly Qualified Secretary.

The absolute essential for a successful organization is a secretary in whose word and in whose judgment the members have absolute confidence. Where associations have a secretary of this sort, the association members get the greatest value from their organization. They do not hesitate to consult him in matters concerning which they are in doubt. They feel free to enter into agreements he may suggest since they know he would warn them promptly should any individual fall by the wayside. This confidence protects them from tempters who would like to swerve them by false tales in regard to the backsliding of other members.

One great value for good of an organization comes from the power it gives members in controlling prices by refusing to handle goods that do not pay a profit.

Dealers Can "Make" or "Break" an Article.

When the great majority of leading grocers unite in recommending an article, it creates an impression among consumers that these goods must be "all right." It also influences the rest of the retail grocers of the community. In this way, the grocers can establish and make permanent the demand for any particular article.

When acting together, the grocers can materially lessen the demand for any line of goods.

It would be folly for one man to seek to turn the trend of public opinion. But when half the grocers unite in recommending some other article in preference to that which holds the market for the time being, they make the sales of the new article easy and it is only a matter of a short time before the older goods will be almost forgotten.

Can Make Collection of Bad Bills Easy.

It is only by coming together that retail grocers can make it worth while for a collector to look after their bad accounts.

This is true for two reasons:

First—It costs no more for the machinery to collect a number of accounts than to take care of one or two.

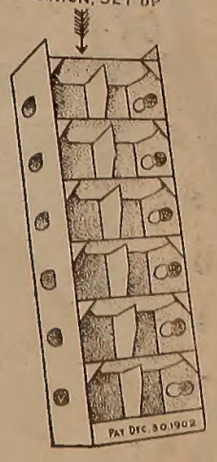
Second—The collector for an association of retail merchants is often able to get money that would be refused to him if he came merely as the agent of an individual.

The fact that an association is able to secure a proper bond from its collector is also a matter worthy of consideration.

One of the leading wholesale grocers of San Francisco, in speaking of grocers associations to the writer, said: "Why can't you let a sleeping dog lie?"

Wholesale Grocers Indifferent to Troubles of Retailers.

This is the attitude of practically the entire wholesale grocery trade. They would like to see the retail grocers prosper but they would prefer to have existing conditions remain rather than try experiments of whose ultimate success they are not sure.



The jobbing trade are afraid that, when the retail grocers get together strongly, they may do unwise things and take radical steps. They recognize that existing conditions conditions are bad. But they fear that the new ones might be worse.

At the same time, they are not willing to do anything towards directing the affairs of the retail grocers except to find fault with the association managers and bring discontent among members whom they find to be lukewarm.

They do not do this because they want to hurt the retail grocery trade, but because they do not want to get hurt themselves. They know that the disorganized individuals can not interfere with their methods and they are afraid that this peculiar something called "Organization" may hurt them.

Wholesale Trade Should Direct Retailers' Activities.

If the wholesale grocers would only study the history of association work throughout the United States they would know that strong organizations of the retail grocers, properly directed, have always been a source of enormous strength to the legitimate wholesalers. A strong organization among the retail grocers gives the legitimate jobbing trade a staunch, fearless, and effective ally in movements that require the co-operation of the manufacturer.

The Wholesale Grocers' Association of the Southern States have loaned their wealth and their influence to help form associations among retail grocers. They direct the trend of work of these associations. As a result, the retail grocers' associations have not only been a source of great value to the retail grocers, but also a source of great strength to the wholesale grocers.

Every dollar's worth of goods sold by "Semi-Jobbers" to the customers of the straight jobber, is a loss of that much business to the straight jobber. It should be the straight jobber's business to see that his customers got together and united with him to make it impossible for the "semi-jobber" to take away his trade. Unfortunately, this particular side of the work of organization has been left to the retail grocers to do alone, and the jobbers are losing more trade every day.

How Retail Merchants Got Legislative Recognition.

The associations of California have been able to help their members by their influence with the Legislature.

The retail merchants for years had asked for recognition and asked in vain. It was only when they were able to unite upon some few particular issues through a State organization, that they secured the recognition they wanted because of their importance and influence.

The progress of organization has been slow. Growth on the Pacific Coast has been retarded by lack of adequate means. But the growth has been constant and has been of the permanent sort.

In the following pages will be outlined the methods of the various associations and what their hopes are.

Special attention will be given to the methods employed by various manufacturers to maintain a retail selling price on their specialties. The legality of such steps on the part of the manufacturers will be carefully gone into and decisions of the highest courts in the United States quoted, showing that the manufacturer has the power to protect the selling price of his goods by various stringent steps.

Retail Grocers Appreciate the Advocate's Efforts.

The Advocate was started nearly ten years ago to help the grocers in their work of organization. We are often told that the greater part of their success has been due to the advice of this paper, to its unfailing support of their movements and the publicity given to their work.

We feel that this recognition adequately repays us for our efforts and sacrifices of time and money in behalf of the grocers.

As individuals, they have shown their appreciation not only by subscribing to the Advocate but by recommending it to advertisers.

In conclusion, we wish to congratulate the grocers upon having secured the services of a man like J. F. Paulding to supervise the work of the Pacific Coast Association. Mr. Paulding's honesty of purpose and ability cannot be questioned. The fact that he is prepared to give his entire time to advancing the cause of association work and watch and help its progress, makes us thoroughly confident of the ultimate splendid success of the movement.

NATIONAL RETAIL GROCERS ASSOCIATION

OF THE UNITED STATES.

Review of Its History and Outline of Its Possible Accomplishments.

By Joseph A. Stulz, Vice-President.

Nobody questions the absolutely necessity of organization in this year of our Lord 1905.

There was considerable question as to the necessity of the National Grocers' Association when I attended the convention at Cleveland in 1900. That gathering was not a particularly large one, but it was made up of very earnest men. All those present came with the intention of doing everything in their power towards establishing some plan of action which would make the National Retail Grocers' Association a power for good to every local association in the United States.

It has taken several years to establish the lines along which we can do the most good.

In those years we have not been idle.

The National Association has done a splendid work in spreading the gospel of organization, in encouraging the formation of more associations and in pointing out to the various associations the work they could accomplish by bringing together the representatives of associations from many different parts of the country and enabling them to exchange information as to what they had accomplished and how these accomplishments had been brought about.

Large Educational Valve.

The principal value of the work of the association up to the present is education.

During the past six months Mr. Fred Mason, our able secretary, has shown that with the aid of the trade papers of the country the retail grocers were indeed a power. Through the medium of bulletins which he sent to every trade paper in the United States the secretary was able to concentrate the efforts of the grocery papers of the country in focusing the protests of the trade against an abuse which all deplored—the premiums given on the part of the great cereal manufacturers.

No grocer wants to see himself forced by the manufacturer of some mush to sell furniture and fancy goods. Yet that was the condition that faced the entire grocery trade of the United States.

In recognition of the protest that was raised by the grocers, the greatest of all cereal companies, the American Cereal Company, has shut out premium schemes.

Two days after Christmas, the "H. O. Company" and the "Force Company," through their advertising manager, J. C. Clark wired National Secretary Mason that his companies would cut out all their premiums. They reserved the right to resume should the jobbers and retailers fail to take proper steps to prevent other cereal companies from taking up the practice.

Another triumph for the National Association was its success in combating the attempt of the big department stores to force the infamous Parcels Post measure upon this country.

The department stores represent enormous amounts of very closely organized capital. Their influence at Washington, through hundreds of channels, was very great.

Results Secured No Influence.

But the influence of the money they represented and the men who were recognized as advocates of this moneyed interest, was not so great as the influence of the retail merchants all over the country.

We joined under the leadership of the National Grocers' Association in protesting against the measure that would put every retail merchant of the West at the mercy of the great department stores of Eastern cities, and the National Association lead us to victory.

Why All Should Help.

It costs every association only a nominal sum to affiliate with the national organization.

Each organization is expected to pay, once a year, a per capita tax of 10 cents per member. The amount of money thus raised is about enough to pay the office expenses of the National Association.

But it marks the number of associations that are interested in the work of association. As the amount increases it shows that we are growing and becoming strong. It shows the number of associations that are willing to help make organizations strong in other communities and are wise enough to see that it is only by securing the aid of the merchants of other communities that they will be able to make their influence felt with the manufacturers whose trade extends to every part of the country, and with Congress, which seeks, in matters that effect the whole country, to do that which is best for the great mass of people and has not time to consider the demands of a few.

New Opportunities Will Arise.

Every year will increase the opportunities for good that lay within the power of the National Association.

Every association that can do so should help in advancing the work of our organization as far as it can.

JOSEPH A. STULZ, San Francisco,
Vice-President National Retail Grocers Association.

While few Western associations will be able to send representatives to those conventions of the national which meet in the far East, yet all can help by sending their per capita tax to the secretary and also by sending a letter telling what they would like to have the National Association devote itself to, and how the National Association can be helpful to them.

Send in Your Name.

I hope every grocer on the Pacific Coast who can be in the city of Cincinnati on January 24th, 25th and 26th will send us his name without delay to the California State secretary, Mr. F. B. Connolly, 456 Montgomery street, as we would like California's representation at the Cincinnati convention to be as large as possible. I hope also that those associations of California which may not be able to send a delegate to Cincinnati will send their per capita tax of 10 cents per member to Mr. Connolly in order that he may be able to show to our Eastern brothers that California is in line with organization work and is glad to bear its proportion of the expense.

Mr. Connolly will be one of the San Francisco delegates to the National Convention, and as secretary of the State Association, he will unquestionably be able to watch the trend of affairs at this meeting, and his presence will be a double assurance to the grocers of California that their interests will be safe-guarded carefully and nothing overlooked that might accrue to their advantage.

I feel that the honor accorded me by the National Association when I was elected its vice-president was not a personal matter, but was rather a recognition given through me to the Pacific Coast. For this reason I am doubly anxious that the grocers of the Pacific Coast will indicate their appreciation in the best way possible, namely, a good, strong attendance at the Cincinnati convention.

National Secretary Fred Mason sends out the folowing information of special interest to delegates:

A special train will leave Chicago via the Monon Route Monday morning, June 23rd, 10:15, arriving at Cincinnati the same night. All delegates going through Chicago should buy their tickets accordingly. Please notify C. H. Tebbetts, 2111 Michigan ave., Chicago, how many delegates you will have for the special train.

A Good Repeater

A prominent grocer, when recently asked what kind of goods he liked to sell best, replied:—

"Give me a good repeater like Royal Baking Powder, an established article of undisputed merit which housekeepers repeatedly buy and are always satisfied with."

NEW baking powders and new foods, like new fads, come and go, but Royal goes on forever. Grocers are always sure of a steady sale of Royal Baking Powder, which never fails to please their customers and in the end yields to them a larger profit than cheaper and inferior brands

Pacific Coast Retail Grocers Association.

By J. F. Paulding, Secretary.

We get our best hams from the East. The East gets its raisins from California.

It is because trade is organized that the East is able to use California raisins and pay for them with Eastern hams, and vice versa.

It is this same condition of affairs in the matter of influencing trade conditions that makes a combination of the organizations of the retail grocers of the Pacific Coast States necessary.

Necessity for Organization.

The grocers of the State of Washington have proven to their jobbers that it pays to consider the needs of the retail dealer. They have been able to do this through the fact that they controlled most of the trade done by those wholesale grocers.

As a matter of course, their influence with the jobbers outside the State of Washington was practically nothing. They could not punish the jobber, with whom they did no business, for interfering with their affairs. They had to secure protection against interference by the outside jobbers from the outside grocers who did patronize them.

In order to make it profitable for the California grocers to exert themselves in the behalf of grocers of other Pacific States, they had to agree to lend the same assistance should it ever be needed—a sort of promissory note, as it were, in which services were guaranteed in return for services performed.

This represents one side of the value of the Pacific Coast Retail Grocers' Association to its members.

The very existence of such an organization is a source of strength and value, since it will discourage any manufacturer or jobber from trying to create a condition that is detrimental to the interests of the grocer.

What Manufacturers Want.

Manufacturers have one end in view. That end is the distribution of their goods properly and with as little trouble and expense as possible over as large an area of territory as may be.

The reason they distribute their goods through the retailer, instead of going direct to the consumer, is because it is cheaper, easier and more effective. The fact that the retailer is essential in the distribution should make it obligatory on the part of the manufacturer to see that the retailer is properly paid for his trouble. This the manufacturer has not done in the past, and therefore it is necessary for the retailers to unite in demanding that certain concessions be granted for their protection.

The only way the retail grocers can repay the manufacturer for these concessions is by increasing the volume of his sales and guaranteeing the permanency of the popularity of the goods.

No one grocer can do this.

Not one organization of grocers can do it.

The more organizations of grocers that unite in agreeing to co-operate with the manufacturer, the greater will be the reward they can hold out to him in payment for his compliance to their wishes. The greater, too, will be the weight of the punishment that will fall on him should he fail to give them the protection they need and ask for as their right.

This fact makes another need for the Pacific Coast Retail Grocers' Association.

Value of United Effort.

While a firm doing a business of $100,000 per month is a very desirable customer for a manufacturer under most circumstances, yet if the manufacturer must choose between them, that firm is not so desirable a customer as twenty firms doing a business of $5000 per month apiece or of fifty firms doing a business of $2000 per month apiece. In the past many manufacturers have catered to the interests of the large stores to the detriment of the interests of the many small stores. They were able to do this because the many smaller stores were not prepared to act as a unit in resenting the discrimination.

It has been our purpose to correct this.

We think the big dealer should be given concessions in accordance with his importance. But the manufacturer should and must make these concessions conditional upon his agreeing not to use them to prevent the smaller men from making a living profit.

Represents Local Associations.

The secretary of the Pacific Coast Retail Grocers' Association today is the special representative of every local association in California, Washington and Oregon. It is the purpose of this association to have each of these associations recognize and understand that we are here to protect their interests as against the interests of the individual who might seek to force upon them improper and unintelligent business methods.

We feel that we have the absolute and unquestioned support of every local association on the Pacific Coast, because each of these associations knows that they can depend absolutely upon our fidelity to their interests.

In the end, every large concern will recognize the fact that we are of even greater value to them than we are to the smaller men, because whenever we would benefit the smaller men $10 worth, we will benefit the larger man $100 worth on account of the larger volume of business that he does.

The Pacific Coast Retail Grocers' Association does not represent the small retail grocers. It represents the grocers of all degrees of importance.

Benefits To Large Dealers.

The largest concerns on the Pacific Coast suffer the most from unintelligent competition.

They usually start a cutting campaign along sensible lines and reap a temporary advantage. Their competitors meet their prices and cut in on different lines. This sets the great mass of dealers cutting without object or reason, and these large firms find to their dismay that owing to the necessity of meeting these cuts they are selling practically all their staples on a margin too low to meet the expenses of conducting their business.

Of course, this state of affairs bears very heavily upon the smaller grocer, inasmuch as he has to maintain a level of prices, comparative to the large stores. But the big men suffer the most, since their expenses are far heavier than those of the smaller stores, and cannot be curtailed so easily.

It is our purpose to enable the grocers both big and little to ultimately secure a fair profit on all distinctive brands. It would be folly to try to stop all cutting, since many firms are forced to cut, or at least, to seem to cut, in order to advertise their business. Our only purpose is to restrain unintelligent cutting on the heavy staples. It would be foolish to try and raise the general level of prices on staples, but we do believe we can prevent the present practice of selling well advertised goods at or near cost in order to secure advertising.

"Cash" Methods vs. "Credit."

All grocers—those who sell for cash as well as those who give credit—must have about the same margin of profit to give returns enough to pay expenses. There is very little difference in the percentage of the gross receipts required to run a business on cash or credit basis.

The cash man pays for his goods every thirty days the same as the credit man. The wages are practically the same. The rents paid by the cash man are usually much higher than those of the credit stores doing the same amount of business. This is caused by the fact that a cash business must depend on transient trade, which requires a special location. This cost, together with the expense of advertising in papers, about counterbalances the cost of bookkeeping of the credit man.

The grocer who sells one brand at cost, expecting to make up on something else is often disappointed. Each brand should carry its own profits if the dealer expects to pay 100 cents on the dollar.

It is not our purpose to seek to control the price at which the cash grocer shall sell his many lines.

We intend only to bring about the discontinuance of the sale without a profit of the leading brands that have been made popular by advertising. This is at present a decided trade abuse. It is a very foolish and very expensive one and has grown because the great body of retail grocers allow themselves to be lead into it by a few firms whom they were not in a position to oppose.

Importance of Bay Cities.

We look upon the cities about San Francisco Bay as the keystone of the arch which the managers of the Pacific Coast Retail Grocers' Association are building. Within a radius of ten miles from the Ferry building in San Francisco there are over 2000 grocers, more than there are in the States of Washington, Oregon and Nevada combined.

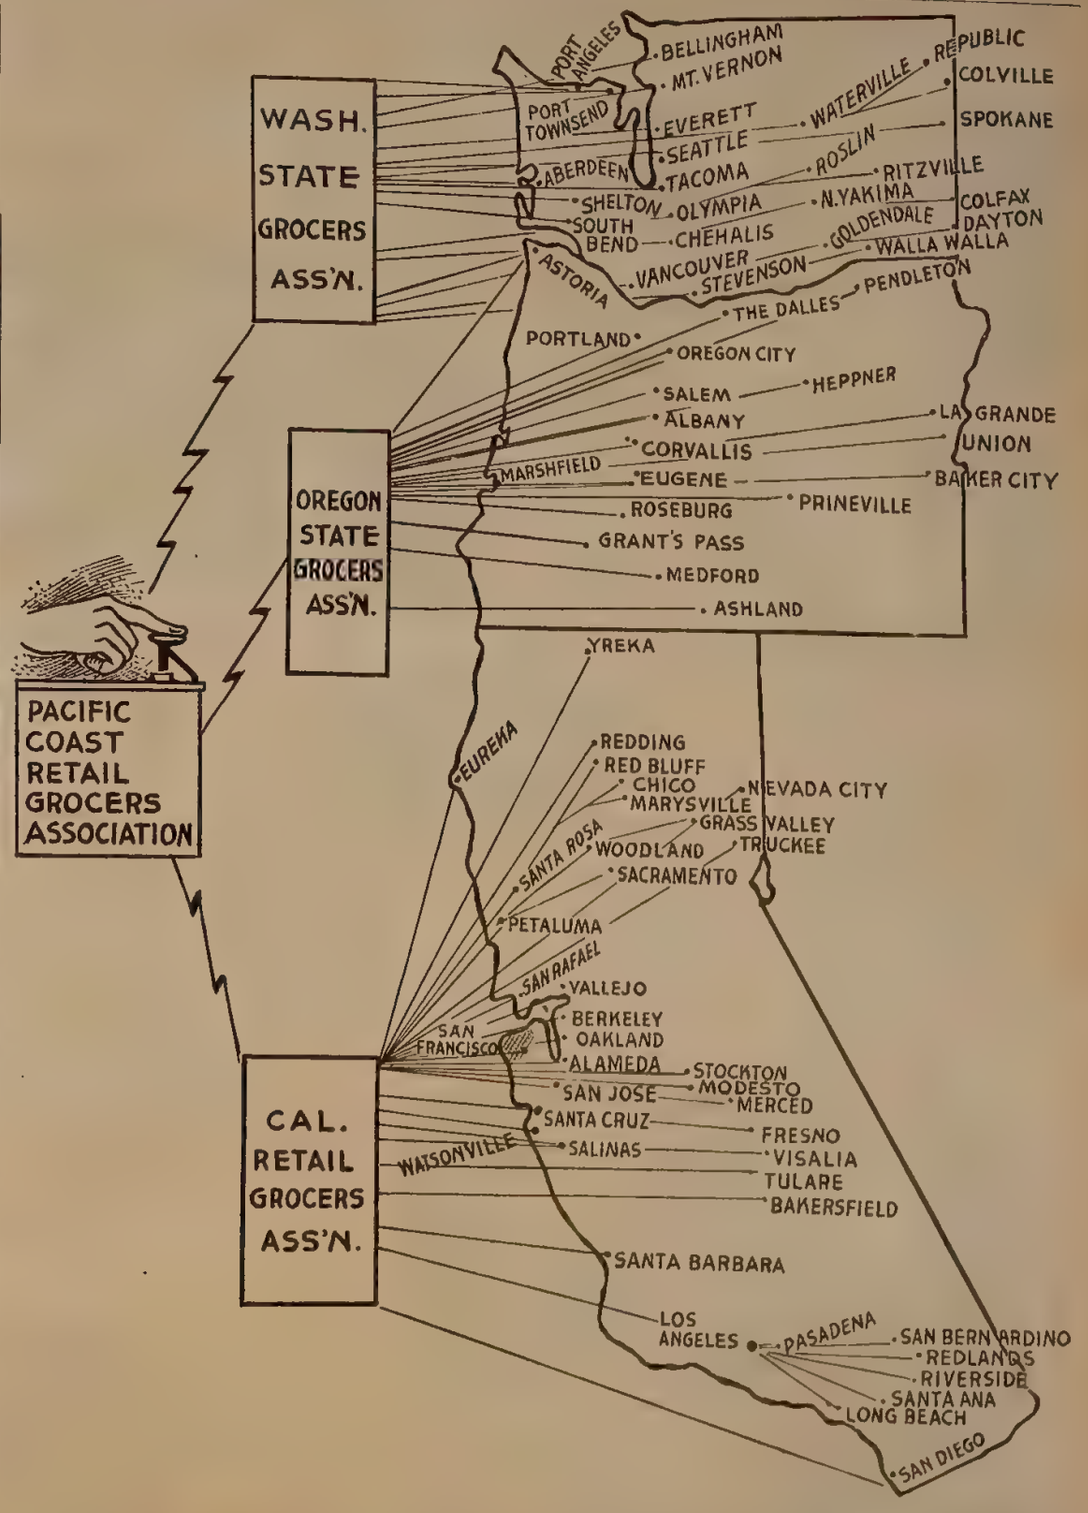
Through the efforts of these grocers, the grocers in practically all the large cities of the State have been brought to understand the value of co-operation. The grocers of the interior are now able to make it possible for the grocers of the Bay cities to bring enough influence to bear to make it worth while for manufacturers and jobbers to grant their reasonable requests.

Every step in advance by the grocers of these Bay cities can be extended to every other city of the Pacific Coast as soon as the grocers in those cities ask for it and show that they are in position to take advantage of the consideration they may ask for. It is for this reason that this office has been devoting the greater part of its attention in the last few months to perfecting the initial arrangements for the Bay cities.

Ready to Help All.

We are prepared to extend to every association on the coast support and advice whenever it may be needed.

The managers of the Pacific Coast Association have established a main office in San Francisco as the largest commercial center of the coast. This office is prepared to assist retail grocers and grocers' associations all over the Pacific Coast in correction of trade abuses, with the help of every other organization outside of that particular community if they be needed.



It can readily be seen that the maintainance of a central bureau such as ours requires the expenditure of a considerable sum of money each month.

Division of the Expense.

There was not enough capital available in the State of California to build a transcontinental railroad. The genius of a few men drew together the capital of the men of money of many communities, and as a result, the transcontinental railroad was built and the entire West came to its inheritance.

No one organization is capable of supplying the amount required. No one organization will profit enough by its continuance to warrant its assuming so great a responsibility.

By dividing the expenses among the many communities the weight upon each community is made very light. This fact makes us feel that there can be no question as to the permanency of our organization.

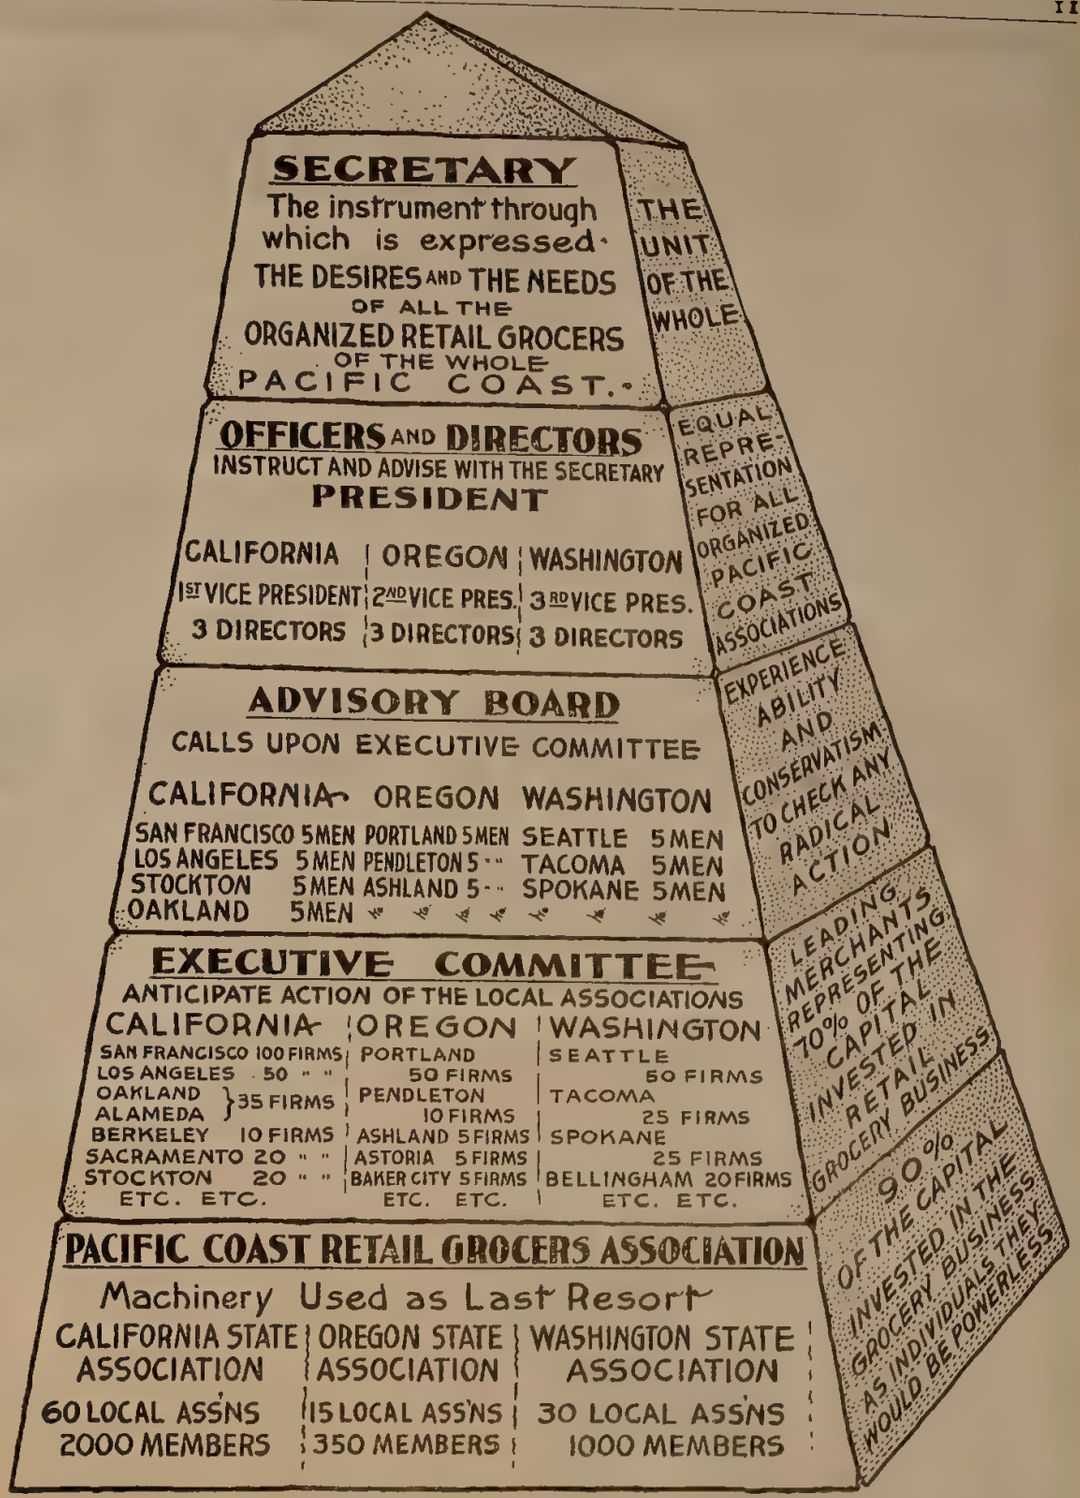
The initial expenses of our organization has been met very largely by contribution from various manufacturers who recognize the value of a combination such as ours in enabling them to protect their established brands from the inroads of cheap competitors. Before many months have passed we will be in position to be of such great value to every association on the coast that all will gladly contribute their proportion to the expenses of maintaining our office without requiring us to further place ourselves under special obligations to our friends among the manufacturers.

Will Help the Manufacturer.

In regard to our attitude towards the manufacturers, we wish to say this:

It is our desire to make it easy for manufacturers to insure retail grocers a profit on their goods. When we do this we are of value to the manufacturer as an instrument by which he can insure to his firm a permanent interest in his goods on the part of retail grocers. If our organization is not a source of value to the manufacturer we have made a mistake in its construction.

The retail grocer is really the agent of the manufacturer in the final distribution of his goods. Any means by which the interests of the agent can be increased will accrue to the advantage of the manufacturer, who will profit by a consequent increase in his sales and the lessening of the sales of those competitive articles which would be sold by the retail dealer if he did not secure a fair margin on the more widely advertised goods.



Stated briefly, then our principal purpose is as follows:

1. To help the various associations abate abuses which they could not correct without the co-operation of the associations in other States than their own.

2. To make it profitable for manufacturers to protect the selling price of their goods.

Another advantage consequent upon the success of these two great aims is the assistance we are able to give in encouraging the progress of organization.

Flour Profits Squandered.

Four Mills Force Loss on 2000 Retail Grocers to Curry Favor with a Few Cutters.

One Mill Protects the Trade: GLOBE GRAIN AND MILLING CO.

The Flour Mills That Allow Prices to Be Cut Are the

SPERRY MILLING CO.
STOCKTON MILLING CO.
PORT COSTA MILLING CO.
DEL MONTE MILLING CO.

With one exception, the California flour mills doing business in and about San Francisco, have decided that it would not pay them to attempt to maintain a retail selling price on their flour.

This position on their part makes it necessary for the retail grocers of the bay cities to continue selling much of their flour without a satisfactory profit.

A Parallel Case.

If several great and reputable firms month, to every retail grocer in the cities about the bay, and take from each man's till from 50 cents to $50 there would be an awful howl go up.

If the robbers should then put all the money, amounting to about $5000, into a pile in the street and start to burn it up, the howl would become a scream of rage.

If three great and reputable firms should then step out and say to the retail grocers: "Stand back. We could make these men stop this robbery, but we will not because we do not want to have any quarrel with them on your account."

What do you think would happen?

Yet this takes place every month in San Francisco, Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley, and in most of the other cities of California. It has been going on every month for twenty years.

The great mills who could stop the robbery of the trade have allowed the cutters to destroy about $5000 of the profits of the grocery trade each month.

Mind you, the cutters do not get the $5000. They destroy it as much as if they took it in the street and burned it up.

All the firms that compete with the cutters make the same prices they do. This means that the cutter gets only a little additional business by the low prices and, as a consequence, the profits are destroyed.

There is one mill that feels that its customers should be protected. This is the Globe Grain & Milling Company.

This mill, when it sends out its price cards, print upon them the prices at which their leading brands of flour must be sold.

They have taken these steps for two reasons:

1st. For their own advantage, since the retail merchant always tries to sell an article on which he gets a profit rather than an article which does not have enough margin to pay him even for the handling of it.

2nd. It benefits their customers. By helping their customers, they not only secure the good will of the retail grocer, but they receive an added assurance that their bills will be paid when they become due.

Other Mills Are Not Enemies.

The mills who have refused to protect the retail selling price on their flours have not done so because they were enemies of the grocery trade.

They are prompted solely by the fact that they do not think it would pay them to insist that the price of their flour shall not be cut. Stated simply, their position is as follows:

First—They think the retail grocers are not enough interested in having them maintain the selling price of their flours to warrant their taking the chance of losing the trade of the few cutters.

Second—They fear that if they should require the cutter to sell his goods with a profit of 15 cents per sack upon the listed price, that the cutter would very likely discontinue handling their flour for the time.

Third—They feel sure that even though they continue a policy that forces some of their grocer customers to sell their flour at a loss, many grocers to sell it with not enough margin to pay the cost of handling, and none to sell it at a price that gives a profit; that the great mass of retailers are not enough interested nor organized thoroughly enough to make them feel that they would lose more trade from the organized grocers by refusing this protection than they would lose from the few cutters if that protection should be granted.

Fourth—They feel that if they should grant this protection, that there are not enough retail grocers watching their attitude with interest to give them enough of special consideration to offset the possible antagonism of the few cutters.

Retail Grocers Must Act.

It is now up to the retail grocers of the State of California to prove to the millers that they are mistaken.

This must be done without feeling. But it must be done thoroughly. The mills who have refused to protect the retail selling price of their goods are not trying to injure the grocers. They would rather help them. But they think it will not pay them to acede to the demand for protection.

Calls It a Fad.

The manager of one of the more important mills stated that he considered this entire movement merely a "fad." He thought it would die out in a short time and that his company would have had its trouble for nothing and would have the discomfiture of realizing that they had lost a number of good customers without either receiving any benefit themselves or bestowing any benefit upon their trade.

If this movement is a "fad," it is one of the fads that is going to live, because it is based on common sense.

It is a "fad" that will prevent such failures as happened on Market street in San Francisco recently.

It is a "fad" in which the Sperry mills and the Stockton mills are participating in Southern California to the end that at least $50,000 are added each year to the profits of the retail grocery trade south of the Tehachapi Pass, where every retail grocer receives a profit of at least 25 cents per sack on every sack of flour he sells.

It is a "fad" that has for many years enabled the grocers of Sacramento to secure a profit on flour, since the mills there co-operate with the retail grocers in the maintainance of prices. The Sperry mills are interested in the "fad" in this district also.

It is a very good "fad" in the city of Stockton, where the Sperry, Stockton and Port Costa Mills unite in refusing to sell flour to firms that cut the price.

It is a "fad" that has proven a source of enormous profit to the grocers in all the large cities of the State of Washington.

Make the "Fad" Stronger.

Under the circumstances, common sense would teach us that both the mills and the retail grocers should unite in educating the entire trade to the value of such a "fad."

The establishment of this "fad" in the cities about San Francisco would result in the saving of about $5000 per month on profits that are now thrown away.

It would mean the ultimate establishment of better prices in every city in the State of California, where the retail grocers are organized. This means every one of the larger cities of the State.

It would mean more.

It would mean the establishment of a principle. The example of what can be done in the way of wiping out unintelligent competition in flour with the help of the mills, would be useful in securing similar co-operation from the manufacturers of other lines.

Will Help the Mills.

In the end the various mills will be helped as much, if not more, than the retail grocers.

There is no reason why the retail grocers should put in stock new brands if they can get a satisfactory profit on the established brands of flour.

The city of Sacramento gives an excellent example of what this means.

The grocers get a satisfactory profit on the flour made by the three Sacramento mills. They therefore refuse to put in stock any other flour.

The mills, on their part, refuse to supply with flour any grocer who puts in other brands than theirs.

At least 99 per cent of the grocery trade are glad and willing to have them do this, since, at the same time, they protect them in their profits.

Because 99 per cent of the grocery trade carry only Sacramento flour, the other 1 per cent, who might desire to put in some outside brand, are forced to yield to the established conditions. The practically unanimous attitude of the trade in selling only Sacramento made flour to their customers creates such a demand for this flour that no retail grocer can continue in business without them. Since the retail grocer must have the Sacramento flours, it puts the control of the situation in the hands of the mills.

San Francisco Grocers Not Fools.

The only response to statements as to what the grocers of Sacramento and Los Angeles are doing, is usually a declaration that the grocers of San Francisco are "different" from the grocers of Southern California and that we cannot expect from them the same action as we can of the grocers of other cities.

The editor of the Advocate has personally interviewed several hundred of the retail grocers of San Francisco. He finds them intelligent business men and men capable of looking at both sides of any problem presented to them.

If the mills are figuring that the grocers of San Francisco have not the intelligence to recognize the fact that they are being discriminated against, they are making a mistake.

If the mills think the retail grocers of San Francisco are not merchants enough to sell flour on which they get a fair profit rather than any flour (not a bit better) on which they get no profit, they are mistaken.

There is no question but that some of the retail grocers of San Francisco are not good salesmen. There are men who do not like the idea of trying to sell a customer an article other than that which the customer asks for.

As a matter of fact, some of them would not be able to do this if they tried. It would be unwise for such men to try to "switch" the trade of any of their customers.

There are, however, many men in the grocery business in San Francisco who are really merchants. These men are not merely clerks handing out packages as they are called for. They are salesmen and have the confidence of their customers. These men are able to sell anything they put in stock.

Selling Profitable Flours.

Already over 400 of these men have put in stock the flour of the Globe Milling Company. The Advocate has talked with a number of retail grocers who have done this, and they tell him that even when close competitors are selling Sperry, Crown and Port Costa at $1.20 per sack, they have been able to sell the "A1" of the Globe Milling Company for $1.40 per sack. They made 17½ cents per sack thereby. They sold this flour easily because they could tell their trade that being a mixture of Eastern (hard) with California flour, it was a better flour and therefore worth more money than the cheaper article.

Many of these same grocers have sold the Silver Star flour of the Globe mills at $1.25 (with a profit of 15 cents per sack) against the standard brands at from $1.20 to $1.30 per sack, and the Advocate has yet to hear of the first complaint.

The Banquet of the Globe Milling Company at $1.35 per sack has also reached a considerable sale.

Grocers Can Change Conditions.

The retail grocers themselves can change this.

They owe it to themselves to bring about the change with as little delay as possible.

All the grocers of the bay cities should have the flours of the Globe mills in stock.

They should keep the other flours out of sight and only sell them when they cannot avoid doing so.

They should recommend the brands of the Globe mills to their customers at every turn.

By concerted action of the great mass of grocers in this respect, it will be made much easier to sell the protected flour, since the recommendation of many men always has its influence in satisfying customers that the goods are as they should be.

Interior Grocers Interested.

Out-of-town grocers have an equal interest in this matter with the grocers of the bay cities.

a price in San Francisco, the State Grocers' Association will then take up the matter of establishing prices in the different cities throughout the State.

The grocers in any city where they have an effective organization will be helped to secure a profit on flour when they ask for it.

For this reason the retail grocers in the interior of the State should put in stock of the flours of the Globe mills stock of the flours of the Globe mills. The quality of the flour made by this mill is such that they can afford to recommend the goods to their trade without danger of doing an injustice to their customers.

There is another thing to be done.

Let the Mills Know.

Each grocer should tell the Sperry, Stockton, Port Costa and Del Monte mills what he is doing and why he is doing it.

Every time a retail grocer tells the representative of one of these mills that he is selling other flour in preference to theirs, he is helping convince the mills that the grocers know what they want and are in earnest in their movement to secure a profit on flour.

Even those grocers who do not feel that they can afford to "switch" their trade to other than the flour of the Sperry, Stockton, Port Costa and Del Monte mills can help in the movement.

While the average retailer receives a discount of 25 cents per barrel from the list, the bigger dealers get 30, 35 and 40 cents off the list price. It is to be noted that it is these firms that get the big discounts, that sell their flour for what it costs their smaller neighbors.

The smaller dealer has the right to protection against such discrimination.

Register Your Kicks.

Even if he goes on selling the brands on which there is no protection in price, he should register a kick every time the drummer comes around, because he cannot get $1.35 per sack for his flour.

He should let the drummer know that he realizes what he is up against.

He should let the drummer know that he is dissatisfied.

He should let the drummer know that he realizes that the mills are to blame, when the cutter sells flour at $1.20 when it costs him that price, and that if the mills were willing to take the burden on themselves that they could make the cutters maintain prices in San Francisco the same as they are making them maintain prices in other large cities.

It is not the purpose of the Advocate to make enemies for

The Sperry mills,
The Port Costa mills,
The Stockton mills,
The Del Monte mills.

We want to show the grocers how they can show these mills that they are mistaken when they think that the grocers don't care whether they maintain the retail selling prices of flour or not.

When these mills realize that the grocers know they are entitled to at least 15 cents per sack on flour and want it badly enough to work for it, the mills are going to grant that protection to the grocery trade.

It is only a matter of their not realizing how much the grocers are in earnest.

The Advocate wants to convince them of this fact.

When it has convinced them of this fact, our paper will give as much publicity as possible to letting the trade know the new stand the mills have taken.

It is worthy of note that while the Del Monte mills, at the last moment, decided to stand with the other mills in this matter, the management is in sympathy with the grocers' plan and desires to protect the selling price of its meals.

A SPECIAL REQUEST.

The management of the Advocate would request those of its readers who are interested in the proposition explained on page 12 to mention this paper when mentioning the advertisement. The offer in question is a desirable one in every respect.

PROTECTS RETAIL GROCERS.

How One Firm Has Helped Dealers Win Trade and Earn Profits.

During many years there has been one firm and one firm alone that has undertaken a systematic campaign for the protection of the retail grocers in their trade and their profits.

This is the firm of A. Schilling & Co.

The management of this establishment realized that to secure the permanent interest of the trade in their goods they had to be able to meet two conditions.

First—They not only had to give the retail grocers goods of a quality that could not be questioned, but it was necessary for them to convince the grocers' customers of that fact as well.

Second—It was necessary to assure the retail grocers that it was safe for them to build up a trade on their goods. In other words, that if the grocer should induce his trade to use "Schilling's Best" products, that there was no danger of his being forced in the end to sell them without a fair margin of profit in order to meet competition.

Satisfying the Consumer.

The first requirement as outlined above was met by A. Schilling & Co. completely. The goods they sent out under the label "Schilling's Best," were absolutely what their name implied—the best.

The "Schilling's Best" policy was to give the consumer the guarantee of "money back." This assistance on the part of A. Schilling & Co. made it easy for the dealers to satisfy his customers that they were securing the full worth of their money when they took Schillings goods.

The Retailers Profits.

Every step possible was taken to guarantee the retail dealers against being forced to face unintelligent and dishonest competition.

Goods were not sold to dealers who would not agree to maintain prices. As soon as word was received that a dealer was violating his agreement to maintain the price of "Schilling's Best" goods, the firm took the matter up with the least possible delay. The responsibility of dealing with the offender was given to the heads of the different departments whenever possible and was not left to their subordinates.

In extreme cases, the house has gone to the length of refusing to sell dealers of whose honest co-operation they were doubtful.

Retail Dealers Obstruct.

The performance of this splendid work for the retail trade was not so easy as it sounds.

In many instances "Schilling's Best" were the only goods in the community the price of which was protected. Even in those communities there were short-sighted grocers who while they benefited by the policy of A. Schilling & Co., yet resented the efforts of this firm to guard both themselves and their customers against unwise business methods. Many dealers, honest in their convictions, opposed the policy of protecting the retail selling price and thus added to the difficulty of establishing the policy firmly.

In the face of these discouraging conditions, the firm continued steadfast along the lines originally mapped out.

Thoughtful Merchant's Appreciative.

They had the warm assistance of the great mass of the grocery trade. Dealers who studied conditions and were not trying to secure an unfair advantage over their competitors realized how greatly they were helped by this policy.

There can be no question that the seeds sown by A. Schilling & Co. fell on fertile soil.

Their ideas, so widely disseminated, aroused many dealers to a sense of the folly of unwise cutting. It made them study the possibilities of better conditions with staple goods on the price of which they had not been protected.

At all times, A. Schilling & Co. has loaned the assistance of their sympathy and active co-operation to the retail grocers in the various movements for the general good.

The combination of grocers' associations of the Pacific Coast has received more than passing encouragement and every grocer west of the Rocky Mountains has much to thank A. Schilling & Co. for.

Factory of the Welch Grape Juice Co. (There are Two Stories Underground.)

UNFERMENTED GRAPE JUICE.

A Product of the Concord Grape That Has Secured Enormous Sales.

A few years ago grape juice was an unknown article. By persistent effort and advertising, it has been made a staple article by the Welch Grape Juice Company of Westfield, N. Y.

In order to supply a church at Vineland, N. J., with a non-alcoholic communion wine, Dr. Welch, in 1869, put up a few bottles of unfermented grape juice, the first put up by any one for any purpose. There were but two dozen bottles in this first effort, but from that small beginning large things have grown. Now nearly every church in the United States uses Welch's Grape Juice in its communion service.

At first and for several years, the entire output of this company was practically used for this purpose. Then its manifest purity and excellence began to attract the attention of physicians and others and the question was asked: "Why does not pure grape juice possess the valuable qualities which Concord grapes are known to have, and why should it not be used in preference to fermented wine?

Physicians came to prescribe it with marked beneficial results. Sick and well drank it for its delicious, health giving properties. Thus a new and larger field was opened.

Needed More Grapes.

The Welch Grape Juice Company continued to put up their product at Vineland, N. J., until 1897. But there were not enough Concord grapes available in the immediate vicinity to meet the increased demand. For several years previous to 1897, grapes were [illegible] gallons. Eight presses of 80 tons pressure each extract the juice from about 130 tons of grapes a day during the pressing season. The factory has recently been refitted with aluminum kettles, which take the place of the porcelain lined kettles formerly used. The output of the Welch Grape Juice Company is claimed to be equal to that of all other grape juice companies combined.

A Purely Natural Product.

Welch's Grape Juice is made on honor. Only the finest, ripest fruit is selected. Being right on the spot, they secure the pick of the vineyards. They let others take the "seconds" for shipment.

Quickness, carefulness and cleanliness mark their methods.

Grape juice is not a cheap beverage and cannot be cheapened except at the expense of quality. Economy, improved methods and gradually increasing business, combined with an ideal location of the plant, where the fruit can be bought to advantage, have brought the price down to a figure that has resulted in largely increased consumption.

Welch's Grape Juice is not a preparation.

Nature prepares every ingredient in the Concord grape. As she has pro- [illegible] who have handled Welch's Grape Juice continuously, and have let others do the changing from one brand to another, are the ones who today have a steady and growing trade in grape juice.

Very few know the many uses to which an unfermented grape juice may be put.

Welch's is a tonic food of marked medicinal and dietetic value.

It is prescribed by physicians and advertised in the leading grocery and medical journals.

It is a most delicious beverage for the home and is advertised in the best magazines and newspapers.

One cause of the success of the Welch Grape Juice Company is their persistent advertising. Welch's is the only widely advertised juice, therefore it pays one to handle it.

Saving the Dealer His Profits.

Methods Employed by Modern Manufacturers to Preserve the Popularity of their Goods by Protecting the Retail Selling Price.

It is an open question as to whether the retail dealer or the manufacturer suffers the most from the cutting of prices.

There can be no question that a very large part of the failures among retail grocers can be traced directly to the fact that they do not receive enough money for their goods. The unfortunate feature of many of these failures is that the merchant does not fix the price himself but merely meets competition in order to preserve his trade. At the same time, the firm whose prices he is forced to meet, by the carelessness of manufacturer and wholesaler, usually fails and pays 20 cents or so on the dollar.

Manufacturers have found good markets wrecked and sometimes lost to them permanently because a few cutters have so lowered the price the retail trade could get for their particular brands, that those goods were no longer desirable articles to handle. The trade, not being able to make any money from them, put in substitutes on which they got a profit and induced their customers to accept imitation goods, the demand for which was created entirely by the generous sums spent in advertising by the manufacturer of the original article.

Necessity for Protection.

Numerous firms have seen the necessity of protecting the selling price of their goods in order that the retail er should be willing to continue dling them and not be forced to for some similar article to make a fit.

Manufacturers have used different thods for insuring the retail selling e of their goods. They have taken these steps not because they were philanthropists and loved the retail grocer, but because they realized that as soon as there was no profit in handling their goods, the retail grocer was going to try to sell his customers something else.

They realized, too, that when the retail grocer puts in a substitute article, they are losing certain profit on the business for which they have paid by expensive advertising. It is only through advertising that the demand for any line of goods is established sufficiently to make imitators feel that the field is worth while gleaning. If they help induce the retailer to put in the imitation goods by allowing their own to be sold without a profit, then a large part of the money the manufacturers spend in advertising goes to benefit the makers of the substitute articles.

Interference of Retailers.

The work of the firms who protected their prices has been made difficult in the past, because it was often opposed by retail grocers. These short-sighted firms, thought they were being imposed upon by the manufacturer who "dictated" to them the prices at which they should sell the goods he manufactured. They did not realize that the manufacturer was seeking to save them, not only from themselves, but also from the cutters. Business rivals always fostered this dissatisfaction and were usually the primary cause of it.

Nowhere more clearly than in business is exemplified the truth of the adage handed down from biblical times that "They that live by the sword, shall die by the sword."

The retail firm that thinks to steal for itself the business of its neighbor and the value of the advertising of the manufacturer by selling that manufacturer's goods below the price that has been established as i in the end finds that some with more money or with sons for cutting, or with the dishonest intention of eventually going through bankruptcy, will be able to sell those goods for a great deal less than he can afford to and then the cutter, who was loudest in saying that he would not allow any one to "dictate the price at which he sold the goods," would find himself obeying the commands of a firm in the same line of business as himself. Not only would he be selling his goods at the price dictated by his rival but that price would invariably be less than he could afford to maintain and pay his bills.

Protection Is Possible.

We give considerable space in another part of our paper to showing that the highest legal authorities of the land have decided that manufacturers have the right to fix the price at which their goods can be sold and also have the right to restrain cutters from selling goods which they have bought without a contract from dealers who have agreed to maintain prices.

The courts have also agreed that a manufacturer can fix and collect a forfeit and damages from firms who might injure him in his business by selling his goods below the established retail price.

Selling Goods Direct.

Those manufacturers who sell direct to the retailer have the least difficulty in maintaining established retail prices on their goods.

The manufacturer can refuse to sell the retail dealer who will not sign an agreement to maintain the price. The retailer who has signed such an agreement will be liable to heavy damages should he fail to maintain the same.

Certain manufacturers have sold their goods to the retail dealers with the agreement that the goods were merely placed with the retail dealer for sale and that the title in them remained with the manufacturer until they were disposed of at the price agreed upon. There have been instances in which the manufacturer of goods of this sort has gone into a cutter's store and taken the goods away in spite of the dealer's protests.

In one particular instance, the manufacturer was threatened with arrest. But this step was not taken since he warned the retailer that he would begin suit for damages as a consequence of the broken contract should any of his men be molested.

The flour mills present the most striking example of the possibilities that lie within the power of the manufacturer to maintain for his customers a fair price on their goods.

In nearly every large community on the Pacific Coast with the exception of San Francisco and the cities about the bay, the retail grocers are getting a profit on flour through the action of the various mills, who have united in refusing to supply their standard brands to firms who would not maintain the price.

The mills have not lost trade. Private brands have been almost eliminated in the protected territories. Mills that tried to cut in were unable to get business.

Controlling the Cutter.

Money is the only thing that possesses the power of speech in business.

The cutter does not sacrifice his profits for love of the "dear people." He does it because he thinks he will get enough extra business to increase his profits in the end. The only power that will induce him to maintain prices is to convince him that he will make more money by maintaining prices than he would gain should he cut.

In some communities where the wholesale grocers are strongly united and have confidence in each other's integrity, and where the different individual wholesalers feel that the word "Honor" is something more than a mere part of the dictionary, manufacturers are able to maintain the prices of their goods without recourse to the rebate system. The dishonest wholesaler complies with the demand not to sell to cutters because he knows that the majority of the wholesalers will do so and that, should he refuse, he will have antagonized the entire grocery trade.

that a successful combination among themselves is impossible, such a source of protection is denied both the retailer and the manufacturer. Each jobber fears to refuse a customer any kind of goods because he thinks some competitor will seek to curry favor with the cutter by supplying him with what he wants and taking chances of getting caught.

Methods Employed.

Two modes of maintaining the retail price of goods have come into use among large manufacturers. They are systems of rebates and contracts carying a forfeit.

The Pacific Coast sugar refineries give the Pacific Traffic Association a price on sugar that allows the traffic association to give an extra rebate of 25 cents per 100 pounds to those wholesalers who do not cut prices. The traffic association is really a rebating agency. Its manager uses every endeavor to locate cutting. They often succeed and the offending wholesaler suffers a severe loss. Thus, while cutting is not completely wiped out, it is done so seldom and so secretly that the various wholesalers do not feel, as they did once, that it was necessary for them to sell sugar at cost if they hoped to retain their trade.

Schilling's Protective Policy.

On the Pacific Coast the first of the large firms selling direct to retailers that took up a campaign for the maintenance of prices was A. Schilling & Company.

This firm realized that the temporary increase of sales resulting through the cutting of prices was always followed by a relapse since the cutter himself refused to try to sell the goods when the trade became disgusted with the article that paid them no profit, and by working up business on other brands lessened the demand for the once popular article.

Therefore, every dealer that put in "Schilling's Best" goods was required to sign an agreement not to sell them below certain stipulated figures. A. Schilling & Co. then carried on a campaign of advertising that has made "Schilling's Best" and the "money back" motto household terms. Through their advertising they have convinced the consuming public that when the grocer offers them something bearing that label that he is giving them something that is absolutely pure.

The law laid down by A. Schilling & Co. did not prevent a few retail grocers from cutting their goods now and then, any more than the law against horse stealing has prevented a few dishonest men from stealing horses. It has made the cutting of "Schilling's Best" goods the exception, however, and not the rule. It gave "Schilling's Best" goods a stable value that made them very desirable property for the retail grocers who wanted to give their trade satisfactory goods and at the same time get a profit for themselves.

Sapolio Methods.

Enoch Morgans Sons' Co. have spent several millions of dollars in advertising "Sapolio." They did this in order to establish and maintain a demand for the article.

With the enormous amount of advertising and consequent demand came the temptation to cut by both wholesaler and retailer.

The wholesale grocers knew that every retail dealer had to carry Sapolio and they knew, too, that every retail grocer knew the value of Sapolio. This made Sapolio as valuable an article to cut on as sugar. Enoch Morgans Sons Co. knew this and therefore refused to sell their goods to any wholesale grocer that would not sign a contract not to sell Sapolio below a certain fixed price to the retail dealer on pain of losing rebates, and a fine to be paid to the Retail Grocers' Association of the offending jobber's community.

This policy has prevented the cutting on Sapolio by the jobbers except in special instances. And when it is cut, it is cut so secretly as not to be a menace to the stability of its price.

When Enoch Morgans Sons' Co. began their policy of protecting the price of their goods, the only retail firms that did any serious cutting were the department stores. This was largely because they were the only stores that could then make up the loss on the staples which they sold at cost, by profits on other goods which were sold to the people attracted to the store by the low prices on the goods whose values they knew. Therefore in their contracts to the wholesalers, Enoch Morgans Sons' Co. inserted the clause that the wholesaler should sell to no department store or other firm when instructed by Enoch Morgans Sons Co. not to do so.

There can be no question but that this policy of Enoch Morgans Sons' Co. has induced many of these large stores to put in stock goods similar in many ways to Sapolio manufactured by firms who desired to take advantage of the demand for this class of goods created by the advertising of the Sapolio people. There can be no question, too, but that the assurance of a fair profit on Sapolio has been the one great thing, in addition to the splendid quality of the goods that has made the retail dealer feel that it was more to his advantage to sell Sapolio than to try to switch his customers to slow-selling substitutes, even though he might get a little more profit than on Sapolio. That this advantage has more than counterbalanced the loss, is indicated by the long continuance of the "Sapolio" policy and its adoption by other firms.

Success With Fine Flour.

The Globe Grain & Milling Co. came into the San Francisco market to find that flour was being sold with margins that varied from invoice price to a margin of 10 cents a barrel. A few firms asked for 15 cents profit, but they sold very little flour.

This firm had spent $350,000 on a mill in San Francisco. They wanted trade that would be permanent. This meant that they had to had superior quality that would keep the consumer satisfied with their flour and they had to have the retailer willing to put his money into their goods and anxious to recommend them.

Their "A1' being a mixture of Eastern (hard) wheat with the best California, gave them the necessary quality. To secure the interest of the retailer, they printed on the bottom of their price cards the price below which their various brands should not be sold.

Over 400 of the leading grocers of the Bay cities are now pushing the "Globe" flours. Every day sees new customers added to their list.

The retail grocers are GLAD of the chance to sell an article at a profit if they are sure no competitor can sell the same brand for less. It is worthy of note that most of the firms handling "Globe" flour would not have put it in stock even if they were receiving a fair profit on the older brands.

Dwight's "Cow Brand" of soda and saluratus was protected in New York by the manufacturer. They had made their goods popular by large advertising. Then other manufacturers came in and offered the trade cheaper brands that could be sold at less money. The Dwight people then put on a scheme by which they paid a special rebate of one-half cent a pound to retail dealers who maintained a certain price on "Cow Brand." A similar contract was made with wholesalers.

These contracts were a source of great profit to the dealers and practically forced the cheaper goods off the market and thus repaid the Dwight concern.

The Miles Contract.

The Miles Medical Company spends about $100,000 a year in safeguarding the retail price of its goods. They make the wholesale grocer agree not to sell the Miles remedies to any firm not recognized as "agents" by their company.

To be made an agent a dealer must sign an agreement not to cut prices with a promise to forfeit $48 in case the agreement is violated.

Every case of the Miles remedies is numbered. Every package bears in a dozen places the same number as the case. Each jobber receives a card bearing the number of the cases sold him, and he is required to keep a record of the firm to which each case went. In this way the manufacturer can trace good that are being sold at cut rates and trace the guilty parties if the cutter is using outside help to get his goods.

This method of direct sales and serial numbering has been recently adopted by the Peruna Company and Wells-Richardson Company.

There is another group of firms selling patent medicines that number the labels and packages. They do not have the wholesalers keep track of where the various numbers go, but they limit sales to firms that have signed contracts to maintain prices. There is a forfeit of $48 in these contracts also.

Druggists Give Rebates.

Six of the local manufacturers of drug specialties have a rebate system that has helped maintain the price on their specialties. They bill the goods to the wholsale druggist at their full retail price. The druggist gets his percentage off this figure. The wholesaler is bound by contract to sell the good to the retailer at the full long price; thus the retailer pays $3 per dozen that he sells at 25 cents a package.

Each package has fastened to it a rebate cupon which represents the retailer's profit. It varies from 8 cents on a 25 cent article to 17 cents on a 50 cent preparation. The rebate coupons are numbered serially and the number of each coupon corresponds with the number on the label of the bottle to which it was attached.

The dealer gets his coupons cashed in 60 days if the bureau has not had proof of his cutting. But the coupons bearing the same numbers as bottles that have been sold at cut rates are not honored and the cutter pays damages of $48 to boot in accordance with the terms of his contract.

Southern California Methods.

In Southern California the retailers pay a profit. They notified decided not to sell goods that did not pay a profit. They notified the manufacturers of their intention. Over 50 manufacturers wrote them letters agreeing to refuse to sell their goods direct to cutters and promising to require jobbers to refuse to sell to cutters.

There have only been a few instances where the manufacturer had to demand of the jobber that he refuse to supply the cutter. The agreement has always been respected since the wholesaler but would insist upon selling a certain line of goods to a cutter, after being notified, would have lost too much trade to pay him for the business of a dozen cutters.

Whether It Pays.

Some manufacturers say: "If my goods must be sold at 10 cents, the dealer will push a similar 3 for 25 cent article because it will sell enough easier to make him feel that the smaller profit is more than counterbalanced."

While this will be true of a few dealers, it is not true of a great majority of them.

The only thing that they MUST KNOW is that NOBODY can cut below the fixed selling price without being punished. If the are absolutely certain of this, they are pleased to maintain a price since they are sure that any cutting will only be temporary and that the cutter will be brought into line in a little while.

One big retailer said to a certain soap manufacturer: "If you will agree to maintain a fixed selling price, I will buy a car. But I will not put a 10-cent piece in your goods if later I may have to sell them without a profit to meet competition."

The goods were Miller's Soap made with Naptha. The manufacturer agreed to so that the price was maintained and these goods are displacing Fels Naptha soap rapidly in Southern California.

DIRECT IMPORTERS.

The largest direct importers of European cheese, fish and other delicacies in this market is the firm of Wieland Bros.

They have been serving the trade of San Francisco since 1860, when the firm was first formed by John and Fred Wieland. As California filled up and its cities grew, the demand for delicacies increased to such an extent that Wieland Bros. felt authorized in making connections that would enable them to import their goods direct. The fame of the quality of the goods they had to offer and the fact that they were noted for giving honest weight, honest count and honest quality, built up their trade to an enormous extent.

The officers of the corporation are: President, Chas. Schulz; vice-president, Emil J. Wieland, and secretary, Alfred Wieland.

Legality of Maintaining Prices

The quotation from Judge Parker's decision in the Park case, given in another column, expresses the consensus of opinion of the highest legal authorities of the land as to the right of the manufacturer to protect the integrity of his trademarks and his business against the assaults of rivals who would like to destroy his trade and of cutters who would like to advertise themselves at his expense by offering his goods at a price below the value that consumers have been brought to recognize by much expensive advertising.

We give, in another column, a review of the methods now in use by manufacturers to prevent cutting on their goods by wholesalers and retailers.

In this article we propose to show how far the laws of the United States protect them in their attempts to protect their property.

Scope of the Anti-Trust Law.

The Sherman anti-trust law includes within its terms any combination or contract which in any way may have a direct and immediate tendency to restrain trade, restrict competition or form a monopoly no matter how reasonable such contracts, combinations or restrictions may be.

It is to be noted that this relates ONLY to contracts whose tendency is directly and immediately to restrain trade. It does NOT relate to contracts which are otherwise legal and only restrain trade incidentally.

Not all contracts that restrict trade are affected by the Sherman anti-trust law. It refers only to those which restrict trade between States or foreign nations. Of this class only those that directly and immediately affect such restriction are forbidden.

Individuals Can Fix Prices.

Numerous decisions unite in agreeing that an individual, person or corporation can raise or lower his price at his pleasure. He may charge one customer more than the other. He can give his goods to one man for nothing and can charge another the full market price. He can even restrain trade or commerce with regard to his own product, acting as an individual.

The Sherman anti-trust law makes it illegal for two or more to combine to do such a thing. It provides as follows:

"Every contract or combination, in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States or with foreign nations is hereby declared to be illegal."

United States Supreme Court Ruling.

The United States Supreme Court states, in the case of Addyston Pipe and Steel Company vs. U. S., 175 U. S. 29, that Congress has power to prohibit contracts "which directly and substantially and not merely indirectly, remotely, incidentally or collaterally regulate to a greater or less degree commerce among the States."

In the same opinion it is stated:

"Where the contract affects interstate commerce only incidentally and not directly, the fact that it was not designed to effect such commerce is simply an additional reason for holding the contracts valid and not affected by the act of Congress."

Right of the Individual.

A single individual or corporation cannot sell any article without first fixing its price. When it fixes the price of the article it does not enter into a conspiracy of any kind, for one cannot enter into a conspiracy with one's self.

Numerous decisions in regard to these facts have been recorded by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in New York, also the Court of Appeals, which is the highest court of that state, and one which stands only second to the Supreme Court of the United States. These decisions are of special value, since the New York anti-trust law is modeled upon the Sherman law, and is just as comprehensive, since it relates to "every contract or combination in the form of trust or otherwise."

"The manufacturer may name the price which the consumer shall pay for his article * * * which means that he can both make the price and enforce it by contract."

—Hon. Alton B. Parker, Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals of New York, in his decision in the case of John D. Park & Sons Co. v. National Wholesale Druggists' Association, 54 App. Div.

In the case of Walsh vs. Dwight et al., five Judges of the Appellate Division of the New York Supreme Court were unanimous in the decision which held that it was legal for a manufacturer to have an agreement with his customers to give them a rebate if they should refuse to sell his article or other similar articles at less than a certain price. They held that such a contract was perfectly allowable under the provisions of the New York anti-trust law, which makes illegal "every contract or combination in the form of trust or otherwise whereby competition or the supply may be restrained or prevented for the purpose of advancing price."

Dwight Protects "Cow Brand."

This case is of special interest to the retail grocery trade, since it turned upon the right of the manufacturer to restrain the price of Dwight's "Cow Brand" saleratus and soda. Walsh, the plaintiff, had been supplying a similar article to the trade at a considerably lower price than that charged by the Dwight concern. The Dwight Company then made contracts with a large number of jobbers and dealers whereby they agreed to pay a rebate quarterly of one-half a cent per pound on all purchases of their "Cow Brand" saleratus and soda in consideration of these various parties agreeing not to sell it at less than certain prices fixed by them.

The Walsh people complained that the prices fixed by the Dwight concern were exhorbitant and fictitious. They also stated that the contracts so prevented competition that their business was utterly destroyed and that they were prevented from competing.

In the course of the opinion the court says:

"Nothing in the contract prevented the jobbers and retail dealers from purchasing and selling the goods of others than the defendants. The defendant simply offered the parties purchasing their goods to make a reduction in the price of the goods sold, in consideration of the purchaser agreeing not to sell the goods at a less price than that made by them, and not to sell the goods to other manufacturers at a less price than that which they agreed to sell the defendant's goods. It is difficult to see upon what ground it can be claimed such contract is illegal.

Can Maintain Retail Prices.

"That the defendants have the right to establish agencies for the sale of their goods and to employ others to sell them at such prices as they may designate cannot be disputed. Nor can it be disputed that the manufacturer of merchandise has the right to sell to others on conidtions that the vendees in selling at retail should charge a specified price for the goods sold.

"If a dealer in goods of this kind, for his own advantage, agrees to confine his business to a certain line of goods, and agrees, with the manufacturer, to charge a particular price for the articles which he sells in his business, such an agreement is not illegal, since there is nothing in the agreement to prevent others from negotiating with the manufacturers of other articles and selling their products to anyone who is willing to buy.

"There is no law to prevent an individual from selling any property that he has at any price which he can get for it. Nor is there any reason why an individual should not agree that he will not sell property, which he owns at the time of making the agreement or which he thereafter acquires, at less than a fixed price."

Further on in this opinion the court says:

"The act makes illegal a contract or combination whereby competition in the State of New York on the supply or price of any article or commodity of common use may be restrained or prevented for the purpose of advancing the price. This act did not have the effect of preventing a manufacturer from fixing a price at which his articles should be sold or from making an agreement with those parties who acted as jobbers or retail dealers of his manufactured articles, that they would deal exclusively in his merchandise and would not sell similar merchandise of other brands at less price than that for which his product was sold.

Combine of Manufacturers Illegal.

"The act was evidently intended to prevent manufacturers or dealers in any commodity or article of common use from combining together to advance the price of such article or commodity, by which combination the supply or price of the same would be restricted or regulated. But a contract by a single manufacturer as to the price at which his goods, when manufactured, should be sold by those selected by him for the purpose of sale or distribution, would not be a contract by which competition in the supply or price of the commodity would be restrained or prevented.

"All of the manufacturers of similar articles could combine with these defendants in the sale of their goods, or the making of a contract such as was made by the defendants. The contract in question simply gave to such of their customers as choose to make the agreement with them, an advantage as to the price for which the goods were purchased, in which those who refused to come to such an understanding had no share.

A High English Authority.

"That such an agreement is not illegal has been cited by a long line of authorities. The principle upon which these decisions are based is stated by Lord Coleridge in the case of Steamship Company vs. McGregor, 21 Q. B. Div. 544.

"The defendants have a right to endeavor, by lawful means, to keep their trade in their own hands, and by the same means to exclude others from this benefit if they can. Among lawful means is certainly included profitable offers to induce customers to deal with them exclusively by giving them the advantage of profitable offers."

An interesting case bearing upon the subject under consideration came up in Kentucky when a certain wholesale grocer sought to punish the Wholesale Grocers' Association of that State, charging them with a conspiracy against him and the State.

In Kentucky's Highest Court.

The Kentucky anti-trust law provides as follows:

" * * * If any corporation or any partnership, company, firm or individual or other association of persons shall agree * * * etc., in a pool, trust, combination, confederation or understanding with any other corporation * * * etc., for the purpose of regulating or controlling or fixing the price of any merchandise, articles or property of any kind, or shall enter into any pool * * * etc., having for its object the fixing or in any way limiting the amount of any article or property, commodity or merchandise to be produced or manufactured, mined, bought, or sold, shall be deemed guilty of the crime of conspiracy and punished therefor as provided in the subsequent sections of this act."

The Court of Appeals of Kentucky, the highest court of that State, in a decision rendered June 7th, 1901, in the case of Commonwealth vs. Grinstead et al., 63 W Rep 427, upheld the constitutionality and validity of this anti-trust law. It also upheld the right of the manufacturer to form agreements with dealers to maintain selling prices of their products.

Wholesale Grocers' Agreement Upheld.

In this decision the court stated:

"It appears that certain brands of various kinds of groceries of established reputation are protected by the manufacturers or the owners of the brands by a refusal to sell these goods to anyone who will not agree to refrain from selling them upon a minimum price fixed, from time to time, by the manufacturer or owner of the product.

"There does not appear, from the testimony in this case, to be any obligation on the part of any member of the association to the other members to fix, control, or regulate the price of any goods. Their agreement is to maintain the prices on which, in the language of the trade, are called "contract goods" or goods upon which the manufacturer puts a fixed selling price.

"The manufacturer alone regulates and controls the minimum price at which the jobber may sell all these goods, and this has been done by requiring the customer to agree not to resell the goods at a price less than that fixed.

"All that is necessary to decide here, is that such an agreement with the manufacturer is not within the purview of the statute.

"It is not an error, therefore, for the Circuit Court to direct the jury to find the defendants not guilty and the judgment is affirmed."

Wholesale Druggists Sustained.

Certain manufacturers of proprietary articles contracted with the National Wholesale Druggists' Association to allow a 10 per cent discount to wholesale dealers who would agree not to sell to retail dealers at less than the list price of the manufacturer. They also agreed not to sell to any wholesale dealer who refused to accept the agreement.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of New York, by the unanimous decisions of five judges, held in the case of John D. Park & Sons Company vs. National Wholesale Druggists' Association, 54 App. Div. 223, that the act of these manufacturers was not illegal, as there was no restraint of trade since every manufacturer had the right to sell his goods for such price and to whom he pleased and each manufacturer, having himself fixed the price of his individual goods and the terms of sale, their combination to enforce their contracts was not illegal.

Referring to the contracts, the court says.

"It cannot be denied that each manufacturer has the right to sell to anyone he sees fit. He has the right to fix any price he chooses. He also has the right to select his own customers.

"He may agree to dispose of all his goods to one person, or he may be willing to supply the whole trade except one person, and whatever he chooses to do is a matter with which the law has no concern because the goods are his, to be kept or sold as he pleases. He has the right not only to fix his own price, but also to impose such terms as he sees fit to accept from his customers. These matters are absolutely within his own control.

Combine To Enforce Contracts.

"If they see fit, several manufacturers may agree together to enforce conditions which each one seeks to impose upon those selling the article which he makes. The action of each manufacturer in fixing a price and imposing conditions of sale is undoubtedly legal.

"Having fixed the price and the terms of sale, they may combine for the purpose of enforcing their contracts, as the end to be accomplished is legal and they do not propose to take any step in carrying it into effect which each may not properly take if he was working for himself. Therefore, no right of action can arise to anyone as a result of their combination.

"That manufacturers have this right is a necessary deduction from the cases in support of which the following may be cited. Walsh vs. Dwight, 40 App. Div. 513-58, N. Y. The position taken by the Park Company was that the manufacturers would not have made the agreements of their own accord, but had been forced to make them by the Wholesale Druggists' Association. This, they held constituted a conspiracy.

The court ruled that the defendants had not done anything which they did not have a right to do.

Can Demand Protection.

In this connection it stated:

"There is no suggestion in the complaint that the manufacturers, having been compelled to take these steps, are not willing to continue this mode of transacting business. They certainly have no complaint at all, so far as it appears, and if they do not complain of it, and are doing only a thing which the law permits them to do, it is difficult to see why a third party, who has no grievance except that he is unwilling to buy goods on their terms, should be permitted to come in and interfere with them."

The Park case was taken to the Court of Appeals. The decision of that court, which is the court of last resort in New York State, was rendered on April 3rd, 1903.

Justice Haight supported very forcefully the opinion taken by the lower court. Four of the Justices of the Court, including Chief Justice Parker, concurred. Three of the Justices dissented. Justice Martin, who dissented, explained in his opinion that he was prompted by the fact that compulsion had been forced on the manufacturers by the wholesalers. He reaffirmed the right of the manufacturer to sell goods to whom he liked. What he objected to was common action on the part of the wholesale druggists to coerce manufacturers into refusing to sell to druggists who were not in accord with their association.

Right of Self-Protection.

Justice Haight in his decision on the Park case said:

"This method, as I understand it, is not confined to the sale of medicines, but has been adopted by many manufacturers who have established a trademark and have gained a reputation which they wish to maintain throughout the country for character, quality and durability of the goods which they manufacture. They have consequently established prices at which their goods shall be sold to the consumer and direct the wholesaler and retail dealer to supply the consumer at the price list issued."

He showed that the contracts allowed every dealer who would comply with the terms of the association the right to purchase goods. He then stated his opinion as to the right of the druggists to ask the manufacturer to make such agreement in the following language:

"They undoubtedly have the right of petitioning the manufacturer to adopt the plan advised by them and to support their petition with all of the arguments and persuasions that they could bring to bear so long as they did not resort to threats or intimidations."

Referring to the position of the retailer he says:

Is Not a Conspiracy.

"Nor does the plan appear to be a conspiracy in restraint of trade.

"It is true that it does away with competition among dealers as to prices, but it creates no restriction upon them as to the quantities they may be able to sell or the territory within which they shall confine their transactions. Upon the question of prices, we must bear in mind that the goods are covered by copyrights and trademarks which give the proprietors the exclusive right to specify prices at which the article shall be sold, and following this right, also to require dealers to maintain the price specified. It is, in effect, a creating of agencies on the part of the manufacturer by which every druggist throughout the United States may receive the goods and dispose of them as agents of the principal, receiving the commission accruing therefrom. In other words, the manufacturer says to the jobbers of the country:

The Manufacturer's Position.

"I manufacture a medicine that I will sell for $1 per bottle. It is my desire that it shall be sold at that price per bottle throughout the country. If you will take a consignment of this medicine and it is sold by you at that price per bottle, I will allow you a rebate of 10 per cent. and if I find that you are selling at a lower price than billed to you, I will allow no rebate. If this arrangement is not satisfactory to you I prefer to keep my manufactured stock on hand. These are the only conditions on which I will ship my manufactured article.

"Surely there is nothing in this approaching restraint of trade of the violation of the principal of public policy It is simply allowing a man to do what he will with his own."

In further exemplification of his idea of the situation, the learned jurist states:

"The right would certainly not be denied to the manufacturer of a given article to adopt the rule that he would only sell it to the jobbers of the country at the certain long prices and would not allow a discount where they refuse to maintain his price"

Chief Justice Parker Concurs.

Chief Justice Parker concurred in the opinion of Judge Haight.

He called attention to the fact that the dealers did not attempt to fix the price which the manufacturer should demand for his goods. The retail price could be advanced or lowered by the manufacturer at his pleasure. He then stated definitely, citing a number of cases to support his opinion, that "the manufacturer may name the price which the consumer shall pay for his article * * * which means that he can both make the price and enforce it by contract."

In speaking of the desirability of the manufacturer protecting the wholesale and retail price of his goods, Chief Justice Parker stated: "The wholesale dealers have been taught by experience two things: First, that manufacturers, in many instances have favorites to whom they give a larger rebate than to wholesale dealers as a class; second, there are wholesale dealers who, for the purpose of getting customers away from their competitors, will give them some part of such extra rebate.

"The leading object of the association was to remedy this difficulty, and it was sought to accomplish it by placing all the wholesalers upon an equality so that one should have no advantage over the other in dealing with the retail dealers—a result which seems altogether desirable, because it is in the line of fair dealing. Indeed, the principle which they undertake to establish in these cases by contract, is like that which the Sherman act attempts in part to secure; namely, equal freight rates on all inter-state commerce shipments from common carriers.

"Assuming, as we must, that this legislation was along proper lines for the purpose of protecting the principle of competition at the point where it seemed to be open to attack, it necessarily follows that it is not in conflict with public policy that these wholesale dealers may attempt to secure to themselves, by contract, like fair dealing on the part of the manufacturers, namely, that the rebate from the latter's 'long prices,' which the manufacturer allows as compensation to the wholesaler for distributing the goods to the retailer shall be alike to all of them."

Right To Demand Profits.

In another part of his opinion Chief Justice Parker says:

"The wholesale dealers had the right to contract to secure such amount of rebate from the manufacturers as would reasonably compensate them for their services in distributing, together with the money invested. Even if the rate of compensation agreed upon was unfair, it is difficult to see who could make complaint except the manufacturers themselves. And they do not.

"It was clearly legal for any one of the wholesale dealers to sign the agreement to bind himself to sell at such prices as the manufacturer of the article should see fit to name as the selling price. The right to fix the price belonging to the manufacturer, it was proper for the wholesaler to agree to recognize that right and govern himself accordingly. He had the right to insist that, in consideration of his performing those conditions in accordance with the wishes of the manufacturer, the latter should not give to other dealers the rebate provided for members of the association, unless such dealer should agree to be bound by the same conditions the members of the association themselves and he had a right to agree that, in order to secure the rebate carrying out of the agreement according to the spirit thereof, he would furnish to the manufacturer such evidence as he might secure from time to time, tending to show that members of the association were directly or indirectly violating its rules; and that which he could do alone, he and they could do as members of the association provided, of course, their coming together did not operate against the rights of the general public, but as against other selling agents like themselves."

Miles Remedy Cases.

Six decisions have been received by the Dr. Miles Medical Company establishing its right to demand of retail dealers that they shall not sell their goods below a certain fixed price on penalty of a forfeit of $48 damages for each offense. Also that a retail dealer who mutilates the trade mark on the label in order to destroy identifying members and thus escape penalties exposes himself to punishment by so doing.

Sixth case—Miles vs. Goldwaite, Brockton, Mass. The defendant had not signed the contract and made a practice of obtaining Miles' goods in roundabout ways, also mutilating the packages by erasure of the identifying numbers, and even transferring goods to other packages to conceal his source of supply.

Judge Colt in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Massachusetts, in May, 1904, issued a preliminary injunction restraining the defendant from such actions as tending to nullify the contract system under which Miles' goods are distributed. A perpetual injunction was granted in September, 1904, carrying nominal damages and costs.

We quote from the injunction issued by Judge Colt as follows.

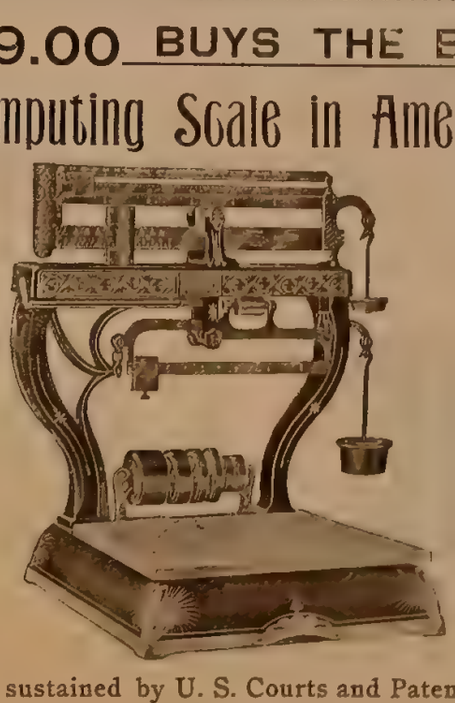
"It is ordered, adjudged and decreed that the defendant, his agents, servants, employes, attorneys and associates be, and they hereby are perpetually enjoined and restrained from procuring in any way any of complainant's remedies, medicines and cures from any wholesale or retail dealer who has executed the said contracts with complainant in violation of same, and from in any way transferring for sale the contents of any of the packages containing the medicines, remedies and cures of complainant to other packages, and from in any way defacing, mutilating or changing any of the package containing any of the complainant's remedies, medicines and cures."

When Contracts are Illegal.

There are numerous cases where contracts regulating prices have been held to be illegal.

It will be found in every instance that in these cases there have been combinations between the parties providing for the direct and immediate restraint of trade by raising prices, preventing competition and attempting to create monopolies.

In all instances where the manufacturer fixes the price and the parties with whom the manufacturer makes his agreement are merely agents, selling at the price which he demands of them, the agreements have been upheld as proper and legal.



Manufacturers can impose the conditions on the purchaser of his product that he shall sell for a certain price, and can agree with him that, if he will faithfully carry out that agreement he will be rewarded with a rebate of profit. If the purchaser fails to live up to the agreement, the manufacturer has the right to withdraw the rebate or discount or may refuse to sell him at all.

Such a contract is not illegal to a combination of these parties, because the price is not fixed by the combination. Prices are fixed by one who has a good and legal right to fix them; namely, the manufacturers.

When the purchaser buys goods and pays for them, he can sell them for any price he chooses. But if, by so doing, he breaks his contract with the manufacturer, the latter may enforce the penalties named in his contract.

Laws Grocers Want.

A Review of the Measures That Will Be Asked for at the Coming Legislature.

No law is required to get an honest man to pay his bills.

He pays his bills anyhow. If he does not it is because he is absolutely unable to do so, and therefore no law could get the money out of him.

Our laws, therefore should be framed to control dishonest men who, having no honor or conscience to deter them, will rob the merchant if they get a chance.

Odd as it may seem, the laws of California regarding collections all tend to assist the dishonest debtor to avoid paying for goods that he had to have to preserve life for himself and family.

This is a great wrong. The California Retail Grocers and Merchants' Association, with its many affiliated associations, hopes and expects to see this all changed.

The grocer and the butcher cannot afford to ask for a law that will put the poor but honest man at a disadvantage. Any law that would tend to interfere with the freedom of the honest working man would result disastrously to the dealers who would be called on to provide food for that man's family.

But they need protection from thieves.

We look to the Legislature of 1905 for relief.

The Wife's Responsibility.

1. A law to make separate property of the wife responsible with that of the husband for bills for the necessaries of life contracted while the two were living together.

Today the husband can transfer all his property to his wife and then the wife will not be required to pay for the food she and her babies have eaten, nor the clothes that have kept them warm. Many a man without other source of income than his labor, when taken sick, has been given credit by the grocer and butcher for food for his family though he had not the cash at hand to pay. Many grocers and butchers have been robbed of their payment because, when the man died, the widow can (and usually does) claim that she does not have to pay for what was furnished her husband, though she knows her husband was too sick to use what was provided, that she had to have the goods, that she had no money to pay for them and that a part of the insurance on her husband's life rightfully belongs to these creditors.

Fraudulent Wage Assignments.

2. A law to prevent the fraudulent assignment of wages.

Often, when a man's wages have been garnisheed he will produce an assignment that, on its face, shows that he had transferred his wages to some third party some time before. It is usually the case that the assignment was fraudulent and was made after the garnishment proceedings were begun, but antedated.

It is almost impossible to prove this, however, and as a consequence dishonest men often evade the payment of their just debts by this means. A law that would require the recording of an assignment before garnishment proceedings should have been begun would make this fraud impossible. At the same time, a clause providing that there should be no expense attached to recording such an assignment, would prevent the possibility of working a hardship on a poor man.

To Ward off Money Lenders.

3. To require that an assignment of wages by a public official shall date from the time of its presentation to the auditor.

The money sharks conspire with their victims in public office, to falsely date assignments of wages in order to give them precedence over claims for the necessaries of life. This law would prevent this.

Extending Life of Accounts.

4. A law to extend the time for the collection of accounts under the statute of limitations to the average length of time prescribed in the other States.

A bill for the necessaries of life should never outlaw. It is preposterous to allow it to outlaw in twenty-four months. No good cause is subserved thereby. Much evil is wrought. It helps dishonest men cheat compassionate creditors. The bill for necessaries of life comes under a different heading from any other and this fact should be borne in mind in treating of exemptions. A term of four years is none too small for a bill of groceries or meat to live before the statute of limitations can be pleaded.

Pure Food Commission.

5. An amendment to the present pure food law providing for a commission to guarantee the uniform enforcement of the present requirements.

Our present pure food law has worked injustice in many instances where it has been enforced. The pure food law could be rigidly enforced to the advantage of consumer, dealer and manufacturer alike, if it were enforced the same and with the same degree of care in all districts.

Every thinking, honest grocer would like to see the pure food law properly enforced. It would protect California industries in a thousand ways. It would protect the honest dealer from having to meet the competition of the dishonest "cheap John" who sells rotten "slop" goods. The California Retail Grocers and Merchants' Association is asking for the establishment of machinery to enforce the present pure food law so that no injustice will be done the dealer thereby.

The position taken by enemies of the pure food law is that if it were enforced it would have bad results for the retailer. This is true only when the law is not enforced systematically.

Mutual Fire Insurance.

6. A law to alow the formation of mutual fire insurance companies along the same lines as have met success in other States.

California is the richest plum for the insurance companies of all the States of the Union. In a dozen Eastern States the retail merchants have saved from 25 to 50 per cent of the cost of their insurance by co-operation. In every instance the mutual fire insurance companies have been prompter in meeting their obligations than the stock companies. This is due, to a certain extent, to the fact that mutual insurance companies will not write questionable risks, which are accepted by the stock companies.

In Oregon the Mutual Fire Assurance Association is the largest fire insurance company in the State. It has been in operation eleven years. It has saved its members over seventy (70) per cent. Its soundness can be realized from the fact that it has over $15,000,000 of insurance written, which is more than one-seventh of all the insurance carried in the State of Oregon by some fifty-six companies.

In California the insurance trust, by the liberal expenditure of money, has been able to have passed a law expressly forbidding the retail merchants of the State from forming mutual fire insurance companies.

If the merchants of Oregon can save 70 per cent on their insurance, those of California should be able to save at least as much, since we have no losses by lightning in this State and our equable climate materially lessens the possibilities of a loss through defective flues, etc., since fires are burned only through a few months of the year and then for only a few hours in the day.

Frauds in Measure.

7. To prevent the sale of short short weight and short measure goods.

The public is robbed and the honest retailer put at a disadvantage when the tricky dealer is able to sell pounds that weigh only fourteen ounces, and gallons that contain only three quarts, etc. Manufacturers, too, should be required to print the net weight of contents on packages.

The Trading Stamp Evil.

8. To curb the trading stamp graft.

Merchants in nearly every State in the Union are struggling against the trading stamp. It is hoped that some constitutional measure can be found by which this pest can be restrained.

HAS WON HIGH PLACE.

Quality Backed by Salesmanship Makes "Carnation Cream" a Big Success.

The marvelous growth of the demand for "Carnation" Cream has been a source of wonder to all who have seen by what slow steps other goods of as high a degree of relative merit have had to climb.

"Carnation" Cream is manufactured by the Pacific Coast Condensed Milk Company.

In all territory where this cream has been introduced, its sales for 1904 have advanced more than 100 per cent over the sales for the preceding twelve months.

This fact alone marks its remarkable excellence.

The generous advertising of the Pacific Coast Condensed Milk Company could only induce the consumer to purchase the first tin. It has been the excellence of the goods themselves that have resulted in the enormous repeat orders that have secured this wonderful result.

The Pacific Coast Condensed Milk Company has many advantages over its Eastern competitors. The cows of the Pacific Coast are not subjected to the extreme changes of climate that not only affect the quantity of milk they give, but also the quality. The fact that the cows are able to graze all the year around in the open air upon fresh grass, also guarantees a large and constant supply of fresh milk, the quantity of which insures a uniformly moderate price for the manufactured article.

The Pacific Coast Condensed Milk Company is opening up new territory constantly on the Pacific Coast.

It was only about a year ago that they were able to spare the goods to enter the markets of Southern California. It has been a splendid success in that market.

The Spohn-Patrick Company are the sales agents for "Carnation" Cream in California, Nevada, Utah, Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico and Arizona.

THE EPICURE MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

The Epicure Cheese and Manufacturing Company of Los Angeles has recently opened a branch at 216 Davis street in this city. William A. Wing and William Mathison are the proprietors of the San Francisco store. The same company also operate branches at Seattle and Portland, and have a wide reputation from Mexico to the British Columbia line for their products, which consists of "Crown brand" cheese, Sardelle's anchivois, caviar and other table delicacies. Their goods are of a high grade and choice pack, and are meeting with gratifying reception on part of dealers in this and surrounding cities and towns. Their epicure cheese "Crown brand" is packed in white glass jars, and as to quality compared with any other made they invite comparison. It is upon the high merit of their goods and the admirable manner in which they pack their products, that has gained them their present large business. Messrs. Wing and Mathison expect within a few days to secure a location where all of their local packing may be conducted and the store at 216 Davis will be devoted entirely to shipping and supplying the local dealers in San Francisco. Our price list will carry their goods for the use of the trade and their advertisement appears therein.

HAS DESERVED SUCCESS.

Wholesale Grocery House That Has Faithfully Served the Retail Trade of the Pacific Coast.

William Cluff Company first opened its stores at 18-20 Front street, as wholesale grocers about twenty years ago.

Then, as now, Wm. Cluff was at the head of the firm and directed its policy.

An experience of ten years as a retail grocer had informed Mr. Cluff of what the retail trade needed. He made use of this knowledge to anticipate his customer's wants.

His efforts in this behalf and the value of his business training was shown by the immediate popularity of his firm. It was only three years after it was started that the business had increased so largely as to render an addition to his store necessary, and in 1888 the store at 13-15 Pine street, situated immediately in the rear of his original establishment, was leased.

There have been two underlying principles that have accounted for the success of the Wm. Cluff Co.

The first is that, by straight dealing with the retail trade, by always striving to be absolutely fair, the customers of the house were made to feel that they could depend upon receiving what they paid for and that if there was any difference, it was unintentional and would be promptly rectified.

The second was to the active co-operation of the managers of the various departments.

Whenever an employee had proven his faithfulness and his ability, an opportunity was given him to acquire an interest in the firm. In consequence, the head of every department is a stockholder in the Wm. Cluff Co. and shares with the head of the house in the profits of the firm and also in the responsibility for the success that it wins.

With 1901 again came the need for larger quarters. These were acquired in the store at Market and Main streets, a picture of which is given on another page.

This building was specially rearranged so that local dealers could get their goods with the greatest possible expedition. The space for the turning out of orders was made very large and an additional staff of city men were put on, so that orders could be filled with the least possible friction and delay.

The wisdom of these preparations has been made apparent by the vast increase of business since April 1st, when the firm went into its new quarters. As a matter of fact, this has been even greater than was anticipated, for the retail trade has approved of the business methods of the Wm. Cluff Co. and their quick dispatch of shipments.

California Retail Grocers and Merchants ASSOCIATION.

Accomplishments and Expectations of the Organizations of the Golden State.

The retail grocers owe much to the handful of men who came together in November, 1900, and organized the California Retail Grocers and Merchants' Association.

There had never been a State organization of retail grocers in California up to that time. There were very few associations of grocers in this State. None of these had made any attempt to secure the co-operation of the others.

Much work has been done and much good has been accomplished since the initial conference of delegates from the different associations.

The initial work of the organization had to be experimental as a matter of course. The association managers knew that they had to have more associations in order to make the organization effective. The problem of how the formation of the new organizations was to be secured was a difficult one to solve, since the newly born State Association had no money with which to take up the work of organization.

From the very beginning the association has been under heavy obligations to the Retail Grocers' Advocate and its editor, Mr. A. H. Powers. The work that had to be done they did for us gladly and without any expenses to us. As a matter of fact, our organization would not have been possible without the full measure of publicity which the Advocate accorded us and which helped not only to interest retail merchants in other communities in what we were doing, but by enabling the various secretaries to exchange ideas, helped the grocers of different communities to realize the full possibilities for themselves in associated effort.

First Essential For Success.

The writer of this has only served as secretary to the State Association since the fifth annual convention held in San Jose last August. Prior to that time his knowledge of what could be accomplished through organization was largely hearsay. In the last few months he has learned that success in organization depends upon the constant effort of some clever man who is willing to devote a large measure of his time to acting as adviser for the board of directors of the organization. This executive officer must be prepared not only to submit practical ideas to the board of directors, but he must be able to execute such of those ideas as the directors decide it wise to take up.

He must be a man of much originality, great enthusiasm and unflinching courage.

For two years the board of directors had the service of such a man in Ludwig Warnke of Alameda, who acted as secretary of the State Association practically without remuneration since, he charged for his services only during five months of the two years, and then the cost to the association was only $75 per month, most of which sum Mr. Warnke expended in paying an extra clerk for his store.

Praise For Mr. Paulding.

During the past three months splendid service has been given the State Association by J. F. Paulding. He has worked for us without pay. The writer has given as much of his time as he possibly could to the work, but the great mass of details make it impossible for any retail grocer to attend to the work as it should be without neglecting his own business.

President C. B. PEARSON, Stockton.

Our State Association has been progressing slowly, but steadily ever since it was organized.

Laws Secured By Co-operation.

We have enabled the various associations in different parts of the State to work together on mattetrs of common interest.

The best example of the influence and power derived through these organizations of the grocers was given when our organization secured the passage of three bills before the Legislature in 1903.

We expect to duplicate these successes at the season of the Legislature that convenes at Sacramento this year.

The laws we expect to ask for are explained in full on another page of this paper.

Value of Monthly Report.

During the past three months we have issued a report which tells of the work we had accomplished and what we had in view. This report also contained a list of the bills that have been submitted to our organization for collection.

This report has proven of value to our members by keeping them informed of the purposes of the association and also by the publicity given therein to parties who do not pay their bills.

Every member is entitled to send their bad bills to this office for collection.

A list of the bills sent to this office are printed in our Delinquent List. This list goes to grocers in every part of the State. This fact is one that the members are able to make use of in convincing the slow-pay debtor that it pays to settle accounts promptly. The very existence of such a list is also the means of making many collections, since there are few people who can pay their bills who would not make some arrangement for settlement rather than have their names appear in such lists.

Future of Delinquent List.

It is our purpose to extend this list as rapidly as possible.

We have printed in it the delinquent list of the San Luis Obispo Association. We have also printed in it the supplementary list of the Alameda County Association.

These associations are charged for the work of printing the list at the rate of $2 for each column.

Since each association receives, gratis, as many copies of the list as they have members for whom they pay dues to the State Association, and extra copies only cost them 5 cents each, it can be readily seen that the report offers them the cheapest possible mode of printing their list of delinquents. The fact that the list, when printed, is circulated all over the State of California also adds to its effectiveness.

We hope to have the associations all over the State take advantage of our report in printing their delinquent lists. This will make the list of extreme value to our members, since a great number of those whose names appear in the various lists would come under the head of "Movers," and are likely to appear at any time in some town hundreds of miles from the place in which the first bill was contracted.

Effective Collections Promised.

We are now in position to give our members splendid services in the collection of their accounts.

We have contracted with the firm of Hall, Schaertzer & Robertson to look after this end of the work. They are under $5000 bonds to pay promptly any moneys they may collect, and their work is done with a promptness and thoroughness that is very satisfying.

Commission is charged only on moneys collected. No collection no charge. None of this commission goes to the association. We act merely as a clearing-house, keeping record of the bills and following them up after they are placed in the hands of the collection agency.

Rates For Collections.

A commission of 20 per cent is charged on collections of more than $10 made without bringing suit. Where the account is less than $10, the commission is $2, unless that amount should be more than half the amount collected. For bills of less than $4 the commission is half the amount collected.

Where suit has to be brought, the commission is 25 per cent on collections made in San Francisco or Oakland, if the case does not go to trial. The minimum fee would be $5 unless the bill is for less than $10, when the fee would be half the amount collected. If the case goes to trial, the amount of commission will be agreed on before hand. When suit has to be brought in other cities than San Francisco and Oakland the fee will be 30 per cent.

Correcting Trade Abuses.

Another value of our organization to its members is the ability its gives them to correct trade abuses.

Should a wholesale dealer or manufacturer sell to the customer of one of our members, our organization is prepared to take the matter up with the offender. In the past, such complaints have always met with prompt redress, since no dealer of any consequence is willing to antagonize his customers among the retail grocers all over the State for the sake of a little extra profit he may get from the trade of one or two consumers.

Through the assistance and by the plans of J. F. Paulding, secretary of the Pacific Coast Retail Grocers' Association, we expect soon to be able to put it within the power of our members to protect themselves against unintelligent cutting of the leading staples.

Manufacturers Want To Help.

The manufacturer wants to co-operate with the retail grocers in selling his goods. He is willing to make any practical and feasible concession that may be necessary in order to secure their enthusiastic assistance.

By getting together, as they are enabled to do through their various associations, the grocers can make it profitable for many manufacturers to maintain the selling price of their goods. Where manufacturers do not protect the selling price of their goods and allows them to be sold for a price that does not give a profit, the grocers, by joint action, can encourage the demand for some other similar article that does pay a profit.

Only united action is effective in matters such as this. United action can only be secured through the intelligent direction of associations by some central body such as the board of directors of our State Grocers' Association.

Every Association Considered.

I would call attention to the fact that in addition to our regularly elected board of directors, the president of each affiliating association is, because of his office, a recognized member of the board of directors and has a voice in its action and is entitled to a vote at all meetings. This action was deemed wise by the managers of the association, as they wanted every affiliating association to feel that it had a voice in the direction of the State Association's affairs and could help shape its policy.

Dues Are Very Light.

In conclusion I wish to call attention to the fact that the dues of our organization are very light. Each affiliating association pays, once a year, a per capita tax of $1 per member.

In towns where they have no association, any grocer may become a member and secure all the benefits of membership in our State Association on the payment of $3 per year. This entitles him to copies of our monthly report and any other communications that may be sent out from this office at various times.

The amounts raised by dues are about sufficient to pay the ordinary running expenses of the association, for extraordinary expense such as legal advice on the drafting of bills, the sending of committees to the Legislature etc., we must depend upon contributions from various merchants interested. On another page we tell of what we have done in this regard in the past and what is being done now.

Future Looks Bright.

Our work is just commenced.

We are learning each year how best to do things and profiting by the experience of previous years.

I consider the State Association of enormous value to the grocers of California. I hope to see it double in strength before our next convention, which is to be held in the city of Stockton at some date that will be arranged by our board of directors in conjunction with the board of directors of the Stockton Association.

Should any grocer who reads this and is not a member of our association, desire to unite with us in our work, we would be pleased to have him communicate with us.

San Francisco Retail Grocers

Review of the Work Undertaken During the Year 1904.

President J. SALOMON.

Vice-President F. B. CONNOLLY.

In a bulletin issued to its members on December 17, 1904, the San Francisco Retail Grocers made the following report:

We take great pleasure in presenting to you a review of the past year of work by the San Francisco Retail Grocers.

After an existence of thirty-three years, the organization of the San Francisco Retail Grocers finds itself stronger than ever before. The members enjoy the friendship and respect of one another, as well as the entire wholesale grocery trade, without any exception.

The past year has been an exceedingly busy one.

Past President Corcoran and his Board of Directors worked untiringly, sacrificing their time for the good and welfare of the organization.

At the end of his term of office, last June, declining a re-election, it was the good fortune to secure for its President a man who brought with him experience of nine years' work as Director, Mr. J. Salomon.

Every movement and effort by the President to improve the condition of the grocery trade in this city has been ably seconded by the entire Board of Directors, consisting of F. B. Connolly, Vice-President; J. T. Hurley, William Ring, H. Methmann, J. M. Sullivan, J. P. McGuire, H. Wreden, G. B. Doyle, H Rawe, E Lackmann, and only under these favorable conditions of harmony among the gentlemen in whose care the welfare of this organization is placed can the efforts for success be crowned.

After Trading Stamps.

At the beginning of this year the grocery trade was thoroughly demoralized by the giving away of trading stamps, causing the grocers an expense of 5 per cent of their gross receipts.

Through the energetic action of all the members, this evil was nearly eradicated, and we have today the names of 1100 grocers who have signed a pledge not to use any trading stamps for a term of three years, beginning January, 1905.

This work alone has cost our association much money, but has saved the individual members many thousands of dollars each month. We are still giving financial aid to the Merchants' Association, and hope by January 1 every grocer will discard trading stamps.

The National Convention.

San Francisco was honored in having been selected by the National Convention to hold the seventh annual convention in this city. The preparation for this event required much time and outlay of money. All members worked faithfully to do honor to our guests, to reflect credit on San Francisco and the State. The convention met in this city in May. It is needless to say how well we succeeded. The press of the Eastern and Southern States, and even far-off Australia gave San Francisco and the State of California full credit for royally entertaining the delegates and visitors.

Pure Food Exposition.

The Board of Directors in January determined on holding a Pure Food and Industrial Exposition, April 30, to May 14, at the time when the National Convention would meet, in order to show to advantage our home products. This matter required a large expenditure of money, and the hearty co-operation of the manufacturers. The result was gratifying. The Mechanics' Pavilion was crowded and the displays were a credit to exhibitors. All wholesale merchants vied with each other in making as fine a display as possible, and no doubt good results were obtained.

Retailing by Wholesalers.

Charles F. Suss, chairman of the grievance committee, has received but few complaints in this line, and in every instance investigated the case personally and received promises of discontinuance in the future—promises which have been not only made, but kept.

Collection Bureau.

The collection of bills for members is the most important duty of the secretary. Director Henry Rawe, as chairman of this committee, gives much of his time to this branch. Good results have been obtained. On the advice of J. T. Hurley, chairman of the finance committee, and H. Rawe, the directors requested the secretary to furnish a delinquent list monthly to every member. The suggestion was wise; it keeps members posted, not only on delinquents, but on collections made for members, suits, suits instituted, etc.

Free Legal Advice.

For the past year Edward I. Coffey, Esq., has been the general attorney of this organization, while Howard K. James, Esq., has had charge of such legal matters as have been necessary in connection with the work of the collection department. Both these gentlemen have given the members advice free of charge.

The secretary has personally used the influence of this association for the good of many members by attending meetings of the Board of Police and Fire Commissioners, School Board, Police and Justice Courts. While no mention has ever been made of these facts, much good has been done the individual members, through the respect and good will in which this organization is held by the governing bodies of the city.

Work in the Near Future.

On the assembling of the coming Legislature the grocers of San Francisco, and of the entire State as well, are a unit in recommending the passage of the following laws:

1. To have the time in which an open book account outlaws extended from two years to four years.
2. To make the husband and wife mutually responsible for bills for the necessaries of life.
3. To curb the trading stamp graft.

We can rely on the solid support of the San Francisco Senators and Assemblymen in favor of such laws.

To Members.

If the showing of work done by our association appeals to you, help us by asking your neighbor to join. It costs you nothing. We ask you to read the resolution of John F. Schomer.

Resolution by John E. Schomer.

Resolved, By the San Francisco Retail Grocers, in general meeting assembled, that to increase the membership of our organization, be it

The San Francisco Retail Grocers Offers its members the following advantages:

J. Salomon, President.

A RECORD OF USEFULNESS.

Redwood City Shows Good Results for Work Done.

Redwood City, Jan. 3, 1905.

Editor Advocate—The Merchant's Board of Trade of Redwood City is fast approaching its third birthday and is growing lustily in usefulness. The members are a unit in declaring that it is the best movement ever started in Redwood City for the benefit of the merchants and are loyal in their support of those entrusted with the duty of running the board.

Its president, Mr. Henry Mourat, manager of the largest laundry between San Francisco and San Jose, and a former town trustee, is one of our most successful young men. The vim, energy and ability which have given him his start in life, have also been thrown into his work in the board, and have had much to do with its successful work.

Mr. P. P. Chamberlain, county treasurer, president of the San Mateo County Building and Loan Association, an official of the First National Bank of San Mateo County, and one of our leading merchants, is vice-president. Mr. Chamberlain is well known from San Francisco to Monterey, and his connection with any institution is a guarantee that it will be well managed financially, as he is a recognized authority in matters of finance. Mr. Chamberlain, in spite of his large interests, is a faithful officer of the board and always present at meetings.

The duties of secretary and attorney for the board are in the hands of T. H. Thorpe, one of the younger members of the bar, who has acted for the board since its organization.

In addition to the three gentlemen above named, Mr A. D. Walsh, one of our leading druggist, and Mr. Con. Cullen, manager of the Cullen Company, constitute the executive committee. This committee acts upon matters requiring prompt attention, and which do not need to be passed upon by the entire board.

Collects Slow Accounts.

The board has an effective collection bureau in operation by which accounts are collected for a nominal percentage, the board and collection bureau not being run as a money-making scheme, but as money-saving institutions for the merchants generally.

The executive committee now have under consideration plans for the establishment of credit ratings in the territory in which its members sell goods and hope soon to have it in use. To that end the board is now working in co-operation with the Palo Alto board and it is hoped in the near future to have all the territory between Mountain View and San Mateo so fully covered that all the merchants between those points will be fully protected.

The merchants of Redwood are not selfish about their board, but are extending a welcoming hand to the merchants of Menlo Park, a number of whom it is anticipated will come into the Redwood board.

As we come into the new year, we see and realize the usefulness of our board as never before, and with the plans contemplated fully matured the board will prove more and more beneficial to its members and the entire community.

As fast as the Pacific Coast Condensed Milk Co. enlarges their factories and increases the output of "Carnation" Cream, new territory is opened. What Is Being Done to Better Conditions in and About Los Angeles.

By W. R. Baxter, Secretary Retail Grocers' Ass'n of Los Angeles.

During the past year the Los Angeles Retail Grocers' Association has been absorbing the smaller associations so that nearly 200 of its members are among out of town merchants.

Its secretary, W. F. Baxter, has proven a worthy successor to Mr. J. F. Paulding. In the accompanying letter Mr. Baxter modestly omits crediting himself with the splendid work he has done. The Advocate is pleased to state that from many sources we learn that Mr. Baxter is giving the fullest satisfaction to the members and is doing fine work.

Mr. Baxter writes as follows:

Los Angeles, Dec. 20, 1904.

Editor Advocate—Since the grocers of Southern Califronia were brought together three years ago through the efforts of the State Association and its organizer, Mr. Powers, editor of the Advocate, much progress has been made. I think the grocers south of the Tehachapi Pass have accomplished greater results and achieved a greater solidity than even the warmest exponents of organization then dreamed was possible.

This has been due, largely, I think, to the interest taken by our members in the work and the intelligence with which they have grasped the possibilities for united action. I feel sure, too, that no one will dispute me when I say that our success is due still more to the untiring energy, the unselfish devotion and the splendid cleverness of our former secretary, J. F. Paulding, under whose guidance the grocers of Los Angeles and Southern California have been able, more than once, to wrest victory out of apparent defeat.

Has Grown Constantly.

The history of our Retail Grocers' Association has been one of steady, conservative progress.

The association has made mistakes. For a time it has suffered for these mistakes. But its members have had that attribute of success which looks upon mistakes and temporary failure as but the stepping stone which makes ultimate success more sure and more lasting.

It was only a few years ago that when two grocerymen met, it was the signal for hostility. Each merchant had his own ideas as to prices and methods. Each merchant looked to himself alone. He did not know his neighbor, and did not want to. He cut the price on a certain line of goods. His neighbor met the cut and went him one better. Then some one else started to cut on another line and the zone of price-cutting was spread to every part of the city and covered practically every commodity.

Paulding Starts the Work.

Disgusted with conditions and realizing that something had to be done, six merchants met on July 13, 1901, at the invitation of J. F. Paulding, who at that time conducted a grocery store at Fifth and Wall streets. Another of the "solid six" was J. A. Fazenda, the retiring president of the association. The other four were E. W. Grannis, J. A. Davy, J. Varley and L. O. Powers

With this little nucleus, the Los Angeles Retail Grocers' Association was formed Each appointed himself a committee of one to canvass the town for members. Circulars were sent out and these six charter members devoted much of their time to furthering the organization. The next meeting was a marked success. Brent's hall was filled to overflowing. The enthusiasm displayed was sufficient proof of the necessity for organization.

Secretary W. R. Baxter.

In February of 1902, with the assistance of Mr. Powers, organizer of the State Association and editor of the Grocers' Advocate, the scope of the association was broadened and its membership largely increased. The grocers of the other large communities of Southern California were brought in close touch with the Los Angeles Association and J. F. Paulding was induced to take up the work of the secretaryship, which, under the new conditions, required careful attention and much time and labor.

A Record of Growth.

From that time the association has been a power in the community.

The membership has grown from six in 1901 to 402 at the present time.

The work done has been of benefit to members and non-members alike. The members found that, if the association was valuable for no other purpose than to exchange ideas as to the conduct of their individual businesses, it was more than worth while. Of course, the most important result of organization has been the maintainance of prices.

Our association has brought this about through convincing manufacturers that it would pay them to see that the dealers who sell their goods get a profit. Our theory is that the manufacturer should establish the retail price on the goods he makes. The part the association has played has been to encourage each manufacturer to establish a retail price and maintain it, and to help him by letting him know, as promptly as possible, when any retailer is violating the conditions on which he allows his goods to be sold.

We find the manufacturers are, in the main, with us in our contention for fixed prices. Our contention is that the manufacturer, jobber and retailer work together for mutual good and each month we are advancing further in this direction.

A Good Credit System.

Another branch of association work, the value of which every merchant appreciates, is our credit system.

Through the co-operation of all the grocers in forwarding their delinquent accounts to the secretary of the association for collection, the loss from unpaid bills has been greatly reduced. Members have been saved the losses they would have netted had they given credit to undeserving parties against whom we have been able to warn them, and our collectors have been able to secure sums on bad bills that amount to several thousands of dollars.

The object of our system is to help the grocer protect himself against the professional deadbeat. Merchants often extend credit to a man who pays his bills regularly for a time and then, through stress of circumstances—sickness, accident, lack of work—he gets behind. You will seldom find men of this kind on our delinquent list. It is the man who is able to pay, but who would like to victimize the dealer, that we are after.

These three major things the association stands for:

Better fellowship.
Better prices.
Better credits.

From time to time, the association takes up other important matters which affect the grocer.

Take, for instance, the matter of a monthly license. A determined effort was made by certain Councilmen to impose a license of $5 upon every merchant who carried fruit. In effect, it was placing the merchant, who is a heavy taxpayer, and a solid member of the community, upon a par with the peddler. The association fought the ordinance and declared its intention, if the ordinance was passed, to carry it to the United States Supreme Court, if necessary, to prove that it was unconstitutional.

The ordinance never was passed.

Limit Wholesalers' Field.

Through the earnest solicitation of the association, the wholesalers have desisted from selling to restaurants. The times was when each jobber had a salesman who called on the restaurant trade, from the big cafes to the cheapest soup house, and as a result, shut the retailer out of trade which legitimately belongs to him. At the present time the retailer gets this business. The time was when the retailer never thought of buying gallon goods with his futures, whereas now, to take care of our restaurant trade, gallon fruits and vegetables are an important item in our future orders.

These are only a few of the important reforms which the association has wrought, but they serve to show our object and our aims.

Will Help Get Laws.

There is much needed State legislation and we are now working to help the State Grocers' Association bring this about.

We feel sure of the help of our Legislative representatives and believe we will succeed. Our organization proposes to take active steps in helping secure the funds necessary to enable the State Association to carry on an effective campaign

Our organization is greatly interested in the work being done in San Francisco by J. F. Paulding as secretary of the Pacific Coast Grocers' Association. We think that his success will serve to insure the permanence and increase the scope of our successes in Southern California.

At a recent meeting of our association, J. R. Newberry delivered a strong address on the value of work of the Pacific Coast Association. Mr Newberry's talk was warmly applauded and individual members of our association agreed to contribute a fixed sum monthly towards the maintainance of the Pacific Coast Association so that we can assure Mr. Paulding a contribution of at least $50 per month for Los Angeles, beginning with Jan 1st.

Expect Important Results.

We do not intend to stop at this, as we have in Mr Paulding a man who we feel certain will bring the grocers and manufacturers into better harmony.

The Pacific Coast Association will, in time, we believe, be one of the strongest associations in the world, and every grocer should be willing to contribute something toward its support

The present officers of our association are as follows:

President N E. Wilson; vice-president, Charles Mottaz; treasurer, C. J. Skinner, doorkeeper, W. C. Longstreth.

Directors F. Daken, C. F. Life, L. O. Powers, C. Stegemeier, W. D. Buck.

Secretary—W. R. Baxter.

Expecting even greater results for 1905 than for any previous year, and with assurances of my appreciation for the valuable assistance we are rendering our organization, I remain,

Very respectfully yours,

W. R. Baxter, Secretary.

That is what the Dealer Gets who Buys a

NATIONAL CASH REGISTER

HOW? Let us show you.
There are only two ways you can keep a record of all the sales, cash or credit, made in your store; of moneys paid on account and new transactions, and who made the sales; in fact of nearly every action of every clerk in your store.

ONE WAY is to hire a man you can trust to stand at the door to watch your clerks and your customers, and secure of your customers a record of what they had bought, etc., before they left. Such a man would cost at least $2.50 per day.

THE OTHER WAY is to get a NATIONAL CASH REGISTER which will keep the record more completely, with less friction, and with less liability of mistakes. If the dealer buys a $200 Cash Register, the cost would be $20 per year, if the register did not last more than 10 years. It will be a good, salable machine then. The interest on $200 at 6 per cent. is $12. This would make the register cost $32 per year and its service would cost the dealer about 8 cents per day.

SOLD ON EASY MONTHLY PAYMENTS.

The National Cash Register

Gives better service for 8 cents a day than the best man could at $2.50 per day.

Splendid Showing of the Retail Grocers and Merchants of Alameda County.

Oakland, Dec. 24, 1904.

Editor Advocate—It was not long ago when men doing the same kind of business looked upon each other as bitter enemies. But they are becoming more enlightened and are learning that, while in business they can be generous rivals, away from it they can be good friends.

It was in the light of this understanding that the Retail Grocers of Alameda County came together and formed an association July 8, 1901, with the help of their brother grocers from San Francisco and the State Association.

The serious conditions that faced the grocer as an individual and rendered him powerless, in the face of it, took on a far different aspect when he combined his interests with his fellow grocer. Then the trade grievance became not the complaint of an individual but of a class. Just as the other trades found strength in combination, so did the retail grocer.

It was not long before the value of our organization began to make itself felt. Through the energy of its first presidents, G. A. Russell and H. D. Cushing, much was accomplished.

Protection From Dead Beats.

A collection agency was established and before long a system whereby the grocer protected himself against bad credits. This was accomplished through a list of dead beats supplied to the members and the use of the office to trace their movements. In this effort the association gathered together a list of over 3000 names. And it has collected many thousands of dollars which otherwise must have been lost to the members.

But the chief result has been to prevent losses by a knowledge of bad credits.

Bringing the grocers together socially has resulted in a better understanding of their mutual interests and inspired confidence in each other and their officers.

In addition to protecting themselves against the dead beat, they have forced the wholesaler to confine himself to doing business with the retailer and prevented his selling in competition to the consumer. The wholesaler may secretly sell to an occasional consumer, but he knows better than to let it become known. Our organization has frequently had occasion in the past to call the attention of the wholesaler to the fact that it would be for his interests to let the retail grocer sell the goods to the consumer. So that our association has scored a point when it induced the wholesaler to confine his operations to the retailer.

Secretary J. G. Reed.

President S. J. SILL, Berkeley

Wipe Out Trading Stamps.

The trading stamp is another evil that the association in conjunction with the Merchants' Exchange of Oakland eradicated from the county.

The association owes much to its officers and friends. The unselfish work demanded of its presidents has been given unstintedly and they have been ably assisted by our secretaries, R. W. Sweet and W. J. Hopkins.

Too much praise cannot be given to the earnest support given by the Grocers' Advocate and its editor, A. H. Powers.

Foremost among those who have labored for the Alameda County merchants is our retiring president, L. Warnke, of Alameda, who has been untiring in his efforts for the building up of the association. It was largely through his strenuous efforts that the association in conjunction with the State Association was enabled to obtain certain needed legislation.

The members feel that much was accomplished two years ago when the law was passed permitting the garnishment of State, county and city officials' salaries.

Expect More Needed Laws.

They feel that conditions are right for the enactment of other needed legislation this year.

They expect the Legislature, which begins its sessions January 3, 1905, to pass a law extending the life of an account from two to four years; also a law making the wife's property equally responsible to that of her husband for the bills contracted for the necessities of life. All our members and, in fact, the entire merchant body of our county want these laws. And they want a law permitting the formation of Mutual Fire Insurance companies.

While the association has worked on these lines and have obtained tangible results, it has been preparing for a greater work. The untiring efforts of its officers and lessons taught by our sister organizations have shown us how to solve the most important problem we have now before us. It is: How can we prevent the melting away of our profits, indeed of our whole business venture?

How often do we see the grocer out before sunrise and working long after sunset? Yet with all this effort, he barely makes a living and must consider himself fortunate if he is not one of the 75 per cent. who fail and see his stock transferred to the show windows of some dry good store and sold below cost much to the chagrin of his former business rivals.

Want Better Profits.

There is one way to prevent this loss of profits and that is to establish a uniform selling price that will give a business-paying profit on the goods he sells.

In the nature of things, every effort is worthy of proper compensation and in all vocations it is being obtained through organized efforts. Therefore, as an organization, we demand for our members an equitable compensation for our part in the distribution of commodities. We demand a profit commensurate with our effort, and in order to get this we must work on the right principles.

We understand, as never before, that the manufacturer, in whose interests we are constantly working, can assist us.

We are asking him to fix a price on his leading brands and we will maintain it. We propose to sell those goods on which we are guaranteed a profit in preference to those we are not.

The man who egotistically says "I will allow no man to say at what price I shall sell my goods," is laboring under a delusion. For from the time he opens his store in the morning until he closes it at night, he is governed by the prices of his competitors.

Cutters Fix Retail Prices.

The consumer is using these prices to beat down the margin of his profit to the vanishing point. So that the cutter after all fixes the price at which he must sell his goods.

We will allow any man the liberty to charitably sell without a profit the goods of manufacturers who care not if their goods are given away. But we do not propose to allow our business stability to be impaired by this method of doing business. The cutter may tread the path bordering on the brink of bankruptcy, but we will use our organization to put a wide space between ourselves and the chasm.

The new year opens up with bright prospects.

We have a great deal of work to do and an association of interested workers to do it.

Our president, S. J. Sill, is a worker and when he gives us the ability he has given his business we will end the year adding greater accomplishments to those of the past.

We are with our sister associations in this work.

We are with the State Association. And the fight of one is the fight of all.

J. W. Reed,
Secretary.

WHITTIER HAS PROFITED.

Whittier, Cal., Dec. 16, 1904.

Editor Advocate:—Our association has resulted in the establishment of a much better feeling among the retail merchants of our community. We have been able to come to an understanding as to prices that has put business into better shape. At the same time, we have been able to warn each other against deadbeats and to secure the collection of many bad bills that we would otherwise have lost entirely.

Since the grocers have acted together, the selling to our trade by wholesalers and manufacturers has been practically eliminated.

We have eight members in our organization, one of them a butcher, and two feed dealers. Our officers are: A. Jacolb, president; vice-president, F. K Weeks; secretary and treasurer, M. T. Owens.

We are interested in the various measures that will be brought before the State Legislature by the State Association. We consider of special value the law extending the statute of limitations, law making husband and wife mutually responsible for the necessaries of life, and the law in regard to mutual insurance.

M. T. Owens, Secretary.

HAVE MANY IMITATORS.

Popularity of the Seville Packing Co.'s "White Label" Products Attested.

The "White Label" brand of the Seville Packing Company has been a symbol of excellence to dealers handling olive products for many years.

This firm is the largest handler of imported olives in the United States.

They have their own buyers in Spain who devote themselves to buying up the choicest product of the finest olive groves above Seville. This enables them to present to the trade large quantities of olives of a uniformly high quality.

The firm was the originator of Pimolive. Pim Olas are olives stuffed with pimiento, a sweet Spanish red pepper. It is a relish of particular daintiness and is not only a delightful appetizer, but also serves to garnish carefully arranged tables.

The Nicelle Olive Oil, of which the Seville Packing Company makes a specialty, was awarded the Grand Prize and Gold Medal over all competitors at the Paris Exposition. This fact mark the remarkable excellence and purity of this olive oil, the high standard of which is carefully preserved by the Seville Packing Company.

The products of this company, particularly their Pim Olas, have been widely imitated. As the imators have no reputation to sustain, but are merely trying to sell goods to replace the well-known articles of the Seville Packing Company, their successes are naturally transient, while the sales of the Seville Packing Company grow larger and larger with each succeeding year.

The Spahn-Patrick Company are the agents for the Pacific Coast.

DESERVED SUCCESS.

Throughout the past year the sales of Jesse Moore Hunt AA whiskey has steadily increased.

This increase was more pronounced during the latter half of the year than ever before.

This increase is due in the first place to the uniform and high excellence of the goods put up under this brand.

In the second place energetic pushing of the goods on the part of the management of this celebrated whisky has been a strong factor in its increasing success.

President J. F. Moroney of the Jesse Moore Hunt Company is planning a still more active campaign in behalf of his goods in the new year.

STOCKTON'S STRONG STORY.

Has Helped Its Members and Is Even Now Preparing Entertainment for State Association.

Stockton, Cal., Dec., 18, 1904.

Editor Advocate—This city having been honored by the State Association in selecting it as the next annual meeting place, and our association also being honored by the selection of C. B. Pearson as State President and Joy D. Campbell as treasurer and director of the Pacific Coast Retail Grocers' Association, we feel that a few words regarding the things that have been done and are about to be done would not at this time go amiss.

We have a membership of 43 out of a total of about 48 grocers, large and small. All the large grocers are members of the Stockton Grocers' Protective Association and those who are not members are principally small firms.

The association was organized March 28th, 1901, through the efforts of W. E. Ruffner (now deceased), James Vassalo, C. B. Pearson, J. D. Campbell and a few others. These gentlemen labored diligently for several weeks to bring the grocers together for a little heart to heart talk. It was then decided to give up the cut-throat policy that had been followed in this city for a number of years, to the degradation and failure of many who had embarked in this line of business.

Progress was slow at first. Our efwere confined in the beginning to the listing of bad pay customers.

It was branched out, so to speak,

Secretary W. E. O'Connor.

until to-day the grocery business is on a par with all other legitimate business enterprises in this city.

The officers for the present term are Joe Gianelli, Jr., president; L. B. Griffitts, vice-president; W. E. O'Connor, secretary-treasurer; directors: C. B. Pearson, Silva Rossi, J. G. Strohmeier, Clark G. Wakefield and O. D. Carson.

The chief value of our association in the past has been the listing of bad debtors; the weeding out of inferior and short weight measure goods; the encouragement of the sale of goods of standard values; the protection of its members against the ruinous price cutting that drove not less than a dozen grocers to the wall during a few years immediately preceding the time of organization, and the promotion of a harmonious and friendly spirit among the grocers, where all the essentials of reciprocity are to be found.

Our present plans and work does not contemplate a departure from the course followed heretofore, except that we are looking forward to the entertainment of the delegates to the next State convention, and feel assured that those who do not avail themselves of the opportunity on this occasion, to visit our city, will, after the report of the convention has been spread broadcast, regret that they did not visit the Gateway City of the San Joaquin valley, surrounded by orchards, vineyards and gardens and populated by a people possessed with full California hospitality.

We are in accord with the State Association in its efforts to secure the passage of beneficial laws against wrong-doers, but are most interested in the passage of "a law extending the statute limitations from two to four years;" "a law making the separate property of husband and wife liable for the necessities of life while they are living together" and "a law to curb the trading stamp evil."

Yours sincerely,
W. E. O'Connor, Secretary.

A RECORD OF SUCCESS.

The Wunder Brewing Company, which was established in January, 1901, has enjoyed the largest increase of business of any brewery in San Francisco since its first brew was placed on the market.

A part of the secret of the success of the Brewing Company is that it is equipped with the very latest improved machinery, such as is used in the best breweries in the East.

The bottling works have had a similar satisfactory growth.

SACRAMENTO HELPS GROCERS.

Good Report of Progress From the Dealers of the Capital City.

Sacramento, Cal., Dec. 14, 1904.

Editor Advocate:—The Retail Grocers' Association of Sacramento dates from February, 1904, when it was organized upon the frame work of the Grocers' Protective Union, which had been in existence for many years.

The Retail Grocers' Association, through its perfected arrangements has enabled its members to accomplish results that we had needed many years. It is conducted on a thorough business basis and our results come through the fact that our members recognize that the system must benefit others if it is to benefit them.

We now number sixty grocers on our membership roll. The list includes all of the best grocers of the city. There are perhaps twenty stores not in our association.

One of the chief value of our organization has been to eliminate the foolish habit of cutting. This was brought about by the mutual confidence and friendship that was engendered through our organization.

Through a system of reporting to the secretary people who do not pay their bills, we have been able to secure considerable protection against deadbeats and have also been able to collect many bad accounts.

At present our city is suffering from the invasion of the trading stamp people. They are trying hard to secure a foothold here and we cannot anticipate what the outcome will be.

Most of our leading merchants recognize that trading stamps are a very expensive and useless luxury. I am sorry to say, though, that there are others who think them a good thing. This fact would surprise me were it not for the lamentable fact that there are clay-eaters and cut rate grocery stores in this glorious land of ours.

Our association is interested in all of the laws the State organization is seeking to have passed. We will do what we can to advance the good work.

Our officers are as follows: President, A. A. Jost; vice-president, S. H. Farley; treasurer, A. Schaden; secretary, H. R. Blair; executive committee, J. F. Smith, J. S. Jones, George Born, Henry Feldhusen, John Riley, F. B. Fancher and E. W. Hale

Harry Blair, Secretary.

Fresno Cures Cutting.

Fresno, Cal., Dec. 17, 1904.

Editor Advocate:—The Retail Grocers' Association of Fresno has been a success in every particular. It has resulted in more friendship and better feeling among the grocers. Mutual confidence has been established that has enabled the grocers of our city to do away with much of the cutting that was sapping up their profits. Mutual action has been of value also in securing for us the co-operation of various manufacturers who used their influence and power to prevent cutters from sacrificing their goods.

Our organization has been of considerable value to its members through assisting them in the collection of their bad bills and in securing mutual warning against undesirable customers.

The writer has been in the work so short a time that he hardly feels capable of doing full justice to the splendid accomplishments of our association. There is hardly a line of organization work, however, in which our organization has not been able to be of much benefit to its members.

We have a membership of seventeen, which includes almost all the larger stores. At present we have no chief executive officer. Our vice-president is H. Graff & Co.; treasurer, Eccleston Bros.; executive board, Holland & Holland, Dorsey, Robinson & Co., Parker, Roth Company.

We feel that all the measures that are to be presented at the next session of the Legislature will be of great benefit to the grocery trade, and our organization will render all the assistance in its power in securing their passage.

F. E. Greeley, Secretary.

BAD BILLS ARE RAREITIES.

Result of Organization Work In Our Far Southern Metropolis.

San Diego, Dec. 1st, 1904.

Editor Advocate:—Before the formation of the Grocers' Association of San Diego in November, 1899, there was much hostile rivalry among the retail merchants of this city. The better feeling that has followed the formation of our association, has created better conditions. Another good result of the organization was a marked abatement of the cutting habit. While this has not been entirely cured, it has been greatly reduced.

We have established one of the most effectual systems of Merchants' Reference Books in existence. Almost every deadbeat in this territory is now known to the grocers of our community. As a result bad bills have become almost a curiosity among them.

The practice of selling to consumers by wholesalers and manufacturers is not so general as it was before the organization of the retail grocers. There is still considerable room for improvement in this regard.

The old adage that the "Proof of the pudding is in the eating," is exemplified in San Diego. The value of our organization to the retail grocers is shown by its results. Whereas, before our organization, failures were common among the grocers; there are no more of them being closed up now and many grocers have become quite well-to-do.

We feel that the State Association is doing splendid work in advancing the legislation needed by the retail grocers. We would say that we are especially interested in the laws to extend the statute of limitations of open accounts. Instead of two years, it should be five.

We also feel that the separate property of the wife should be made responsible mutually with that of the husband for the necessaries of life while the two are living together, thus destroying a prolific source of fraud and perjury.

The president of our association is A. Sidney Smith and the secretary is, yours truly,

A. D. Jordan.

HAS FEWER BAD BILLS.

Nevada City, Cal., Dec. 9th, 1904.

Editor Advocate:—Although there are only eight grocers in Nevada City, and one of these does not belong to our organization, we have nine members in the Nevada County Grocers' Association. This includes one in Grandeville and one in North Bloomfield.

Our organization was organized April 22nd, 1903. Its officers are as follows: President, W. G. Richards; vice-president, G. Fischer, treasurer, T. W. Sigourney; secretary, F. Guenther.

We have profited very largely through the better feling that has resulted among the grocers of our community since the formation of our organization.

There is very little cutting done in our town and we have not found it necessary to act in this regard.

Our organization has prepared a "Caution List" for its members, in which the names of the deadbeats of our community are printed. Each member has a copy of this, and as a consequence, we have fewer bad bills than we used to have.

The collection of bad bills has progressed slowly. We expect to do better next year.

We have done little so far in the matter of regulating prices. We are planning to establish a price card in the near future.

Since our association was formed we have been able to convince manufacturers generally that it was not profitable to try to sell to our customers. When we find out a drummer is selling to a consumer, we notify him that this kind of business must cease. So far they have never needed a second warning.

Our members are interested particularly in having the time in which an open account outlaws, extended from two years to four, and in making the husband and wife mutually responsible for the bills for the necessaries of life.

Yours truly,

F. Guenther, Secretary.

MADE MERCHANTS FRIENDLY.

San Luis Obispo Secures Satisfactory Results From Associated Effort.

We have twenty-seven members in our Merchants' Association, which was organized in September, 1903. The majority of the members are merchants in other lines than groceries. There are only twelve grocers in our city.

Our officers are as follows: President, D. Muzio; vice-president, J. G. Sandercock; treasurer, Aug. Vollum; secretary, S. V. Knight.

Directors—A. L. Johnson, N. C. Brem, J. A. Renetzky, E. L. Sponer, G. P. Codoni.

Our principal work has been in guarding our members against deadbeats and in helping them collect their bad bills. In this we have been very successful.

A much more friendly feeling has prevailed among the merchants since they began to meet together and plan to act in harmony for their mutual benefit. The evidence of this has been the lessening of the cutting evil among the retail grocers. Instead of "fighting it out," as they once did, they "talk it over" now, and each tries to be fair to his neighbor.

Our members were pleased with the measures decided upon by the State Grocers' Association for presentation at the coming Legislature. We will do what we can to help get those laws passed.

EXPECTS LARGE RETURNS.

Advancing Movement for Better Trade Condition in the Sacramento Valley.

Redding, Cal., Dec. 30, 1904.

Editor Advocate—I am sorry to state that on account of sickness during the summer, was unable to finish the start we made on the Sacramento Valley Association. Business during the past three months has prevented any active work but I anticipate an endeavor to bring into line many merchants who are anxious to join the Valley Association.

As to the actual work, most active has been in and around Chico, Gridley, Oroville and Biggs.

We find in Chico those merchants who have taken advantage of the Association locally are in this position.

Each month the secretary issues a bulletin of the standing of the different "risks" and bad accounts with the result that each merchant in and around Chico and vicinity has better protection than any place in the northern part of the State.

Talk about your fire insurance.

The risk of fire is a plum besides the account risk and yet there are merchants being bit every day that cannot see further than their own ignorance in the matter.

We believe that every town should have its list; that each and every merchant could have protection. It would pay any man doing a $12,000 per year business, such as is conducted throughout the country, to pay into his local association one per cent per year, even less. But with the association insurance he is out no more and can rest easy, not having to wonder how much heavier it will be at the last summing up of the year.

Locally we have done but very little towards this end as yet, as we have been somewhat interested in local conditions of somewhat importance, having had on our hands a bridge proposition that demanded our attention.

An effort will shortly be made, now that the rush of fall and holiday trade has passed, allowing due thought and consideration of the subject, towards a proper consolidation of all interests throughout the valley.

We believe more good work has been done for the grocery trade in the past year than has ever been accomplished in the years past.

We trust that due representation will be made at the next session of the legislature as the bills to come before the house are of the greatest importance to every merchant in the State.

We commend the efforts of your paper and appreciate the personal efforts of yourself, whether or not it is financial gain or loss to you, in your strong stand for the betterment of conditions. It takes this sort of go-aheaditiveness to get results.

As a rule we are glad to see these things done but are always too busy to do them ourselves.

Our representative in the Assembly from this district has assured us that the existing situation demands a few reforms and if he can see it is for the betterment of the merchants his energies will be exerted in our behalf.

We trust that nothing will be left undone by those who are in a position to come in personal contact with the dominating powers "that are" in the different houses, and with a wish for the betterment of all interested parties and The Advocate, particularly yourself, I wish you the compliments of the season and remain

Very truly yours,
F. F. Dustin.

NEVER TIRE.

Bayle's Food Products Are Worthy of Consideration.

The best business can be made better by introducing new and attractive goods. Grocers who carry Bayle's Food Products find a steady increase of orders from their best patrons, who are well pleased with these relishes and condiments. You can create a big demand for them among your customers. They will not tire of them.

HAS WORK TO DO.

Watsonville, Jan. 1, 1904.

Editor Advocate:—We need some one to come into our field and stir things up again.

Our organization did good work for its members for quite a while. Then the young attorney who acted as secretary moved away and no one was elected to take his place. Interest in meetings began to wane and they were finally discontinued.

The president is still George Jessen; O. D. Stoesser, vice-president, and A. L. Bixby, treasurer.

I note that the advocates of the parcels post are again very active. There ought to be an organized effort made to combat that proposition and prevent its adoption. This can only be done by perfect organization of all classes of business.

Such a plan is the one I favor, namely, a Merchants' Association, taking in all classes of business. As a bureau of information in the way of regulating local credits and many other matters of interest to all, this plan would be most effective.

If the grocers or dry goods people desire to have an extra little organization to take up matters pertaining to their special lines of business, they might have a sub-association dealing with their affairs only.

There is a world of work to be done along association lines, and I am impressed with the idea that the retailers and jobbers should work together on the broad grounds which affect their respective fields, to a greater or less extent alike.

Wishing you a "Happy New Year," I remain, yours truly,

O. D. Stoesser.

EVERETT RETAIL GROCERS.

Doing Good Work and Proud of Their Accomplishments.

Everett, Wash., Dec. 12, 194.

Editor Advocate:—Being only a small city of 20,0000 inhabitants, we cannot expect to make so great a showing as our sister associations in the larger industrial centers, but I am pleased to state that every one is satisfied with the progress made.

When I say that we have harmony and peace, I know you will understand why they are all satisfied.

Our association numbers thirty of the thirty-five grocers of our city in its membership.

We were organized in 1895 and incorporated in 1903.

Our officers are as follows:

G. W. O'Neil, president; E. C. Baker vice-president; B. L. Ridgeway, treasurer.

Trustees—G. W. O'Neil, C. A. Hanson, F. A. Jacobs, J. A. Myers, T. C Simmons.

Attorney—Edward C. Dailey.

Secretary—T. C. Simmons.

Organized 1895, incorporated 1903.

There is a much greater degree of friendship among the grocers of our city now, due almost entirely to our association's meeting and our social gatherings. We give a picnic each year, and from time to time, have a social. Our wives and children attended our last two socials and they proved a great success in helping bring the members together and increasing their interest in the association through the interest of their wives.

Owing to the thorough mutual understanding that has been established among our merchants, we have had very little trouble with the cutter. As a matter of fact, we hardly know what it means now.

Through a monthly delinquent list we have been able to limit the number of deadbeats materially. This list, together with a very strong circular letter, has proven very beneficial in helping members collect their bad bills.

We have been able to practically cure wholesalers of the habit of selling to our customers. The method will be understood from the circular I am mailing in connection with an account of the work of the Snohomish County Merchants' Association, of which the writer is also secretary.

Together with the county association, the Everett Grocers' Association has assisted in the completion of a new system of credit ratings. Our "Delinquent Book" is loaned to subscribers for $10 per year. All classes of retail merchants may subscribe for the book.

Through our new Rating Bureau, we expect to make bad bills a thing of the past in Snohomish County, besides securing considerable revenue.

I am pleased to say that our treasury is in a flourishing condition and that we anticipate being of greater value to our members each year.

TACOMA'S STRONG ASSOCIATION.

Retail Grocers Act as a Unit in Matters Affecting Trade Conditions.

Tacoma, Wash., Dec. 10, 1904.

Editor Advocate—The Tacoma Retail Grocers' Association, Inc., is probably better organized than any other in the State of Washington. This is due, for one thing, to the unanimity that prevails among our merchants. Another important factor is that our offices—at least, the presidents, vice-presidents, treasurers and committees—have always been A1 men who were ready to drop their own work if the Association needed them.

Sect'y Gustav Beutlich, Tacoma.

Our present officers are: J. H. McDonald, president; C. H. Buelow, vice-president; C. F. W. Bachman, treasure; Gustav Bentlich, secretary.

Directors: C. H. Plass, R. McLean, C. T. Stewart, R. S. Bennatts, J. W. Fiddes.

Our collection bureau and list of delinquent debtors has been of great value to our members

Our organization has been able to secure an understanding as to prices of a number of articles. We have been assisted in this very largely by the wholesale houses and jobbers of Tacoma. This has resulted from the theory of the jobbers that if any one retail grocer of our city should be able to force the entire trade into selling goods without a proper margin of profit, that the jobbers would be the ones to suffer. Therefore if a retail firm sells goods at a price that a conservative committee considers does not give the trade a fair margin of profit, the wholesaler refuses to give the cutter any goods whatever until he agrees to keep prices. This has been a source of numerous profit not only to the wholesaler and jobber, but also the retail dealers.

Washington is now fairly well organized. There is still need of organization in our outlying districts and in certain small towns.

Wishing you a Merry, Merry Christmas.

Yours truly,
Gustav Bentlich, Secty.

SEATTLE SCORES WELL.

An Effective Association of Retail Grocers That Helps Trade Conditions.

Seattle, Wash., Dec. 22, 1904.

Editor Advocate:—Our association was organized in 1896 and incorporated in 1901. Our membership today has reached 108 active members, who number practically all the grocers of consideration in our city.

Our organization has been very valuable to the grocers of Seattle. Through promoting confidence among retail grocers, encouraging friendship among the men in this line of business. As a result of the good understanding that has arisen through our association we have been able to do a great deal towards curing the cutting habit. Card prices have been maintained and the grocery trade of Seattle is in much more prosperous condition than it was before our organization took this work in hand.

We have done much work for our members in the collecting of their bad bills and in guarding them against

GARRETT W. O'NEIL,
President Everett Grocers' Association, Everett, Washington.

deadbeats. Another matter of much value has been the protection we have been able to accord the grocers of the entire State by curtailing the encroachments of wholesalers and provision houses in their inroads upon the customers of the retail grocery trade. Because of the recognition of our rights, secured through our association, the trade of restaurants, hotels, boarding-houses, etc., is all practically in the hands of the retail grocers.

While we have met with antagonism at different times, yet those who opposed us have usually become friendly when they learned that we honestly desired only what would benefit the trade and only asked for what was ours by right, and what we were able to protect. Because of this fact, we have been able to secure a better condition of social as well as business intercourse between both wholesalers and retailers.

Through the good understanding among the various associations of the State, several measures have been secured through the Legislature. We have also secured favorable legislation in regard to pure goods, garnishment, weights and measures and other subjects.

Our association has enabled the grocers to take effective action in securing the enactment and enforcement of several local ordinances.

We have also been able to insist upon and secure just and equitable terms from the commission men and the wholesalers.

Though there are some grocers in Seattle who are not members of our organization, I doubt if there is a single grocer who does not realize that he has been benefited by its existance.

Our officers are as follows: President, A. F. Bickford; first vice-president, O. W. Hemphill, second vice-president, G. B. Helgesen; secretary, J. J. Higgins; treasurer, F. L. Heldrich.

Our president, Mr. Bickford, has been a member of the Seattle Grocers' Association since its organization and has always taken a prominent part in State Association affairs He is also president of the Western Insurance Company, incorporated in 1901, and is known by all as a good fellow and a bright business man. Yours truly,

J. J. Higgins, Secretary.

We, the undersigned merchants of Snohomish County have adopted these resolutions this third day of February, 1904, and herewith submit the same for your information, which we believe will be of vital importance that all should observe:

Saving all losses from over-weight, spilling and carelessness.

Saving a large proportion of the time used in putting up packages.

Saving all useless and back-breaking labor in scooping sugar, etc., from barrels and bins.

Thus Saving Time, Labor and Material.

No other System has been devised Producing Equal Results.

These cuts illustrate the Portable Type of Bond Weighers.

Other types are designed to fit different requirements and of varying hopper capacity.

The Portable Weigher occupies the floor space of two sugar barrels.

A Weigher suspended from a platform over a counter occupies no floor space at all.

A boy can operate it.

He fills the hopper, opens the spout—the rest is automatic.

The weighing is done over an Even Balance Agate Bearing Scale, which can be used at any time without change for any purpose whatever.

It handles any comodity which runs freely through a spout.

The machine is fully warranted, fool proof and will last a life time with proper use.

EXPECT ALL TO JOIN.

Aberdeen, Wash., Dec. 7th, 1904.

Editor Advocate:—The benefit of our association in increasing the friendship among the grocers of Aberdeen has been very great. Even those on the outside have respect for our association, and we hope to have all as members by January 1st, 1905.

Our membership now consists of ten of the fourteen grocery firms in our city.

Through the efforts of our association the practice of cutting has been almost done away with. The grocers who have not yet joined the organization uphold our prices and do not seek to interfere with our work in other respects.

Our delinquent list has been a material aid in guarding against deadbeats. We have been able to collect many bad bills and the difficulty of collecting from slow pay customers has been much lessened.

Through the influence of our organization we have been able to discourage the wholesale trade from selling to consumers. Some of the wholesalers still persist in doing this, but the practice has been lessened materially.

Our organization seeks only to accomplish that which is recognized to be of general good. For this reason our success has been permanent and we have been able to be of considerable use and to see by the friendly aid even of those who have not joined our organization.

Our president is L. L. Trask; treasurer, Fred S. Becker; secretary, E. E. Bowe. Yours truly, E. E. Bowe, Secretary.

WHATCOM COUNTY SUCCEEDS.

Grocers Overcome Various Trade Troubles By Co-operation.

Bellingham, Wash., Dec. 21, 1904.

Editor Advocate:—In order to adequately cover the field under the caption, "The History of Our Organization," it would be absolutely necessary to ransack the archives and bring to the light of day a lot of stuff that would neither be satisfactory to ourselves or profitable to your readers.

A. PANCOAST,
President Whatcom County Grocers' Association, Bellingham, Wash.

Suffice it, we were born; passed safely through the infant stage; had a hard time of it during the teething season; easily laid aside our swaddling clothes and at present writing we find ourselves flourishing as a green bay tree.

What are we doing as a local association?

First, we are loyal to the National, make our annual report and pay the per capita tax of $5.

We are loyal to the State Association, and find real pleasure once each year in inclosing our check for $50 for State work.

We mention this because so many associations seem to think that the almost impregnable positions of the enemy can be captured without ammunition.

We are giving to our members the services of a salaried secretary, who

CHARLES W. JONES,
Secretary Whatcom County Grocers' Association, Inc.

devotes his entire time to the work of the association in seeing—

That card prices are maintained;

That no unfair advertisements appear in the local papers;

That no unjust discrimination is made by wholesalers and jobbers in this territory;

That protected goods get the right treatment at the hands of retailers;

That meetings are held regularly each week (a vital point);

That a delinquent list is published each month and distributed to the members;

That many a "lame duck" is brought to time and moss-covered accounts are collected.

Our association rooms are centrally located, well furnished and lighted, with all the Coast trade papers, as well as all the local publications always on file.

Once each year our members and their friends turn from the "carking cares" of business life to a day of recreation at our annual picnic, which comes in August. This is the only general gala day of the year for the entire county (attendance in 1904 was over 4000). On this day the festive drummer vies with the fat girl from the country precincts in catching the greased pig, the big cake-walk comes off and everybody has a good time, regardless of complexions or clothes.

Do we have our troubles?

Decidedly so.

Our association is no exception to the rule. We enjoy our "off days" the same as others, when the very old

H. C. BYRON,
Director of the Pacific Coast Grocers' Association for Washington, Bellingham, Wash.

Nick seems to have taken up his abode in the personality of some weak sister in our circle. Then the secretary has to get out his bottle of ointment to smooth over the irregularity, or grabbing his hatchet, go at the proposition good and hard.

We are also doing what we can in the way of legislation for the protection of the merchant and for the punishment of the deadbeat.

We are bringing association work before the dealers as often as possible through the columns of the trade papers of the Coast, and always hail with delight the invitation of ye editors for us to "send something."

Trade conditions have been better than for some time past, up here in the Northwest.

A very satisfactory holiday trade is reported and the outlook is bright for the coming season in Bellingham the coming metropolis of the upper Sound country.

Our association extends to all associations throughout the country the compliments of the holiday season, and the secretary hereby shoves his hand out to every association secretary, in a hearty "How Are You?"

Very respectfully yours,
Chas. W. Jones, Secretary.

PORTLAND IS WORKING.

Best Men In the Trade Seek To Advance the General Good.

Portland, Or., Dec. 14, 1904.

Editor of the Advocate:—The number of members in our association is now almost 100. The number of grocers in our city, including small candy stands, etc., which handle even a very small line of canned goods or anything in the grocery line, is 321. The following comment, however, to show the comparative strength may not be out of place: While our number of nearly 100 may seem small compared with the full number of grocers in the city, it must be remembered that the association members consist entirely of the leading and regular grocers and that the men in the association probably represent 66 per cent of the entire grocery trade of the city, excluding the trade of one very large department store.

The work of the association has, for a number of years, been very effective. For this reason it is difficult to get new members in because they receive the benefits without any of the expense. Further than this, of the 321 grocers in the city of Portland, 99 per cent of them might be called honorary members; that is, they live up to the rules of the association. They are not cutters and they follow the prices established by us, but they do not join the association. This is owing to the fact that when the association was first started, a proper canvass of the grocers was not made, and it is difficult to show to the grocer, who is already receiving the benefits, any good or new reason for joining.

Our officers are: F. W. Funk, president; W. M. Sellwood, vice-president; N. Raymond, secretary and C. A. Bell, assistant secretary. The active officer of the association is the assistant secretary. The rules of the association require that the secretary shall be a grocer, but the work of the association is so extensive that no active grocer can take care of it.

The chief value of our association in the past has been the promotion of good fellowship among the grocers and the extending of the idea among the grocers at large that to be a successful grocer it is necessary to receive a fair profit on all lines of goods, and that a man who cuts on any line, particularly a standard selling line, must make up the difference on some other line or quit the business.

We have done little as yet in regard to collecting bills.

We are continually fighting with the wholesalers in regard to selling to the consumer.

The manufacturers of this district are working with us very nicely in regard to maintaining a consumers' price on lines of goods manufactured by them.

I inclose herewith a list of the grocers of this city with their addresses. If there are any of them to whom you do not send the paper regularly, I will be glad to see that they get it if the entire number is forwarded to me.

Yours truly,

C. A. Bell,
Assistant Secretary of Portland Retail Grocers' Association.

HAS HELPED ITS MEMBERS.

Hoquiam, Wash., Dec. 6th, 1904.

Editor Advocate:—Our association was organized in October, 1903. We have ten members. There are twelve grocers in our town. Our officers are as follows: President, C. H. Kuhn; secretary and treasurer, L. H. Brewer.

We consider that our organization has been a help to our merchants.

We have been able to regulate the prices of certain staples and cutting, as a habit, has been very largely cured.

Our organization has enabled us to secure considerable protection against deadbeats and in collecting our bad bills.

It has resulted in considerably more friendship among the merchants of our community. It is through this friendship that we have been enabled to co-operate effectively in matters in which we would otherwise have been powerless.

The practice of wholesalers and manufacturers selling to consumers has also been lessened through the influence of our organization. Yours truly,

L. H. Brewer, Secretary.

WAKE UP! MR. JOBBER.

Lost Business in Arizona Shows Shameful Inattention.

Phoenix, Arizona, Dec. 16, 1904.

Mr. Aaron H. Powers, editor Grocers' Advocate.

Dear Sir—From the attached news clipping, taken from the Phoenix "Republican," you will notice that the jobbers of El Paso are planning a personal visit to help secure the trade of this territory. The clipping says:

"EXCURSION TO ARIZONA.
"El Paso Merchants Desire to Extend Their Field.

El Paso—A number of representative business men met at the chamber of commerce here and decided to run an excursion on January 8, to Arizona and Sonora points to cultivate closer business relations with the people of those States. The excursion train will leave here over the E. P. & S. W. January 8, and stops will be made at all of the principal towns along that line and after crossing the border into Sonora.

"It is expected that the visit will result in the establishment of much closer commercial relations between El Paso and cities to the southwest of here than have heretofore existed."

This clipping shows the truth of my former statements as to how closely this trade was being cultivated by others than Coast jobbers.

I may say here that the Arizona merchants are making every preparation to meet and entertain this excursion for they are alive to the fact that, while preferring to throw business to the Coast, the Coast jobbers appear to be absolutely careless of this fact.

How El Paso Competes.

In my former letter I proved discriminations in favor of El Paso, but in doing so did not go very closely into details.

Since the building of the Bisbee road, El Paso has become a very important factor in competing against the Coast. The Bisbee road gave El Paso a rate of 1.16 to Douglas, as against the Los Angeles rate of 1.84. As a result nearly all of the Douglass business has been swung to that point.

To make matters worse they put a rate into Clifton and Morencie of 40c per 100 from El Paso, providing that goods must be shipped via Hachita. This latter point is where the Arizona and New Mexico railroad meets the El Paso and Southwestern (commonly called the Bisbee road), thus entirely shutting out the Coast from any of this business.

Pacific Coast Indifference.

The Coast cannot make any great howl against this for their natural outlet to these points are via Lordsburg, New Mexico, where they connect with this same Arizona and New Mexico railroad. But as no one seems interested on the Coast why should the Southern Pacific protect them?

A very prominent official of the Southern Pacific informed the writer when he called his attention to this matter of the 40c rate, that his company had simply lost control of the territory. His road is probably hauling all the through freight, so why, when no one from the Coast cares, should they make any change to enable us to hold our business at these points.

Only Fair Play Needed.

A short time ago a rate was made on flour from the Coast. As a result, for the first time in years, California flour was on the market in Arizona. The Detroit Copper Company of Morencie, than whom there are no closer buyers, bought their supplies in the California market. This is quoted as one specific instance to uphold my statement.

On the other hand, I am informed by a prominent merchant of Tombstone that he can land sugar cheaper from New Orleans than from San Francisco or Los Angeles. This comes to El Paso and from there via the Bisbee road to Tombstone.

Previous to the building of the El Paso division of the Bisbee road, there were two rates from Benson to Bisbee, 30 cents and 40 cents. The Southern Pacific absorbed this rate when the road was completed from El Paso. In doing so they showed the Coast shipper how much they were protecting him. In a short while they quietly raised the rate slightly. I feel certain that it is only a matter of a little while when they will put the original rate into effect for the plain reason no one kicked when they made the first raise.

They must ask themselves why they should absorb the 30 cent or 40 cent of the Bisbee tariff if no one cares.

A Hard Hadware Example.

Take mining machinery for instance. There has been lately established a rate from El Paso to southwestern Arizona points of mixed cars over the Bisbee road via Hachita. This rate only applies to El Paso shipments and is done to practically throw the busines into the hands of an El Paso concern, the Mine and Smelter Supply Company. Now how can we compete against a mixed car when we are compelled to ship in straight cars.

One more instance. El Paso has lately been shipping enormous quantities of shot gun cartridges to Arizona and no Coast house could meet the prices.

The reason was simple.

When the Phelps-Dodge people got control of the copper output of Globe, the Southern Pacific also got control of the Gila Valley, Globe and Northern Railway, they immediately granted Phelps-Dodge & Co. (who are also the owners of the Bisbee road, the Bisbee mine and the Morencie mine, and practically the whole town of Douglass) all kinds of freight concessions. But to offset this they quietly raised the rate to Globe 7 or 8 cents.

This road, though only 124 miles long, showed a gross earning capacity four years ago of $187,000, out of which $90,000 was net earnings. It hardly seems necessary to raise the rate.

The car lot rate to Globe, by the way, is 85 cents per hundred for a haul of 124 miles. The passenger rate 6 cents per mile straight.

The writer tried to sell borax in El Paso, Texas, direct from the factory to a jobbing house there and was plainly shown that they could buy this article which, by the way, is a Pacific Coast production, cheaper from Chicago owing to better freight rates from that point than from Los Angeles.

The proofs I have offered will, I feel sure, be admitted to be conclusive. Many more examples could be cited. I refrain since I only propose to administer homeopathic doses until I arouse some action.

A Strange Carelessness.

In this regard I would add that over 75 traveling men from Coast points have voluntarily told me that they have from time to time taken up with their houses the very things I am now writing about, and that no one seemed to care. I want to say there are no brighter or more up-to-date and capable set of commercial men than the Coast drummer. He has to be to do business when all rates are against him.

The Coast jobbers and manufacturers may ask for a remedy. Well, I will outline one for them. They can make it stick, but the body of men, or even the one man at its head, must be competent.

Suggestion for a Cure.

My plan is, in effect, a freight bureau supported by Los Angeles and San Francisco jobbers and manufacturers, controlled by a board of directors who shall appoint an executive head and staff. This bureau to be supported by regular contributions levied on all Coast jobbers and manufacturers who are desirous of being members.

When any member is interested in rates in any line, or when he desires the immense influence of the bureau against unjust rates, let him simply turn over to them the case and they will, after working it out, report the results to such of the members desiring said information. All changes for better or worse they would be notified of and if for worse, the bureau would look into and find out the reason for same. It would also be the bureau's place to look into and see to obtaining new markets for Coast products.

Probabilities for Saving.

They could compute the combination of two or more rates as against one through rate to enable the consignee on the Coast to get the best possible results on his shipments.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars are thrown away every year into the railroad coffers by lax attention to combination freight rates.

Many large houses have some kind of freight man but he seldom carries much weight with the railroad companies. No railroad company could afford to pass by a just request for equal rates when systematically backed by the immense influence of a combination such as this proposed bureau.

How It Would Work.

Should "Jones, Brown & Co." wish to ship twenty cars of supplies to Australia, China, even to Arizona, they immediately notify the bureau. The bureau goes into all the rates and also sees what the railroad company will agree to do. When they are through, they report back to "Jones, Brown & Co."

That is the way Eastern concerns get into competition with the Coast.

Coast travelers report that their customers continually kick as regards to how goods are stolen on the road as well as held in transit. This matter would be passed to the bureau, backed by immense influence. Such a complaint would carry weight.

At present few shipments reach a customer that some part is not missing. The customer makes his claim but he seldom gets any satisfaction.

If, on the other hand, he could fall back on the consigner who had the bureau behind him, he would give them the business, knowing he would be protected.

When a new rate is made from some point East to some common point where Coast and East are competing, the bureau would look into the matter. In this way, the Coast jobbers would get as good a rate or the old rate would go back.

This plan, I think, is worth looking into.

In conclusion, let me assure you that I will gladly do anything in my power to help better the adverse conditions I have described. Yours truly,

D. J. Alberga.

KEY-OPENER CANS

SNIDER'S BIG SUCCESS.

Causes That Brought Popularity With Both Dealer and Consumer.

It is impossible to find a retail grocery store of any considerable size on the Pacific Coast that does not have Snider's Tomatoe Catsup in a prominent place upon its shelves.

This proud position has been acquired by making an article of superlative excellence and by the expenditure of enormous sums of money in advertising.

The T. A. Snider Preserve Company has been forced to build factory after factory during the past twenty years, until now there are seven large plants in the most noted tomatoe district of the Middle West turning out tomato catsup, oyster cocktail sauce, as well as other condiments, and tomato soup, under the Snider label.

The demand for Snider's goods on the Pacific Coast has increased enormously during the last four years, during which time the account has been controlled by the Spohn-Patrick Company. The enormous sales in this market can be understood from the fact that at one time there were thirty-five cars moving toward the Pacific Coast to satisfy the demands of the California market alone. The sales for 1904 reached enormous figures.

The Oyster Cocktail Sauce of the Snider Preserve Company has proven a particular favorite. Its piquant tartness and delicate flavor making it a good seller wherever it has been introduced.

THE WAY OF PROFITS.

How the Profit of Selling Staples Often Depends on the Weight.

By Aaron H. Powers.

In bulk and value, a very great proportion of the grocer's sales consists of staples on which the profit is small.

"There is no profit in sugar" is almost a truism.

The cost of paper bags, the time used in tying up packages, and the amount spilled over the counter and floor eat up the profit shown in the difference between the buying and selling prices. The same is true of all the staples, such as rice, beans, etc., which are bought in bulk and retailed in packages.

Wise dealers try in many ways to save the greatest loss of all—overweight—by buying high-priced, sensitive scales. But once the pan is down, we know not how much overweight is given. In fact, the high-grade, sensitive scale is the greatest robber in the store when operated by a careless weigher.

We put high-priced, careful men in charge of the package department, and feel content until some customer objects to a shortweight package. But we never hear of the overweight packages. And through it all, we have a suspicion that we are buyng more sugar than we sell.

When the Loss Begins.

Our careful man grows weary. His back aches as he scoops and scoops from barrel and bin. His head and arm grow dull from "the little out and a little in." Then he grows careless in spite of his earnest desire to be exact.

The thrifty dealer sets his scales an ounce short and trusts to come out all right. But Mrs. Smith gets a package two ounces short and tells the whole neighborhood he is a robber.

The customers will not take lightweight packages.

The dealer loses his profits in giving overweight.

The man can get exact weights on a hand-operated, sensitive scale if he takes time enough. But the profit on beans and sugar requires quick handling, and he cannot take the time.

We have nearly all of us adopted the plan of putting up a stock of staples in $1.00, 50c, 25c and 10c packages in advance. This plan has helped lessen the strain and the customer is served more quickly and with less loss than in the past. Nevertheless, most grocers feel at some time that it would be to their advantage if no one would buy sugar from them.

It has proven necessary in the larger, well-conducted stores, to keep experts at the weighing. The grocer will find that it is far better and cheaper, as a rule, to let the boys rest than to have irregular weights.

Machinery Used Successfully.

There is automatic weighing machinery which does good work in factories. Such machinery requires the use of power and is usually very high priced. The grocer usually suffers the loss of a few dollars every week rather than sink some hundreds in a power plant which would be expensive to run.

This problem appealed to Mr. Chas. L. Bond, a scale expert of Los Angeles. For several years he has worked to solve it. Some thousands of his own and his friends' money have been spent in perfecting his ideas. He has had the advice and assistance of many prominent grocers and he even sent one of his machines to the convention of the State Grocers' Association at San Jose to get their advice and criticism. His company made a number of weighers from time to time and placed them in the hands of grocers, watching earnestly for any weaknesses that might develop or improvement that might be made.

Seldom, if ever, has a company been more careful in testing the merits of an article. No assurances or urgings from delighted users of these weighers have influenced them to sell these machines until Mr. Bond was himself satisfied that the weigher was complete.

The writer believes that by Mr. Bond's weigher a vexatious problem has been solved for the grocer, and that the saving of profits to the merchants in this State would build him a monument as great as the pyramids.

On Easy Terms.

Those who have been fortunate in having even the experimental machines are high in their praise, declaring they would not be without them for ten times their cost. Now they are being sold on terms that permit the weigher to more than pay for itself.

The Bond Weigher is really an attachment to a scale. Such is its nature, that it does not interfere with the regular use of the scale for all other purposes, and the grocer receives a high-grade scale in addition to his weigher.

The Bond Company are using the highest grade of Troemner and Fairbanks scales which will trip at the hundredth part of an ounce. Every package is exactly weighed and does not vary a grain.

The writer has watched the development of this aid to the grocer with a great deal of interest and has been amazed at its almost superhuman action. He has often been tempted to praise the weigher but has been coldly told by the Bond Company that when the proper time came, he would be permitted to sound his horn and they would back up his noise with good works.

Are Thoroughly Responsible.

The reward to the man who helps his fellowmen is always munificent. The writer feels an especial gratification in knowing that while Mr. Bond and his assistants have been hard at work making profits and saving backaches for the grocers, they have at the same time placed themselves in position to gather profits and ease for themselves.

The writer has known the management of the Bond Scale Co. from boyhood and can assure his friends among the trade that they will stand to their every promise, and are on the square.

Their advertisement appears on another page, and as they say there that every grocer is entitled to see a sample machine working in his store, I trust every grocer who can use such a machine to advantage will assert the rights to which he is entitled.

WINS NEW FRIENDS.

Grocers Find More Customers Using Borax Every Day.

It was not long ago that borax was selling for from 28 to 35 cents a pound. It all came from abroad then and the foreign producers had a combine and worked the great American people for all they were worth.

When the borax mines of the Pacific Coast were first being developed, the foreign trust tried the game of freeze-out. They crippled the industry severely until Uncle Sam took a hand and put on a tariff that excluded the foreign goods.

With the home market insured them, adventurous men were willing to take the risk of developing the borax deposits. This they did in the face of enormous natural obstacles, and with such success that, in spite of the high cost of labor and the teaming across the desert, the amount of borax produced was such that it could be sold for about 6 cents and still leave a profit.

As American capital was invested in borax, American brains was being used to teach people how to use it. As a consequence the consumption has increased from 600 tons in 1868 to about 10,000 tons for 1904.

With every year, new uses have been found for this precious salt which has done much to make housekeeping easier and living pleasanter.

Among the many uses of borax are the following:

It softens water.

It arrests diptheria.

It relieves hoarseness.

It is a cleanser and purifier.

It destroys microbes and bacteria.

It is a preserver of fresh meat, fish, fowl or game.

It is useful in the arts, manufactures and mines.

It is an antiseptic—the best known substance to arrest decay in animal food.

It is a flux for all metals—iron, gold, silver, etc., enabling them to melt at a lower temperature.

It is a glaze used in potteries, glass factories, and by enamellers for making a brilliant polish.

It is an emollient—valuable for the toilet; it softens and whitens the face and hands.

It is uninflammable and prevents fire, can be employed for rendering muslin fireproof.

It is a medicine and now enters into many pharmaceutical preparations.

It is a bleach and is used in laundries for preventing clothes from turning yellow.

It is used to enamel porcelain-coated iron, known as "graniteware."

In solution, mixed with linseed oil, it may be used for cheap painting.

It is used as a mordant in calico printing and in dyeing, and as a substitute for soap.

When dissolved in water, borax allays inflammation and is helpful for ulcers, wounds, bruises, insect bites, chilblains, etc. It is of great value in brushing the teeth. As a gargle it relieves sore throat. A little dissolved in the mouth relieves hoarseness or canker. Snuffed as a powder or snuffed up in solution, it affords invariable relief for catarrh.

Under the circumstances, the retail grocer who carries borax on his shelves and does not sell it must have something wrong with him.

A FAVORITE SAUCE.

It does not take long for an article with a reputation to increase a grocer's profits. Since Snider's Oyster Cocktail Sauce made its appearance, grocers have realized that it is a good "seller," and in consequence they have been compelled frequently to restock. The first carload consisting of the new one-half pint bottles, has arrived, and may now be purchased from any jobber. This favorite sauce is especially prepared for household use, and is a great appetizer. Its ingredients consist of the freshest and choicest tomatoes and pure condimentary substances. It can be purchased in pints, 2 dozen in a case, per case, $2.40. In ½ pints, 2 dozen in a case, per case, $1.40.

PACKS MUCH PROVISIONS.

Enormous Plant Employed to Prepare the Product of the Western Meat Co.

It is hard to realize the enormous amount of business transacted by the Western Meat Company, which has the largest provision plant on the Pacific Coast.

The gross sales reach the $5,000,000 mark annually.

An idea of the extent of their shipping business can be secured from the fact that they have more than thirty refrigerator cars set aside for their exclusive service between their plant and their distributing houses.

The Western Meat Co. is incorporated under the laws of California with a capital of $760,000.

It has its abattoirs and chief plant at South San Francisco in San Mateo county. It also has a large smoking establishment at Sixth and Townsend streets, where its principal offices are located, and has branch houses in Oakland, San Jose and Sacramento as well.

Large Killing Capacity.

The daily killing capacity of its plant is as much as 300 cattle, 300 calves, 1,200 sheep and 1,400 hogs. All the productions of this company are inspected by United States Government officials and bear the stamp of such inspection.

One of the greatest advantages of its plant is that it has facilities for shipment both by water and rail.

The market for the goods of the Western Meat Company has grown steadily until now it not only supplies a large part of the provisions used on this Coast and Hawaii, but also exports goods to China, Borneo, Siberia, Japan, and Straits Settlement, South America and Australia.

A Busy Staff.

In their offices at Sixth and Townsend streets, 40 clerks are kept busy constantly.

They have their private telephone exchange. There also comes to their offices direct wires of the Postal and Western Union Telegraph Companies. These are handled by their own operator.

At the plant at South San Francisco, in addition to their regular packing establishment and stock yards, they have their own box factory where they make their own lard and canned meat boxes.

They have their own printing machine by which they do their own box branding.

They have also their own tin shop where they make their own cans for tinned meats.

They have their own ice factory where they make their own ice for refrigerating purposes and for distributing to branch houses.

Cover the State.

Besides their army of clerks and office employes, the Western Meat Company has a full corps of live stock buyers continuously in the field. These men devote themselves to buying desirable live stock in all parts of the State for shipment to San Francisco.

They also have a full corps of experienced salesmen covering every section of the Coast in order to be able to provide the hams, bacon, lard and canned meats that are needed by the grocers and bakers throughout the Western country.

Every year has seen an increase in the business of the company since it was first instituted. With the opening up of our new fields for commercial activity the next few years will unquestionably see a still larger growth.

AUSTRALIAN WAS PLEASED.

Hon. Geo. Nesbitt Tells His Home Folks About National Association.

Hon. George Nesbitt, Alderman, J. P., and vice-president of the Country Storekeepers' Association of New South Wales, who attended the recent convention of the National Retail Grocers' Association, held in San Francisco last May, was pleased with his reception and with American ways. He gives his impressions in a letter to the "Lismore Chronicle," in which he says:

On landing at San Francisco I waited on the secretary of the San Francisco Retail Merchants' Association and learned that I was the first delegate to arrive in connection with the National Convention of Retail Merchants of the United States, which was to commence on Monday, May 2.

Right here I will give some of my impressions of the City of the Golden Gate. Generally speaking, the city struck me as a place full of business activity, but not to the extent in which speculation is allowed to take the place of sound business. There are very fine buildings in the principal thoroughfares, among them being several sky-scrapers, such as the "Call" office, "Spreckles" and the "Chronicle" buildings. The banks have also good habitations, and the public offices, such as the City Hall, are magnificent buildings.

I must draw attention to the large departmental stores. These large stores are planned on the latest American principles for progressive trading, and employ many hundreds of hands. The manner in which the goods are displayed in the windows and in the interior of the immense flats is excellent. Nothing is hidden. Everything is exposed to the view of the customers who throng there in thousands and have no difficulty in selecting anything they may require, without much help from the salespeople. The stocks are well kept, well assorted, and thoroughly representative of the manufactures of the world.

Appreciates Courtesies.

Of course, the great scene of attraction for me was the National Convention of Retail Merchants of the United States. As you know, I had the honor to attend this convention as the official delegate from the Country Storekeepers' Association of New South Wales, and indirectly as the representative of the retail merchants of this State, and as a matter of fact, I was looked upon as the representative of all the retail mercantile interests of Australia, being the only delegate sitting in the convention from the Southern Hemisphere. The business men of Australia were highly honored by the welcome tendered me by the business men and mercantile leaders of America.

From the time I arrived in San Francisco every courtesy and consideration that could be extended was showered upon me.

Many States Represented.

The official opening of this important convention took place in the great hall of the Mechanics' Institute, and was signalized by the presence of representatives from over 365 business organizations, from thirty-three States of the American Union. They came from New York, Boston, and other centers in the far East; from Georgia, Louisiana and Alabama in the South; Wisconsin and Minnesota in the far North, and the gathering represented many thousands of the associated business men in the United States. They came from the North, South, East and West by special trains, and were met by a reception committee at Sacramento, the capital city of California, where the trains were decked with flowers and the delegates were entertained by the citizens and a special committee representing the United Associations of California. Upon arrival at San Francisco, the St. Francis hotel was made the headquarters of the delegates, and it would have done our business men good to have seen the good will and friendship manifested there.

Addresses of Welcome.

On the opening day of the convention the delegates were welcomed by President Corcoran of San Francisco Retail Merchants' Association, and by Mr. Joseph A. Stulz, president of the Californian Retailers' Association, and a hearty and cordial welcome was also extended by his worship, the Mayor of San Francisco, the Hon. Eugene Schmitz.

Felicitations were warmly extended on behalf of the delegates by the Hon. Mr. Scherer of Pretoria, Ill., ex-president of the National Association of Retail Merchants of the United States.

Australia Called For.

At this stage I had the honor to be called on to respond for Australia, and on rising to do so was received with tumultous applause. Needless to say, I did not take this as a personal compliment, but as a compliment to those who had sent me, viz.: The Country Storekeepers' Association of New South Wales.

To the best of my ability I conveyed to those assembled in the great convention greetings from their brethren in far away Australia, and thanks for the very cordial reception they had given me.

At one of the lat er business sessions I was privileged to deliver an address on "Organization in the State of New South Wales," and on the subjects of the Country Storekeepers' Associations of New South Wales, which had sent me to represent its members on that memorable occasion.

I pointed out that although a new association, we had got together the most representative men from all the principal towns of New South Wales, and formed the largest association in the State.

Thanks For Mr. Nesbitt.

My remarks were met with the warmest applause, and when I sat down Mr. F. B. Fancher of Sacramento moved a very hearty vote of thanks to me and to their brothers beyond the sea in fair Australia who had sent me there.

As it will be my duty to give details of this business convention to my association direct, I will not refer to them here.

Suffice it to say that the enthusiasm and business conduct shown in that great National Convention at San Francisco demonstrated to my mind clearly the utility of organization in the interests of our country traders here.

I may mention that in connection with that great convention the social side of life was not forgotten, in as much as picnics, luncheons, banquets, excursions around the city and theatre nights were tendered to us in all directions, and to filch a line from a San Francisco trade journal, "Everything was wide open for us except the jail."

Lesson of the Convention.

When it is taken into consideration that the delegates came from an area far exceeding the extent of the whole of the commonwealth, and that for a time they left aside their individual occupations to attend this national convocation of business men, it goes to show how self-sacrificing they are and how deep and practical are their interests in the work of organization, thereby showing us what our duty is, not only to ourselves, but to one another, if we mean to make the Country Storekeepers' Association of New South Wales the foremost and most influential body of traders in the commonwealth.

Food Show of Interest.

During the days of the convention a gigantic exhibition of the food products of California was held in the lower hall of the Mechanics' Institute, and proved, not only to myself, but to every delegate, the resources of the country for fresh food products. The exhibits were tastefully arranged, showing goods excellently packed and of great merit. The brightest among the exhibits at this most interesting place was from the Italian Swiss Wine Colony, a tract of country converted from barren waste into a wine-growing district, producing immense quantities of wine of very good vintage, and reflecting the utmost credit on the spirited proprietors.

The concluding entertainment tendered by the San Francisco retail merchants to the delegates was the banquet in the Mechanics' Pavilian, at which covers were laid for 400 guests. Speeches suitable to such occasions were delivered by the Mayor of San Francisco (the Hon. Eugene Schmitz), President Lott (Chicago), and representative men of both the wholesale and retail trade.

FILLS A NEED.

An Egg Carton That Will Help Both Dealer and Producer.

When one stops to think, the usual method of handling eggs appears radically wrong. The producer buys a filler for his cases and the retailer buys a paper box for delivery to his customers.

In no other line of goods will you find the producer using one package and the retailer another. There is no reason why it should be so in the egg business habit is not a reason.

It was to correct this lack that the Ferguson Egg Carton was put on the market.

It may be used first as a filler by the producer and then as a delivery package by the retailer.

Advantages to Dealers.

It is intended that the retailer shall buy the carton and furnish it to his shipper. The producer thus saves the cost of his fillers. The advantages to the retailer are:

1. No transferring of eggs.
2. No breakage.
3. Great saving in time.
4. Shows who shipped bad eggs.
5. No miscounts in filling orders.
6. No breakage in delivering orders.
7. No complaints from customers.
8. In many cases better prices can be obtained.
9. No fillers nor half-filled cases "kicking" around the floor.
10. Saving of floor space.
11. Saving of handling in candling eggs may be candled without removing from carton.
12. Makes selected eggs look like selected eggs.
13. Makes possible the use of a brand.
14. Opportunity for advertising.
15. Stamps the store as progressive.

Some of these points alone offer enough inducement for every progressive grocer and market to use the Ferguson Egg Carton.

Advantages to the Consumer.

If none but the best eggs are sold in the Ferguson Egg Carton, the customer soon learns that fact and shows a preference for eggs so packed, even at 2½c to 3c a dozen higher than the market. Furthermore, this carton makes a convenient and safe place in the pantry for eggs to remain until the last one is used.

The Ferguson Egg Carton enables the small producer to develop a private family trade and get better prices. To do this the eggs should always be large and selected, branded and delivered in a neat package like the Ferguson Egg Carton.

Besides these many advantages the Ferguson Egg Carton is the lowest priced carrier on the market.

SOME GOOD ADVICE.

The Proper Way to Handle Your Bookkeeping.

The writer has recently been talking to several retail grocers in and about San Francisco who are using a system of keeping their customers' accounts which saves them a great deal of work and worry.

A separate book of duplicate tags for each customer is so arranged that the one writing gives the customer a tag showing the total of her account and the duplicates remaining in the book form her ledger account.

Mr. Miller of the Miller-Walker Co., Berkeley, who had used what was considered the best method of bookkeeping, said that this was the best thing he had ever had in his store. Topp Bros., the well-known Haight street grocers of San Francisco, expressed themselves as being thoroughly satisfied with the results attained and are advising their friends to use the same system.

THE FRUIT CANNING INDUSTRY OF CALIFORNIA.

By Isader Jacobs, President Cal. Canneries Co.

To furnish a review of the fruit canning industry for 1904 would necessitate stating at the beginning that it was the most extraordinary season ever known in the State. It is true that every fruit season in California is different from any other season, but the promise held forth at the beginning of this season was the most brilliant the State has ever known. Fruit crops in every line promised to be the heaviest in the history of the State, but the late rains coming along resulted in a sort of mildew affecting the blossoms and pollen, so that the conditions were entirely changed. It must, however, be borne in mind that the fruit canning industry of California takes a small proportion only of the crop; were it not for this fact a tremendous shortage would have developed in the output of canned fruits, and even as it was a shortage did develop in peaches of all varieties and descriptions, which were most seriously affected by the climatic conditions existing in the spring of 1904. Apricots were also seriously affected, but this did not very materially injure the output of canned apricots because there is only about 20 per cent of the crop used in canning, yet some sections of the State were practically a complete failure, notably in Alameda county, where the shortage was more apparent than has ever been known since the industry began. The pack of canned apricots during 1904 was not large, and it may be said of this article as well as all other fruits that the pack of first-class goods of extra standards and higher grades has gone into consumption, or rather has left the State and gone into different markets.

Pears were a very good crop of good quality; so also were plums and cherries.

There is a decided shortage in the present supply in California of canned fruits, consisting of extra standards and higher grades of pears, apricots and peaches of all varieties; in fact it may be said there are practically none of the grades and varieties mentioned in first hands. This leaves the field clear for 1905, although it must be admitted that owing to the irregular quality of goods put on the market by some canners, the trade is turning largely to the brands and goods packed by reliable and responsible packers. To such an extent is this the case that it is predicted that in future it will be almost foolhardy for any one to attempt to enter the canning business with a view to making any profits out of it. Those canners having the trade who will maintain their quality can increase their pack and sell their goods, but new concerns coming into the field will have great difficulty in disposing of their product even at a considerable loss. The past experience of the last few years has demonstrated this fact because the cheaper grades of goods known as seconds and water goods are invariably sold by the canner at a price that results in a considerable loss, they being put on the market at figures ranging below the cost of production. This is even the case with standards, so that the only profits to be made are in the higher grades of goods, provided they can be sold at legitimate figures. If they are sacrificed, then they also net a loss to the canner.

On the whole it may be said that the output for 1904 would range about the same as 1903, viz., about 2,000,000 cases fruits. The quality on the average has been good. As to profits to canners it has proven undoubtedly a disastrous year to nearly all canners of fruit in California, some of the losses ranging very heavy.

It is true a few canners made some money, but in the majority of cases heavy losses resulted. Large advance sales were made at low figures and canners had great difficulty in filling their sales even to the extent of 75 per cent guaranteed in their contracts, particularly on peaches. Cling varieties of peaches ruled extraordinarily high, at a price that netted canners considerable loss on their early sales.

Several canneries remained closed during 1904 and in view of the outcome of this season it is presumed that several others will remain closed during 1905. It is only a question of how long certain canners can go on losing money, and it is supposed that there must be an end somewhere.

The season of 1904 opened on bare markets of first-class canned fruits, and the fact that the output for 1904 was not heavy is an indication that goods will go rapidly into consumption. This of course refers to the better class of goods of known brands of responsible packers. It must also be borne in mind that the buyers during 1904 pursued an extraordinarily conservative course in making their purchases; in fact, the heavy buying on the part of certain wholesale grocers, as was in vogue in previous years, seems to be gradually dying out and the buyers purchase as they need the goods to supply their trade. The result is that it takes away an element of speculation in the business, and the packer that manufactures a large line of goods without an outlet will in the future be in the predicament of either having to carry a large quantity of goods and being eaten up with storage, insurance and interest, or else curtail the pack down to the legitimate requirements of his trade, or else dispose of his goods promptly, and if he has not the outlet to sell them at a loss. Either one of the three methods would be a dilemma to such a packer and would mean loss in any event.

Tomatoes—There was considerable carry-over of tomatoes from 1903, and taking into consideration the large carry-over and pack in the East, it isolated California's tomato trade to the Pacific Coast States, so that even with a falling off in the packing of at least 25 per cent as against 1903 there are still considerable canned tomatoes in first hands. With the high rate of freight existing in comparison with Eastern points, which prevents California canners from going into Texas points and the territories, as well as the far Northwest, the future of the canned tomato business in California is not particularly bright. It must also be borne in mind that where there is keen railroad competition the packers in such sections have the advantage and tomatoes are now being canned in Oregon and Utah and in other sections, which takes the trade away from California. However, with the light pack that there has been for 1904, and taking into consideration the fact that all the California and Pacific Coast jobbers have purchased very sparingly and only for immediate requirements, it may be assumed that the present stock will go into consumption before new packing, and it is quite likely they will do better than at present, particularly when a lot of the off-grade tomatoes are disposed of, for there is no article where there is as great a variation in the pack as in canned tomatoes. Many lots are put upon the market at considerable below the cost of packing of legitimate goods, but it can be assumed that it will only be a question of time before buyers will become alive to the situation and will discriminate on the brands and packs. There is nothing that will bring this about quicker than the low-grade goods being turned out by some canners. The quality for 1904 of the better known packers has been extraordinarily good. The profits for 1904 canned tomatoes have been extraordinarily bad; in fact, instead of profits, there has been a positive loss in this branch of the industry.

Asparagus—The serious injury in the river districts during the spring of 1904 caused by freshets resulted in wiping out the pack entirely of one of the leading asparagus packers of the State, thus taking out of consideration about 100,000 to 150,000 cases. This was felt in the trade, and were it not for the fa[illegible]ong Island crop of aspara[illegible] heaviest known in years, the shortage would have been felt East to a much greater extent, for several other packers who had made preparations to can asparagus from the river districts were also prevented by the floods, but some of these will undoubtedly be able to pack duing 1905.

The pack of 1904 is closely cleaned up, and the field will be clear for 1905 packing, but at the high prices prevailing and being asked for the fresh asparagus it is questionable whether the outlook is very brilliant for profits in packing; in fact, asparagus is an article that must be canned properly, and unless thoroughly understood it is very difficult to turn out a good article, and if the article is inferior it is very difficult to sell it at all. In addition to this it must be borne in mind that if prices rule too high consumption will cease, as has been the case in other commodities where abnormal advances have taken place.

It may be safely predicted that the season of 1905 will see a full pack of asparagus again, even though one of the leading sections may not produce any. There were so many new asparagus patches planted a few years ago that some of these will come into bearing this year, and many of them in future years, so that the output in years to come is bound to be increased, provided the ravages of asparagus rust do not affect the plants too seriously, and our university claims that they have now a remedy to prevent this.

Corn—California is not much of a factor in the packing of corn, yet it is presumed this business will increase. Most of the canned corn consumed in California comes from the Western States. The price of this opened rather high, but subsequently declined. After much of the purchasing was done the railroads raised the rates to 90c. per hundred, and this has caused a loss to the jobbers having purchased. On account of the high prices prevailing the buying was not heavy, so that it is presumed the present supply will go into consumption in California. Prices of futures have already been named at an average of ten cents per dozen less than 1904 prices.

CANNED GOODS.

Canned Corn.

The looking ahead at the corn situation does not bring any great degree of comfort to either the owner or packer; outside of high grades low prices are likely to prevail throughout 1905; the only way to side-track this probability is to curtail packing, but will the packers do it? We doubt it. No packer wants to let his investment lie idle, or reduce his output as long as there is a chance to earn an extra dollar by running to the full capacity of his plant; to the old there will each year be added a certain per cent of new packing-houses, each of which will swell the stream. It may be that the corn packers will attempt some united action looking to a remedy, but just now the horizon is without a sign of any such movement. So, with the surplus large, if the 1905 pack is another record-breaker, the packer may expect a demoralized market. The spot market is quiet and not the least interest is shown by either jobber or retailer.

Canned Tomatoes.

We compliment those packers on the Coast who are giving close attention to the quality and quantity in the can of tomatoes they are putting on the market. The experience of some of the Eastern packers in jamming into a can broken, sloppy tomatoes and a large percentage of water should serve as a warning to all packers; most of this kind of stuff was rejected and the packers lost heavily. In times like the present when the output of both tomatoes and corn is excessive, the least deviation from what is contracted for will be used as an excuse to make a rejection, but honest, solid, full packing wins every time. Our home market is firm for both 3 lb. and gallons, but there is but little trading.

CANNED FRUITS.

Some of the Conditions That Affected Business for 1904.

There are two serious evils eating into the heart of the canned goods business which it would be well for the packers to heed.

The first is the establishment of many canneries, financed and managed with little regard to the one prime requisite, viz., quality.

How any packer can be so blind as not to see the damning effect of putting his name on a can of fruit that is away "off" is beyond any sensible person's comprehension. That it is done every year, any jobber will testify. The packer should know that he only succeeds in establishing in the minds of the wholesale distributor and consumer a belief that his brand is "no good." He never can rise again after he has gone down in the mire of inferiority.

The writer has in mind a brand that once stood high with Eastern consumers but which through rapacity or rank idiocy, was allowed to deteriorate until now it is a regular hobo among California canned goods.

The packing of poor stock in thin syrup to be sold as standards, under the name and label of a reputable company, is not only a crime against the State of California but is a blunder fatal to the packer. The other feature, so fraught with injury to both canner and the good name of California is the placing of the word California on the front of the label of cheap packing. If it must be done, put it in small type on the rear of the label, just as if you were ashamed to acknowledge your own.

Peaches—The trade journals have repeatedly told the story of the shortage in pack, more especially of lemon clings until the trade is familiar with the details. Both jobbers and retailers have heard the news from brokers and salesmen until now this feature of our report is somewhat shelfworn.

Quotations by packers were early withdrawn as it was evident existing contracts would have to be cut. A few packers found it impossible to fill any of their orders and others could only ship a certain per cent of their contracts. Some factories could not obtain sufficient fruit to justify opening their houses. Of all fruits, there were packed in 1904, based upon estimates, 2,800,000 cases.

Apricots did not come up in grade to the usual standards and most of the packing was of the smaller sizes.

Cherries have been closely sold up; prices for the fruit from the trees were high, so the pack was light; the crop was excellent.

Bartlett Pears received the usual attention and a fairly full pack resulted. After filling existing orders, the stocks left in California were small.

CANNED TOMATOES.

What the Past Season Has Done for Dealers and Packers.

The packing this season will fall far short of that of last year, when it ran up to 884,243 cases of 2½ and 3-lb. tins. In view of the low prices prevailing and the general apathy on the part of jobbers who were slow to stock up largely, it was fortunate that the pack was so light. The great multitude of packers in the East were selling at cost and below cost of production, therefore a full pack here would have meant a badly demoralized market and no margins. Prices have steadied themselves on the Coast and are already showing the influence of the lighter pack.

There is no doubt that the close of the season of 1904-5 will find all solid-packed tomatoes pretty well cleaned up. The pack for 1904, as closely as can be estimated at present, will amount to 730,011 cases of 2½ and 3-lb. tins. This estimate includes gallons figured on a basis of 1 dozen gallons as the equivalent of 3 dozen No. 3 tins.

The total pack of tomatoes in the United States for 1903 was 10,282,309 cases of 3-lb. tins, and for 1904, 8,671,053 cases of 3-lb. tins.

When the packing season of 1903 opened, the supply of tomatoes in the United States was reduced to a basis of petty trading because of scarcity. Then followed the immense pack of 1903, which was by far the largest ever known.

The clean-up of 1902-3 encouraged growers and packers to largely increase their output. Following this pack, comes the large one of 1904 and the inevitable has happened—selling price of Eastern tomatoes today are on an unprofitable basis.

The packers in California are not so flagrant sinners in the direction of packing poor stock as are their Eastern brethren. Yet they, too, are not above being tempted.

The Advocate says DON'T.

Additional tomato news is given under our Market Review.

CANNED CORN.

Review of the Past and Outlook for the Coming Year.

Some of the "Western" corn sent into California this season created serious disturbance by its varying quality, and much of it was rejected by the jobbers as far from standard. Packers who ship tough, common or poorly processed corn for "standard" ought to and have paid the cost, and we believe the lessons learned by this season's experience will not be lost upon them since they were obtained at a pretty good price.

The years 1901-02-03 were years of light packing, being on an average of 4,693,313 cases each year.

Prices rose to 1.20 and 1.25 for N. Y. State Standard; 1.05 to 1.25 for Maryland grades, and fancy grades were sold as high as 1.50.

These prices stimulated increased acreages with an output double that of every year since 1890.

The early frosts in Maine and unfavorable conditions in New York State cut down the output in those states. In spite of all this, there were packed 11,462,969 cases, against 4,851,146 cases in 1903.

During the latter part of 1903 enormous sales of corn on contract were made to jobbers, and to retailers. The previous two years of scarcity and high prices made both wholesale dealers and retailers eager to contract ahead. On the higher grades of corn, in these two years, the deliveries were not made in full. Neither jobber nor retailer could have their contracts completed.

A Heavy Demand Created.

These conditions were influential factors in creating a heavy demand and an eagerness to buy long before the packing of 1904. In consequence the output has been widely distributed and prices are weak on the medium and low grades. Both Maine and New York State brands, owing to the short pack in those States, are firm and the supply is somewhat curtailed.

When the year opened, the Western packers had made large sales of corn on contract at 72½ and 75c per doz. at factory. Maryland packers had also obtained large orders at from 60c for field corn, 65 and 67½ for standards, up to 75c for No. 2. Evergreen, 80 and 85c for shoe-peg, and 85c for Maine style. New York and Maine packers were slow in making contracts. Some sales were made in December, 1903, at 80 and 85c for New York State, and 1.00 by Maine packers. Spot corn, at that time, was high.

How the Prices Varied.

In February, 1904, Maine made a price of 97½ and 1.00. In April, 1.05 was the ruling price, as packers had sold out.

In September, Maryland corn was offered at 55 and 62½c for standard; 75 and 80c for Maine style, and 85 and 90c for fancy.

Owing to the curtailment of their pack through frost and other causes, the deliveries from Maine ranged all the way from 30 to 85 per cent; New York, 25 to 100 per cent.

The prices already named to the jobbers for '05 pack are for Iowa corn 62½c at factory; Illinois 67½ and 72½ for standard, 80c for fancy, all f. o. b factory. New York names an 80c price for standards, 95c fancy, 1.05 for Country Gentleman, all f. o. b. factory. Maryland quotes for 1905 pack 67½ for Maine style. As showing the wild fluctuations in corn during 1904, Standards sold at 55c at the opening of the year, ran up to 1.05 and down as low as 55. Maine style opened at 1.25, remained stationary for awhile, then dropped to 75. Spot market prices of Eastern and Western corn are noted in the usual market review of the week.

CANNED SALMON.

Conditions That Have Affected the Market During 1904.

At the beginning of 1904 the market on canned salmon was in a more or less chaotic condition, as owing to the high prices put out in 1903 by the largest Alaska factor, consumption was restricted, and a large amount of Alaska red salmon was carried over and with very few exceptions every Alaska company had unsold a large proportion of its 1903 pack.

The low price on pink fish put out in 1903 by the leading factor was still in effect in January last, although a large number of independent packers refused to meet this price, with the result that even as late as February, there were in first hands over 400,000 cases of pink fish. During February, March and April, a very heavy demand set in from Japan for pink salmon, with the result that the market rapidly advanced from 50 cents in January to 60 cents in February, 70 cents in March and the last holdings were closed out at 75 cents in April.

A Big Carry Over.

While this large demand from Japan cleaned up the stocks of pink fish, it had little or no effect on red salmon, and even though the largest factor in the business maintained its price of $1.30 throughout the spring and summer, independent packers offered and sold at prices ranging from $1.25 down to $1.15. So that when the prices on 1904 pack were opened the smaller canners were sold out of their carry-over of both red and pink, whereas the largest factor, having held the umbrella, went into the new season with the bulk of the red salmon it had on hand at the first of the year.

Meantime the smaller canners were offering 1904 pack Alaska red at different prices and on different terms, with the result that when the prices by the largest concern were opened, the independent packers had virtually sold all of their 1904 pack, and there is now very little red, medium red, or pink salmon held by packers outside of the largest Alaska factor.

Situation Relieved by Short Pack.

While there was a large carry-over on Alaska salmon of both pink and red in the beginning of the year, other grades such as Sockeyes, Chinooks and Oregon fish were closely cleaned up, and when the prices were put out for 1904 pack of Columbia river Chinooks, the bulk of the pack was sold within two weeks after prices were named.

The same situation existed on Sockeyes. The new season opened with the market bare of Sockeyes, and while prices named were very high, viz: $1.50 a dozen, short deliveries were made by almost every packer in the business. So that today packers and jobbers are virtually sold out of both Chinooks and Sockeyes, and the only canned salmon that buyers will be able to purchase between now and the new season is Alaska salmon. While there is a very large carry-over of Alaska red, stocks of pink Alaska are very light, and stocks of medium red Alaska are virtually exhausted.

Stocks Light in First Hands.

From a very careful investigation we can safely assert that stocks of salmon in jobbers' hands are light. Very few, if any, jobbers are carrying any Sockeyes or Chinooks, and a large majority of the wholesale grocers have on hand hardly sufficient Alaska salmon to carry them until the first of May, when the heavy demand usually sets in. As very few Chinooks can be delivered to dealers before July, and no Sockeyes can reach the jobber until August, it is the consensus of opinion that, eliminating Japan as a factor entirely, the normal demand between now and the first of June will take the bulk, if not all the salmon that remains on the coast today.

While the market on red Alaska is $1.10, some outside lots are offered at $1.05. The stock of medium red is light, and 95 cents f. o. b. here is the lowest figure named. Pink Alaska is quoted at 70 to 75 cents according to brand. These prices are to jobbers in round lots.

It is estimated that the salmon pack of 1904 will approximate 3,200,000 cases; in 1903 the pack was 3,600,000 cases, and 4,259,000 cases in 1902. The smaller pack of 1904 will help clear the market of the surplus stock and give the pack of 1905 a chance to earn a fair profit on the year's output.

SALT IN CALIFORNIA.

Review of the Growth of An Industry That Has Produced Much Wealth.

Perhaps no point in the world is more favorably situated for the manufacture of salt than the shores of the San Francisco Bay. The ease with which it is made, by sun evaporation, during the long, dry summer, and the convenience to market (freight being a vital feature) puts the local industry in a position to command the entire trade of the Pacific.

It is probably about forty years since some enterprising individuals realized these favorable conditions, and began to make, from the ocean water, salt for local consumption. Salt was at that time commanding from $25 to $30 per ton. Since then the industry has had its ups and downs, but the main trend has been steadily towards improvement both in quality and quantity, until now, not only the common grades previously imported from Mexico are supplanted by a local product that is cheaper and better, but also the very finest grades of table and butter salts, heretofore imported from the Eastern States and Europe, are being successfully produced, with the result that San Francisco has practically ceased to be an importer and is steadily encroaching on the export field.

The length of time that it takes to get a salt plant in operation (nearly five years) has always been a great temptation to speculators. It gives them an opportunity to manipulate the market for a length of time without fear of other competition. The margin of cost between the local product and the cost of the imported, leaves a wide margin of profit.

About four years ago some bright Eastern minds managed to so manipulate the market as to advance prices on the coarse product from $3 to $18 per ton, clearing up a fortune. They would doubtless have been continuing their profitable career, except that their boldness carried them to such a point that Uncle Sam interfered.

For the past two years a fierce war of competition has been on, which led to the breaking of all previous records for low prices.

It now remains to be seen how long the present disastrous prices may, or can, continue, or how soon some Moses may arise to lead the demoralized salt producers to the promised land of profit and prosperity.

"It is an ill wind that blows no good," and if the fierce competition has led to nothing else, it has enlarged the market and improved the product and decreased the stocks.

We feel that the time is ripe for something to be "doing."

The annual output of salt in California is approximately 60,000 tons.

CURED FRUITS.

Conditions That Have Affected Prices During 1904.

Peaches—The light crop of peaches this year brought with it a strong and active market all the season through. The crop of peaches carried over from 1902 added to the crop of 1903 made a total of 22,000 tons; but this combined stock was practically consumed during 1903, leaving little or no supply going into 1904. As the present crop is estimated to be but 11,000 tons, it is plainly seen that a large shortage is assured for 1905 before the next season's supply can be drawn upon. Every feature of the market favors good, full prices in the future.

Apricots—All the apricots of 1903 were closed out before the end of the year, leaving the 1904 crop unburdened with any carry-over. But, like peaches, apricots are considerably short of the normal yield; the estimate for this year is for a total of not over 7,500 tons; in 1903 the yield was 10,500 tons. The fruit is not running as good as usual this year, much of it being tarnished and not over large, leading to some protests on the part of the receivers and distributors. While the apricot is not so great a favorite in the East and is not so large a seller, yet the fact of so total a clean-up in 1903 proves a growing appreciation of this fruit; peaches have always been known and used by consumers from the day of the common, poor, sun-dried affair, "way-back," to the present with its delicious evaporated fruit; but the apricot had to make its way by degrees and, like the debutante, had to be introduced before it was taken and given a place commensurate to its worth. The amount of apricots remaining in California, is quite small and the crop of 1905 will not be obliged to carry any old burdens.

PRUNES.

In writing of prunes, the older minds sadly go back to the days of fly-specked and shrivelled fruit that used to lie, uncovered, gathering the dust of the corner grocer. Prunes were little known then and as little appreciated for their worth.

Since those days, progress has been made and more prunes and better prunes have resulted.

More care is taken in the preparing and handling of the fruit and the keen-witted fly no longer rests in tranquility and revels in a feast upon this delicious and healthful food. For the day of the prune package is here, as is the day for packing goods of almost every sort; and prunes need no longer be exposed to the dirt of the shop and the contamination of dirty insect life.

Both in boxes of 25 and 50 lbs. each, and in smaller packages that retail at 10 and 15c each, this fruit, under brands that guarantee quality and weight, are now being widely distributed. The day is already in sight when prunes in bulk and bags will give way to the clear, neat safety package The consumers are demanding protection and the grocer concedes the wisdom of this demand and is ever ready to give the patron just what he wants.

The fruit grower or packer that lends himself to this just and reasonable modern idea of selling his fruit will richly reap the benefits of his sagacity. It is needless to cite the rapid rise of the cracker idea as one of the cleverest and strongest arguments in favor of placing prunes in small packages, clean, handy and desirable.

Santa Clara Valley holds the champion belt for the most prolific source of supply of prunes in the United States. They claim as their portion one-half of all the prunes produced in this country. Besides the California prune, there is the Italian prune grown in Oregon and Washington, also a small quantity of the French variety.

The low prices of prunes during 1904, being below cost of production, have been discouraging in the extreme. There was a scarcity of 20-30s and 30-40s. These have been marketed at good prices. But the smaller sizes were sold as low as 1 cent per pound

The growers are at a loss for a remedy.

Several years since, a campaign of publicity was decided upon and some catchy advertising was begun which attracted customers. This was shortly abandoned, and since then, the poor prune has been allowed to drift towards hopelessness.

That this condition must and will be remedied, is without a doubt. Prunes are too important an article of diet to remain neglected. A new campaign of education will of necessity arise, new ways of cooking and using the fruit will be generously devised and promulgated, resulting in a large increase in consumption.

The output of prunes for 1904 was 197,000,000 lbs., that for 1903, 165,000,000, and for 1904, estimated at 125,000,000 pounds. The yield in the Pacific Northwest was short of that of 1903-4 about 80 per cent, or 6,000,000 pounds against that of 30,000,000 pounds.

The prune has been the butt of many jokes. The comic weeklies have directed many shafts of ridicule in the direction of this fruit. But the day of the prune is coming swiftly. The "poor prune" will then be replaced with a new term of expression of its exalted position in the estimation of the consuming public.

RAISINS.

The putting of one pound cartons of seedless raisins on the market has proven an immense success. Not only do these raisins reach the home thoroughly protected, but they save the housewife the process of seeding, which was both inconvenient and badly done.

It is surprising to note the growth of the seeded raisin business, and all within a period of eight or ten years.

Raisins are seeded by machinery of ingenious character which produces results that cannot be had by the old hand process. More than 60 per cent of the raisins consumed in this country are now seeded.

Fully three-fourths of the raisins produced come from around Fresno, which is the hub and center.

At one time, and until the present crop, the Raisin Growers' Association controlled fully 85 per cent of raisins grown. There was a fatal lack of harmony among the growers, adverse criticism weakening the efforts of the association, with the usual result of disintegration and abandonment.

Differences of opinion resulted in the carrying over until spring of some 28,000 tons of raisins. As the summer months are not the months of large consumption, there was no outlet at fair prices for this surplus. Finally more than half of this carry-over (all there was left of it) was disposed of to the packing interests later in the year

The output of raisins has increased from 85,000,000 pounds in 1893 to 120,000,000 pounds in 1903. The smallest crop was in 1896, with a record of 68,250,600 pounds. The estimate for 1904 is 75,000,000 pounds.

The growers looked forward to a fine and a large crop last fall. But the early, heavy and long continued wet weather brought with it great loss and keen disappointment Some packers found themselves without a pound of fruit undamaged. In most cases, a portion of the crop was saved in good condition. This damage has cut down the crop of merchantable first-class raisins to about 28,000 to 30,000 tons.

The growers have about closed out their holdings and prices are strong.

The future of the raisin industry is a problem yet to be solved.

How to bring about a community of interests that will guarantee the highest pecuniary returns compatible with supply and demand may well employ the most critical and able minds connected with the raisin industry.

That such a consummation is feasible is not beyond a reasonable hope

WALNUTS AND ALMONDS.

Almonds produced in California the present season were smaller in quantity and less satisfactory in quality than usual; the crop was a disappointment to growers and dealers, inasmuch as much of the product was gummy and inferior; the yield for the fiscal year, Oct. 31, 1903, to Nov. 31, 1904, amounted to 6,400,000 pounds, or 320 cars. Walnuts were even more of a failure because of the large proportion of inferior nuts, causing rejections, differences and loss; the crop for the fiscal year from Oct. 31, 1903, to Nov. 31, 1904, was 11,000,000 pounds, but so large a proportion of this amount was these inferior nuts that the sum total would be considerably diminished if the facts were obtainable. The conditions and methods of culture of the walnut in California are so far superior to those in vogue in France that the future of the California product is one full of promise; in time it is our firm belief that the California walnut will supercede that of Europe and that gradually importations will dwindle to an insignificant proportion of the whole. But before this change can be wrought more acreage must be given over to the cultivation of the walnut so that with a larger yield and improved and cheaper methods of growing and preparing the nuts for market we will be in a position to compete with the foreign product in price.

THE BEAN OUTPUT OF THE COUNTRY.

The bean crop of California is divided with limas, bayos, red-kidneys, blackeyes and white navies, with limas much the more important.

Few, if any limas, are grown outside of California and these are cultivated successfully in a limited area in Ventura and Santa Barbara counties

The other varieties are grown in the Sacramento, San Joaquin and San Luis Obispo districts.

The early rains did a vast amount of damage and to make any estimate of the loss would be purely guess work.

It is next to impossible, outside of limas, to get any accurate statement of the output of beans in this State, not only for 1904 but for previous years. Those whose position in the bean market entitles them to front rank would not venture to make an estimate.

There are such large numbers of damaged beans on the market that they are a drag and prices vary considerably.

The crop of limas in 1901 was about 480,000 sacks. Of these, there are 300,000 sacks still in warehouses awaiting an opportunity to sell at a price which has been arbitrarily decided upon by the growers.

The price asked for limas is out of proportion to market price of these beans. This makes a dull market and an uncertain one

RARE CUPPING VALUE.

Everything is subject to perpetual change, and all the products of human activity are constantly being transformed in a very short space of time. Motion is inherent to life, doing and undoing, inventing and improving are its principal characteristics; to do and undo are the essential elements of everything man knows. Coffee grown on mountains and brought down and kept at lower altitudes becomes soggy. It is out of its true element, and takes years to properly age or become truly fit for consumption But when conveyed to its own psychological environment it readily accepts the change and becomes as nature intended, producing all its native aroma and flavor. Wedding Breakfast coffee is scientifically aged, cured and roasted in the most favorable atmosphere known to roasters of coffee, and produces a rare cupping value impossible to obtain by any other process than nature and careful roasting.

A POLISH THAT POLISHES.

Do your customers call for a metal polish of the very finest quality?

If they do, and you do not carry it already you should stock with E. W. Bennett's "Brilliantshine."

It has no superior, and has taken the cream over every competitor whenever exhibited in competition

A WONDERFUL RECORD.

The San Francisco Office of the National Cash Register Heads Them All.

Pierce & Co. have scored a record year with their National Cash Registers. They not only have exceeded the business of past years, but the record of sales of Pierce & Co.'s office is proportionately larger than any other office in the United States or Canada.

An estimate is made up each year of the number of cash registers that should be sold during the next twelve months in the various territories. Pierce & Co. have sold 175 per cent. of their quota—nearly twice what would have been considered satisfactory.

Every salesman of the company exceeded his personal quota and a silk flag was sent to 8 of the firm's men who entered a national contest and won out.

Mr. Pierce is very proud of the results shown by his office. If every other office in the United States and Canada had done as well proportionately as the San Francisco office, the output of cash registers would be six times greater than it is.

The wonderful record could not have been achieved had not the National Cash Register been the splendid machine it is.

The National Cash Register Company is the pioneer manufacturer of cash registers.

Twenty-one years ago, the business was organized in one small room with only two employees. To-day it has $5,000,000 of capital; controls 431 patents; has over 2,500 employees; pays out in excess of $1,500,000 every year to the employees of its factory at Dayton, Ohio, alone, sells about 4,000 cash registers every month; occupies 13¼ acres of floor space and has offices in all parts of the world.

This great business did not grow of itself. It was built laboriously and slowly.

It came of excellence and character. As the business grew and Patterson Bros., who control the company, thrived, they put more money into making theirs, the model manufacturing plant of the world. With true philanthropy, these noble men have made it possible for their employees to secure for themselves hygienic surroundings, aesthetic homes, opportunity for culture and the proper education of their children. What is of most importance, these were all secured without capitulation on the part of the worker who paid for for what he got and was made thereby a better American citizen.

A SPLENDID INVESTMENT.

The Advantage of Purchasing a Bowser Oil Tank.

The question of storing oils in such a manner as to prevent loss by leakage, accumulation of dust, oil-soaked floors and consequent fire danger has been successfully solved by the Bowser self measuring oil tanks, manufactured by S. F. Bowser Co of Fort Wayne, Indiana

Their tanks are fitted with pumps which at one stroke, measure an accurate gallon, one-half gallon and quart As oil, time and labor savers, and consequently money-savers, the Bowser oil outfit represents a splendid investment which fact has already been appreciated by over 200,000 leading merchants and manufacturers.

Scored Another Record Year.

Causes That Have Assisted in the Success of the Spohn-Patrick Company.

The past year has been very fruitful for the Spohn-Patrick Company in their big home at 16-18-20-22 Front street.

They went in to their new quarters not quite a year ago and made their removal at a most auspicious time. They had grown too big for their old stores but they did not expect the almost immediate growth of business that ensued, although they were duly thankful that they were prepared to take advantage of it.

Every step in advance has been rendered permanent by careful organization and complete system. As a consequence, there is not a firm on the Pacific Coast better equipped for the introduction and distribution of specialties to the grocery, drug and confectionery trade. Their export business has also grown to very large proportions.

Each of these branches of their business has its separate corps of salesmen. Since they are able to assure continuous employment, they have secured the best available men in the field, and, being able to pick their people, they take into their service only those who stand high in the particular line they are to follow.

Every Manager is Interested.

Another feature of the house that has added largely to its strength and influence has been its policy that when a man has been carefully tried and found worthy of confidence, an opportunity has been presented to him to acquire an interest in the firm. It is worthy of note that the heads of each department have all taken advantage of this and therefore serve Spohn-Patrick Company with a two-fold earnestness.

Carefully Selected Accounts.

The success of the firm in introducing various lines of new goods into quick popularity secured recognition on all sides, both from the wholesaler, the retailer, and the manufacturer. As a consesuence, instead of being forced to seek accounts, they found themselves in the very desirable position of being able to choose, from the many offered, those which they felt would prove desirable additions to the stocks of their clients among the retail dealers. The general recognition of this gave the trade confidence in the desirability of considering any proposition that might be sent out by the Spohn-Patrick Company.

The old saying, that "Goods well bought are half sold," is the basis upon which the Spohn-Patrick Company have chosen their accounts. The various lines that they have taken up have been only those backed by excellence of quality and by generous advertising. This, in itself, guarantees the retailer the rapid movement of the goods when they are once put in stock.

The Introductory Department.

Their introductory department is particularly complete. The firm has in its permanent employ a corps of keen, experienced salesmen, who are noted for their ability in the introduction of specialties. They also have a staff of lady demonstrators, who have done much towards interesting consumers in every large city of the Coast in the goods for which the Spohn-Patrick Company are agents. The varied nature of the goods they have introduced and the fact that all the men connected with the firm are personally interested in advancing sales, has resulted in the employment of many schemes for publicity, the novelty and effectiveness of which has resulted in their being widely copied.

The nature of the goods handled by the firm can readily be seen by a glance at their advertisement on the fourth page of this issue. It is their proud boast that they represent the largest manufacturers in the world in their respective lines.

The Export Department.

The Oriental Export and Import Department of the firm was acquired about two years ago by absorbing the agencies and connections of the firm of Lyden & Co., and the Field Mercantile Co. The last named of these firms was established in 1873. The facilities of the Spohn-Patrick Company for handling expeditiously large volumes of business has enabled them to increase the enormous business that was already being done when they took up this department.

The firm has established a system by which they are kept in constant touch with all their Oriental connections. A complete monthly catalogue, supplemented by additional reports forwarded by each steamer, enables them to concentrate the interest of their numerous clients beyond the seas.

SAN JOSE THRIVES.

It's Grocers' Association Helps to Hold the Trade Together.

San Jose had a very bitter experience before the grocers of the Garden City were brought together in its present association through the Advocate and the State Grocers' Association.

The card prices are now in vogue and all recognize that the condition of business is far better than it was before.

For the past two years, Mr. D. W. Smythe has acted as secretary. He is well-known and well-liked by the grocers and the membership includes practically all the dealers of our city.

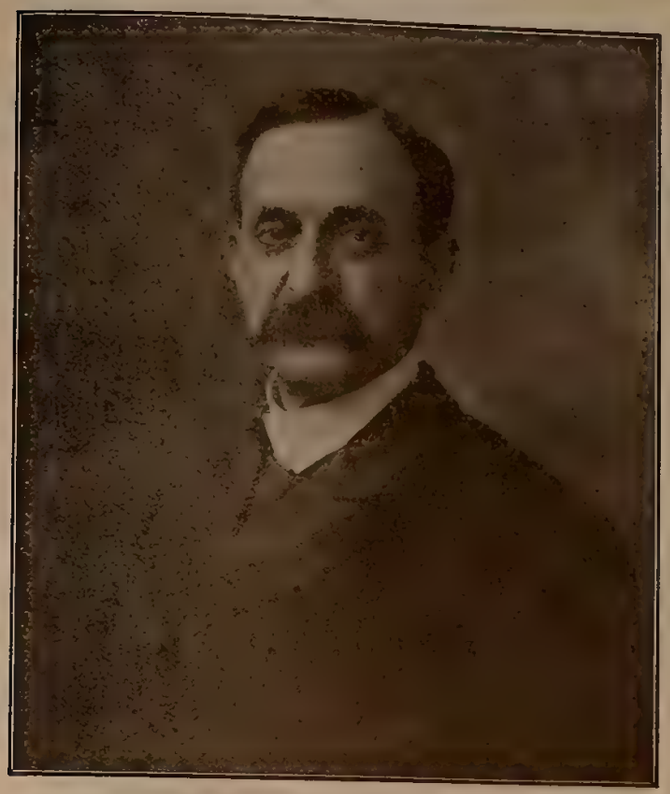
The grocers of San Jose have been made better friends by their association. They have been able to successfully face difficulties that they would have been forced to run away from were they not organized. They have been getting a fair profit on their staples.

The grocers of San Jose acted as hosts for the delegates from the other associations throughout the State this year. The Fifth Annual Convention of the State Grocers' Association met at San Jose in August, 1904. The San Jose grocers lived up to the reputation of the Santa Clara Valley for hospitality.

Had it not been for the exertions of its first secretary, Mr. J. H. Koerber, the organization would never have held together as it did. He gave to the work his personal attention and planned for the organization as he would for his own business.

It was under Mr. Koerber's supervision that the first steps were taken towards the establishing card prices.

OF REAL VALUE.



The Hobart Electric Coffee Mill Far Ahead of Its Competitors.

For a grocer to be without the Hobart Electric Coffee Mill is like a ship at sea with a portion of her steering gear carried away. The simplicity of this machine and its adaptability to rapid grinding of coffee makes it a very valuable article and also supplies a long-felt want in that line. Time after time has W. J. Andrews, the local agent, located at room 53 in the Crocker Building, received letters from grocers who have been using the coffee grinder in which they state that it is far ahead of any other used for the same purpose. Its execution is perfect; it is self-starting and self-oiling. To the ordinary mind, machinery of almost any description looks intricate, but the Hobart Coffee Mill Grinder is so plain and simple in its make-up that it only requires but a few minutes of one's time to understand its mechanism.

SPOHN-PATRICK COMPANY'S MAIN OFFICES.

CHARLES E. HIRES.
The Man Who Made Root Beer Famous.

We present herewith a portrait of Charles E. Hires, whose name is a household word in every corner of the civilized world. This has come about through the remarkable system of advertising he has followed for his Hires Rootbeer, the quality of which has warranted his carrying it into every known market.

Mr. Hires was a retail druggist in Philadelphia in 1874 when he first made rootbeer. The article he presented to the public immediately acquired a decided popularity. The general public was duly appreciative when they were presented with a rootbeer that was made of roots.

The pungency and delicious flavor of Hires Rootbeer was a pleasurable revelation. Its peculiar flavor came from a combination of various herbs with the roots that made it different from anything else that had been presented before.

As a matter of course, the reputation of Hires Rootbeer for the first few years was only local, but its fame spread and its worth became so generally admitted that Mr. Hires felt authorized to exhibit it at the great Centennial Fair in 1876. This marked its entry into the field as a national product.

A campaign of advertising that was considered quite colossal at that time was then undertaken by Mr. Hires. Each year, as the demand grew, the apportionment for advertising was increased. During the past twenty-five years more than two million dollars has been judiciously expended for publicity with what results, the grocers of many lands are familiar.

The success of Hires Rootbeer is the best evidence of its superior quality. There have been hundreds of imitations started on the market. None of them have secured permanent popularity. The wide advertising done by the Charles E. Hires Company could not do more than induce a consumer to buy the first package of the goods. The repeat orders always come because the customer who tries Hires Rootbeer is pleased with it.

The campaign for 1905 will begin shortly. As usual, numerous unique and original ideas will be inaugurated.

THE STANDARD OF VALUES.

Influences That Have Made "Royal" the Leading Baking Powder for Years.

Enables Dealers to Turn Over Their Capital From Eight to Ten Times Per Year.

It is not by accident that Royal Baking Powder is recognized as the standard of baking powder values throughout the world.

Much money directed by the best business brains of America was required to produce this result.

The catchword, "Absolutely Pure," has been blazoned in the columns of all the reputable newspapers and magazines of the country for so long that the great consuming public has come to accept it as one of the prime tenets of the grocery faith. If the baking powder can bears the "Royal" trade-mark, the dealer is not required to make any talk. The customer himself is prepared to tell that it is "Absoutely Pure," and if asked who told him, would add that he had known it all his life.

The enormous business done by the Royal Baking Powder Company has brought into the field an array of manufacturers who seek to secure a part of the demand for a baking powder that was created by the Royal people. These arguments have been many and specious. In every instance, it has fallen back to the one claim, "Your customers will be as well satisfied as if you gave them Royal."

The competition has been in almost every instance based on price. The argument would be that while it would be harder to sell the unknown goods than Royal, yet there would be enough more profit to warrant the dealers doing the extra work and taking the chance of having a dissatisfied customer. This specious argument sometimes has an impression on the unthinking retailer who does not consider for the moment that money invested in Royal Baking Powder is turned over 8 to 10 times per year; that the article is always salable and salable quickly; and the further fact that these cheap competing powders often lie on his shelves for months, if not years.

A VETERAN TOBACCO FIRM.

J. A. Drinkhouse & Co. is the oldest wholesale tobacco house in San Francisco. Its founder, the late John A. Drinkhouse, was one of the best known pioneers of the State. He was known in all parts of California and he and his house was popular wherever they had acquaintances. His son, John A. Drinkhouse, the present head of the firm, has earned considerable recognition as a leader in municipal affairs. He is now one of the Police Commissioners of San Francisco, and, in that position has done much to discourage unwise and harassing action, such as has annoyed retail grocers and others from time to time in the past. The retail grocery trade are fortunate in having a man like Mr. Drinkhouse on the Board to prevent unfair and untimely action being taken.

CALIFORNIA WINES.

A Review of the Industry and Sketch of Its Brilliant Future.

By A. Sbarboro.

The grape-grower and wine-maker of California, notwithstanding the slight setback which they received during the past vintage, first by three days of unusual heat which shriveled some of the grapes, and then by six inches of rain which spoiled some of the fruit on the vines, have had another comparatively prosperous year.

Year by year, the undoubted fact that California now produces as fine wines as are made in any part of the world is being gradually admitted by the wine-drinking people of the United States. What is more important, our American people are slowly but gradually becoming educated to the use of the healthy and non-intoxicating nectar of wine at their regular meals.

When this good habit becomes general among our people, it will remove the curse of drunkenness from our midst. This fact was known and proclaimed by President Thomas Jefferson, who, when Congress proposed to levy a heavy tariff on wine because it was called a luxury, protested and stated that wine was "not a luxury, but a necessity," adding that where wine was "generally used at meals intoxication was practically unknown, and in the country where wine was not used drunkenness prevailed."

This statement by that enlightened President was made one hundred years ago. And now we have an assertion by that eloquent and practical reformer, Dr. Lyman Abbott, who, in an article written in the Outlook of October 22, 1904, among other things says:

"Personally, I have entire respect for the total abstainer who really does abstain, and also respect for the one who believes that it is legitimate to use wine in moderation upon the dinner table; but I find it very difficult to maintain respect for the total abstainer who banishes wine from the dinner table and then drinks it out of a bottle from the closet between meals and calls it medicine."

The time, therefore, is approaching when the wine producing country of the United States as well as all other wine producing countries of the world will become wine consumers as well as wine producers. When that desideratum will be attained, California, which is practically the only State in the Union where the finest wines can be produced, will give employment in this industry to a million of people and produce an income of $300,000,000 per annum, as the viticultural industry produces today in France.

Some Wine Figures.

The wine produced in California during the past ten years has been as follows:

	Gallons.
1895	14,100,000
1896	13,500,000
1897	34,000,000
1898	18,520,000
1899	23,433,000
1900	23,677,500
1901	22,750,000
1902	44,000,000
1903	35,000,000
1904	30,000,000

In a few localities, the vineyards are affected by the phylloxera. But the planting of resisting vines, which has proven so successful in France and Italy, is progressing rapidly, so that the increase of production will easily keep pace with the increase of consumption.

The concentration of the viticultural industry in California in strong hands has proven beneficial to the grape-growers as well as the wine-makers and wine-dealers. Whilst prices for grapes have increased and the quality of wine has been improved, the price has not been raised by the wine-makers.

This could only be accomplished by the fact that the larger wine establishments can produce wine at a lesser cost. In this line California has the largest wine establishments in the world, that of the Italian Swiss Colony, for instance, having a cooperage capacity of 12,500,000 gallons, one tank alone holding 500,000 gallons, and after it was first emptied, a quadrille of 100 couples, together with a band of music was danced inside of this immense tank, the largest on the globe.

The demoralizing fluctuation in the prices of grapes for the past ten years is to be hoped will come again no more, which in some years was ruinous, as may be shown by the following prices of grapes.

Cost of Dry Wine Grapes.

1895, per ton	$11 to $12
1896, per ton	18 to 20
1897, per ton	8 to 10
1898, per ton	9 to 10
1899, per ton	14 to 16
1900, per ton	14 to 16
1901, per ton	20 to 24
1902, per ton	24 to 30
1903, per ton	15 to 20
1904, per ton	15 to 20

Cost of Sweet Wine Grapes.

1895, per ton	$10 to $12
1896, per ton	12 to 14
1897, per ton	9
1898, per ton	9
1899, per ton	12
1900, per ton	12
1901, per ton	16
1902, per ton	15 to 16
1903, per ton	10 to 12
1904, per ton	10 to 12

Many of the grape-growers in the dry districts have lately entered into contracts to sell their grapes for five years at $15 per ton and in the sweet wine districts at $10 to $12 per ton. These figures guarantee the farmer a good remuneration on his capital invested and labor performed and thus give a stability to the value of his vineyard.

Retailers Get Large Profits.

There is one abuse in the handling of wines which must be corrected. Whilst ordinary table claret may be purchased by the dealers for 30 to 40c per gallon in California, they do in some instances sell it to families at 60 to 75c per gallon. Now, 10c per gallon for handling wine in 5-gallon packages and over, should be a sufficient remuneration for the grocer because, although his profit per gallon would be reduced, the consumption would be so increased that his profit in the end would be larger than before.

Families would be induced to use wine on their tables when it would cost them only 10 or 12½c per bottle, whilst the laboring people, who should be the largest consumers, must hesitate to use this healthy beverage at the price of 20 or 30c per bottle.

Greedy Restaurant Keepers.

The greatest mistake in the selling of wine is made by the restaurant and hotel keepers, who sell only by the bottle. They generally keep fine wines which cost them from 25 to 50c per bottle, and they sell it to their customers at from 50c to $1 per bottle, double the actual cost. This materially curtails the consumption, as people who pay from 25 to 50c for their meal, refuse to pay from 50c to $1 for a bottle of wine which they would like to use at their repasts.

However, time and competition will remedy all these discrepancies and there is no doubt but that our people will eventually become large consumers of their own pure native wines.

In order to encourage the use of the healthy beverage at meals, city, state and national legislations should help the desired movement by permitting the free sale of wine at a nominally low license, which would be a public benefit by removing the curse of intemperance from our midst, thus separating the wine industry from the saloon.

SAVES TIME AND MONEY.

In order to do business successfully the merchant must know what he is doing, and this he cannot do if he uses an old-fashioned scale. Either he gives too much or too little, but rarely just what he is paid for as the scales only balance when the exact amount is on the platform. This difficulty is obviated by the use of the Standard Computing Scale of Detroit, Mich. These scale are made so that the merchant knows just what he is giving. It makes the exact weight, and saves time and money.

Grocery Markets.

Commercial Outlook of the Western World as shown by Present Conditions.

Office of the ADVOCATE.
Thursday Afternoon.

LIMA BEANS—
A dull, dragging market; Eastern buyers showing no interest whatever, hoping for lower prices. Out of a crop of about 480,000 bags 300,000 remain unsold because owners are exacting more than buyers will pay.

FIGS—
Foreign figs are lower and easy. The over-supply has been more than the consumer could take care of. Eastern jobbers are complaining bitterly of the unremunerative condition of the trade brought about by the fight between the importers.

SUGAR—
Two more wholesale grocers have withdrawn from the Pacific Traffic Association, which only widens the breach and adds to the uncertainty of prices. Read our remarks on sugar in the market report for more definite information.

BULL DURHAM—
Note an advance of 2 cents per pound, January 2.

CORN—
Future corn of 1905 packing is now offered at from 82½ to 85 cents per dozen, according to quantity, for Western, and 87½ to 90 cents for private brands, Western.

SHELLED ALMONDS—
California are lower; the demand is light and supply oversufficient.

CHEESE—
California flats have declined slightly because of larger receipts.

WALNUTS—
Soft shell No. 2 much lower. Trading quiet and a desire to make sales the cause. All other grades are firm.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Our usual brief reports of the condition of the various markets are replaced this week by extended articles which will be found on other pages of our paper.—Editor.

SUGAR.

A drop of 10 cents per hundred on dry granulated sugar was announced on January 7th. The list price is now $5.90

There were exported to California from Hawaii 3,443,492 bags of sugar, and from all other countries 180,937 bags of sugar during the year 1904.

Over 95 per cent of our raw sugar comes from the Hawaiian Islands. The remainder comes from Central and South America and Mexico. During the past year there was brought in from Java 12,000,000 pounds, being the first importation from that country in years. The refining of sugar in the Hawaiian Islands, it is stated, can be carried on at a good profit at present selling price of granulated on the Pacific Coast. There is a cargo of refined sugar due here about the latter part of January, consigned to a number of wholesale grocers who invested in the raising of sugar cane in Hawaii and claimed to see an extra margin in refining sugar before shipment. This experiment has resulted, with other collateral disturbances which were fully aired in the daily press, in differences with the Pacific Traffic Association, of which Mr. H. D. Loveland is the head. The public interested in sugar are anxiously awaiting the outcome of this shipment and its consequences, both in regard to the organization and prices that will be made by the Trust in their opposition to these independents.

Beet Sugar.

The production of beet sugar was at a stand during the year just closed. Several factories were idle and others did not produce their usual output. Two refineries with a combined capacity of 9,000 tons could only get 6,000 tons out of the usual acreage because of the injury to beets by the early and heavy rains.

In various parts of California the building of beet sugar factories is earnestly advocated, in spite of some experiments that have proven failures. The output of beet sugar for 1902 was 73,767 tons; in 1903 the output was 65,540 tons, and in 1904, 54,800 tons.

This industry requires a knowledge of favorable locations and ability to select good management. An eye must be had to conditions of labor so that the cost of production can be kept within safe bounds.

COFFEE.

We are going into the new year with what is technically termed the world's visible supply with a stock of 14,086,730 bags of coffee December 1 1904, as aginst 13,838,109 bags December 1, 1903. If the coming crop should prove a small one then this large supply of coffee wouldn't look at all discomfiting; prices would easily advance to a figure which is much closer to the real value of coffee than present quotations; but it is too early to form any opinion of what the crop will be; all talk or circularizing on this subject, no matter how beautifully interwoven with the most penetrating arguments, is purely forecasting an impossibility. It is plainly in the interest of the planter, no matter whether he is in Guatamala, Costa Rica, Colombia or Brazil to give out only the most doleful statements as to the crop prospects and thus bring to his rescue the hungry horde of speculators who make or break on the Havre and New York Coffee and Stock Exchange. These busy gentry quickly grasp at any old rumor in order that they may turn it to their profit. Those who bought options on coffee in December, 1903 and January, 1904, during a time of bullish sentiment, and carried either until June, with the hope of sudden wealth, were much disappointed, as options selling at 6.40 in December and 6.45 in January were quoted at 7.35 in June; nor is this all the market rose in October to its highest pitch which was 7.70 and then fell back to 6.75 in December 1904. A year since the price was 6.40. Viewing the market calmly from a point looking backward we can discern the hand of the boomer all along the line, but his handiwork has met with opposition by the force of supply and demand and he has temporarily taken a rest. That coffees are cheap and that a small future crop will honestly advance prices, regardless of speculation is our belief, but, as we stated before, it is too early to either boost or depress the market on the basis of what no one can predict will be the coffee output of 1905. We believe firmly in the future of high-grade roasting coffees; coffees of merit and that are mellowed and sweet; these grades are still very cheap. Below find tables showing closing prices of coffee for the year, contrasted with prices ruling one year ago:

Local Conditions.

The greater portion of coffee coming to San Francisco arrives from Central America. First shipments of new crop arrive in December and as the importers are all in need of funds they rush the bulk of their crop forward with all possible dispatch; small lots follow at intervals, after the firsh rush, until June or July. Sometimes this order is partially reversed if the planter believes by holding back his crop he can obtain better prices; it has not worked to his advantage with the present crop to date, but his optimism will probably lead him to hold fast as long as he can consistent with his needs. Some shipments of coffee have been made from Hawaii, but the amount was small and prices obtained not altogether encouraging.

The total imports of coffee at the port of San Francisco was 30,763,162 pounds for 1904. For 1903 the amount was slightly higher, being 34,019,000 pounds.

TEAS.

The year just gone has been a good one for the importers of tea. Prices were favorable to the making of a profit and there were no violent speculations or fluctuations, such as dominated the tea market at the time the 10 cents per pound tax was taken off. It is unfortunate that this special line of trade has for many years been subject to so much disturbance and loss to importers and dealers who stock up. In 1904 this was not the case, a good steady demand having existed all the year through. New crop Japans reached here about May, followed shortly by the China crop. The large months for receipts are July, August and September. Low grade Japans were not desirable and high grades were in such scant supply that about all our imports have gone out to the distributing trade. Locally stocks are nominally cleaned up. In 1904 there were imported to San Francisco 8,398,879 pounds. In 1903 this amounted to 9,592,016 pounds. We are not advised whether the culture of tea has ever been tried in California, but South Carolina has been experimenting for a number of years. The high price of labor compared to the pay of laborers in China and Japan will effectually bar out all attempts at a profitable cultivation of tea in the United States. As an experiment it is pretty plaything; as a money maker it is a failure.

BREEDING HIGH-GRADE PICKLES.

Methods Employed to Secure Thin-skinned and Tender Cucumbers.

By Aaron H. Powers.

Scientists have brought the breeding of pickles to an art.

It was the good fortune of the writer to be able to spend a day in the great cucumber fields of Alameda county last summer and see how the Pacific Vinegar & Pickle Works took advantage of the deductions of the college professors to insure that their "California Home Brand" pickles would be dainty and digestible.

This firm is under the management of F. L. Matthes, who by a life-long experience in the pickle business has learned the great lesson that permanent success in the manufacture of food supplies is based on superiority in quality.

Mr. Matthes, through this experience and also through the philosophy that tells of the impossibility of making a silk purse out of a sow's ear, knew that he could not make pickles of the first class from the hybrid cucumbers of all kinds raised by the farmers in California at the time he came into the field.

It was the custom of the country for the farmer to buy "any old seed.' This he planted in "any old way" and picked as best he could. Seed of the same sort was planted year after year in the same patches, growing weaker in production and giving a tougher and more clumsy cucumber each season.

Eastern Seeds as a Basis.

It was impossible to get seeds such as he needed in the Pacific Coast market. So. Mr. Matthes sent to certain Eastern seedsmen and called for seeds of a certain kind, promising large orders if satisfactory results could be secured. These seeds came from many localities and were grown under various climatic conditions, since it would be impossible to tell in advance just what kind of a cucumber would be produced from the Eastern seeds in the rich soil and under the generous climate of Alameda county.

Hundreds of experimental cucumber patches were started by almost as many farmers in 1902. Each garden was watched carefully and the seeds that produced the best results were used in planting for the crop of 1903.

Educating the Farmers.

And here was where the advantages of the scientific investigations came in.

The farmers were unwilling to use any but the old methods of cultivation that had been "good enough" for them for twenty years back.

They were not good enough for Mr Matthes.

He told them that their old way would result in an 'old way" crop of inferior cucumbers that would be worth the "old way" price of from $75 to $125 per acre.

Finally, as a last resort, he guaranteed them that, if they would plow their fields his way, plant the seeds furnished by him, as he required, cultivate the plants as he directed, and then when harvest time came, put on a picker for every acre to be covered, he would insure that they received at least $200 per acre for their crops.

This sounded like the Klondike. It seemed too good to be true.

But a few of them "made a try."

They found that the city man knew his business and that his methods relieved the raising of cucumbers from the element of chance.

Farmers Pleased With Success.

As a result of the first year's work, about 165 acres of land were properly cultivated and seeded in 1902.

The results were so wonderful that the Pacific Vinegar & Pickle Works had no difficulty in contracting for 280 acres for 1903.

In 1904 there were 418 acres of the very finest cucumber patches ever seen in this country, producing smooth, even cucumbers with a dainty, thin, tender skin and with a crisp meat that insured the eater against indigestion.

Picking the Crop.

Cucumbers must not be picked before they are ripe. Once ripe, they must be picked with as little delay as possible, since they grow with marvelous rapidity after they ripen and as they increase in size they decrease in value.

The finest, or No. 1 cucumbers, are those less than 2½ inches long. They are worth $2 per 100 pounds.

Cucumbers from 2¾ to 3½ inches long are No. 2. They are worth only $1 per 100 pounds.

No. 3 cucumbers are those from 3½ to 5 inches in length. They are worth only 60 cents per 100 pounds.

Cucumbers larger than No. 3 are too coarse for pickle making and are thrown away.

The necessity of having a picker for every acre of ground arises from the rapidity with which the cucumber grows. The blossom of the afternoon is a midget the next morning, too green to pick. In the afternoon it is a No. 1 cucumber worth 2 cents per pound. The next morning, it will be an inch longer and be worth only 1 cent a pound. If it is picked in the afternoon it will probably be worth 60 cents a hundred, and if left till the next morning, would be worthless.

Care in the Selection.

One man can glean an acre of vines in a day. Therefore by having a large enough force of pickers, every field is gone over entirely each 24 hours and the percentage of first class cucumbers is increased.

As the Pacific Vinegar & Pickle Works Works has its factory at Haywards. In the heart of the cucumber fields, the growers are able to get their product to the factory within from two to eight hours of the time they are picked.

This insures a pickle more tender and finer in every way than one made from a cucumber that has become wilted and tough through being bruised in transit by common carrier and from an exposure of one to three days before being put into the brine.

Know They Have the Best.

Besides making pickles, the company ferment and distill their own vinegar. In this way they know the quality of everything they send out since, by making it themselves, they are sure that it will be always the same.

The company makes a point of absolute fair dealing.

They spare no pains or expense to produce the very best the market affords.

Then they say to the grocer: "If any customer complains of our goods, refund the money."

To protect the dealer they say "If our goods are not just what we say and the best value for the money in the market, you need pay us only what YOU think they are worth."

The best test of their fairness is a stamp that is imprinted on every invoice leaving their office. It reads

"We weigh, gauge, count, or measure everything we buy? Do you?"

A Remarkable Offer.

On page 12 of this issue they make the dealer a special offer on their "California Home" Brand Pickles. The prices are right. The goods are right. It would be hard to find fairer terms.

We hope grocers who write them with regard to this offer will mention the Advocate.

Appreciative Neighbors.

The "Haywards Journal," in an interesting article about the Pacific Pickle & Vinegar Works says:

"Their improvements this year will amount to about $50,000.

"They ship on an average of two cars daily during the year, thus making a total of over 700 carloads for the entire year.

"The company employs between eighty and one hundred people the year round. What is most gratifying is that no Chinamen are employed, all the work being done by our girls and young men.

"Haywards has every reason to congratulate itself on having such an extensive manufacturing plant here, being the largest of the kind west of the Rocky Mountains.

Double the Product.

The general manager, F. L. Matthes, has made a great record since assuming charge. The business has grown to such proportions that the capacity of the plant will be doubled next year.

"Being located in the heart of the richest vegetable garden in the world, they naturally secure the finest vegetables raised for their factory, and that explains the secret of the popularity of their 'California Home' Brand.

"The officers of the company are J. R. Garrett president; Simon Newman, vice-president. F. J. Koster, P. D. Cod, W. P. Wellman directors.

QUALITY AND HONESTY.

Attributes That Have Built Up a Big Coffee Business.

Pride in the absolute confidence of their customers.

Pride in the boast and knowledge that they handle more high grade coffee than any other house west of Chicago.

These are the two dominant characteristics of Hills Bros.

From a small beginning, the firm has progressed till it is recognized among the leaders in the coffee business. This growth has come from their policy of not only having the best, but also of always delivering high grade goods when such goods have been called for.

In the beginning, Hills Bros. devoted themselves to the trade of San Francisco. Then territory after territory was invaded by clever men, who preached the gospel of high grade coffees and strict commercial probity. They established the fact that they were selling goods on merit and before long the new territory would be organized.

In the Pacific Coast States, Idaho, Montana, Utah, Arizona, New Mexico, Nevada, Colorado and Texas, each territory has its special representative. This man covers the field regularly, and has the same responsibility towards the dealers he sells, as the firm of Hills Bros. assumes with all its customers. This insures the retailer that he will have the advice of an interested and well posted business man in his coffee and tea departments. Thus he feels the more easy about them because he knows that this man shares his own anxiety for success, since the success of the dealer means the addition of another valuable client to the salesman's list.

Hills Bros. also handle a complete line of teas.

A PERFECT FOOD.

Dainty, Nourishing and Easy to Prepare is "Instantaneous Tapioca."

The highest medical authority (the U. S. Dispensatory) says that Tapioca is nourishing, strengthening, non-irritating and easily digested. These properties make Tapioca a most desirable food, particularly for women and children, throughout the summer months, as while it nourishes and strengthens the body it does not heat the blood, thereby preventing prickly heat or other skin irration.

"Instantoneous Tapioca" is prepared from the very best quality of tapioca, imported direct from the East Indies. The process of preparation eliminates all impurities and as it requires neither soaking or cooking, it can be prepared for breakfast or lunch in less time than is required for any other breakfast food.

"Instantaneous Tapioca" has had many imitators under various names, but none to equal it in either quality or preparation. Bear in mind, it is already cooked, a minute or so further cooking is all right, but more than that is unnecessary.

Each package of the genuine bears a cut of two owls under an umbrella and the trade mark "Instantaneous" registered; together with recipes for several delicious and wholesome desserts.

"Princess Fan Tan" has been taken off the stage and in its place a high-class vaudeville show can be witnessed at this place of amusement.

ORPHEUM.

The attractions at this house are up to the usual standard. Cressy and Dane and a big new show are now pleasing the vaudeville patrons.

GRAND.

Blanche Bates is the big drawing card at the Mission-street theatre. The play is in its third and last week.

COLUMBIA.

Frederick Warde and Kathryn Kidder will appear in the production of "Salambo" Monday evening, January 9th.

CENTRAL.

Beginning with January 9th. minstrels will hold the boards of this theatre. The black-cork artists are sure to meet with success, as this place of amusement has a faculty of satisfying everyone.

FISCHER'S.

The world's greatest feature, Mme. Ziska, along with the usual vaudeville, appear.

MAJESTIC.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox's poetical drama, entitled "Mizpah, or the Story of Esther," goes on at the Majestic theatre January 9th. The personages of the drama are those with which we are all so familiar as appearing in the story of the Jewish heroine who by force of her own virtues rose to the dignity of Persia's queen. The cast is one of exceptional strength and the staging will be most magnificent and fully depict the scenes of splendor as they were in the days when Persia was at the very zenith of its power. Gillette's funny play, "All the Comforts of Home," will be the next attraction.

ALCAZAR.

The Alcazar's twice-deferred production of "Lost River" will be elaborately staged next week. Its title is suggested by Nature's freak in Indiana, a river springing from the base of one mountain, and, after flowing six miles, disappearing in a cavern under another. There is a pretty love story and plentyof clean humor. The scenic effects include a massive toll gate, panoramic effects for the bicycle race, the ball room of the million dollar hotel at West Baden Springs, and the toll road, with its flight of pursued and pursuers on horseback. The first local production of "The Girl and the Judge," a celebrated Clyde Fitch comedy, follows.

MADE MARVELOUS GROWTH.

A San Francisco Firm That is Felt All Over the Country.

M. J. Brandstein first started in the tea business on California street in 1881. The firm's business has grown constantly so that now, in 1905, the firm of M. J. Brandenstein & Co. are supplying jobbers all over the United States with tea.

Recent statistics from Japan show that the firm of M. J. Brandenstein & Co. are among the largest buyers of tea in Japan. When one considers that England, Russia—the two greatest tea drinking nations—and all the rest of the world are buying in that market, too, the importance of the fact becomes evident.

M. J. Brandenstein & Co. have a branch house at 96 Wall Street in New York, and another branch house in Yokohama.

While they are among the largest buyers in Japan, they also handle enormous quantities of China, India and Ceylon teas.

Their enormous purchases enable them to insure uniformity of qualities and to supply varieties that would be impossible for a house with less extensive connections.

Their New York house is devoted entirely to the jobbing trade. East of Salt Lake, the firm sells to no retail grocers whatever. Only the highest grade goods are handled by the New York office. Although only established about six years ago, yet the firm is already well and favorably known among the entire wholesale fraternity. As a consequence, M. J Brandenstein & Co. are called on to supply the demands of the large distributors in practically every jobbing center of the United States.

A little over three years ago, M. J. Brandenstein & Co. took up the roasting of coffees along the same brand lines they had applied to the tea business. They were, at the time, large importers of Javas, Mochas, East Indian and Central American coffees. They employed the thoroughness for getting the best that is characteristic of the house and they had already established the complete machinery for getting their coffees into the channels of distribution. The result was, as might have been expected, that the firm is right at the top and is recognized as one of the largest roasters of coffee on the Pacific Coast.

Through extensive advertising in many different ways, they have made their "M. J. B." package coffee one of the staple brands of the Pacific Coast.

BEST OF THEIR KIND.

How the Retailer is Assured of the Superiority of "Griffin Extras."

The California Fruit Canners' Association is a combine of thirty-three factories in California.

It established a special brand two years ago, known as "Griffin Extras." The very choisest of the extra fruit of each of their canneries they packed in an extra heavy syrup under this brand.

They have been devoting special efforts during the past two years to the work of establishing the name "Griffin Extras" all over the world as a synonym for the finest in the matter of preserved fruits and preserved vegetables.

Combination a Great Advantage.

The combination of the leading canning plants of the State was fraught with great importance to the entire country.

It gave a stability to prices that encouraged the Eastern jobbers in placing their advance orders liberally.

It guaranteed the retailer against the possibility of having his neighbors buying fruits, etc., at prices lower than he could get.

It also resulted in the canners feeling that the assurance of satisfactory profits was sufficient to warrant their putting the full value of fruit and syrup in each can and thus the consumer has benefitted.

Another result of the forming of the California Fruit Canners' Association was that it enabled the management to place the latest improved machinery in the factories under its control, to practice greater economy in the management of the plants and also to effect a large saving by concentrating in one hand the matter of selling the products of all the plants.

It has made possible a complete chain of factories located to the best advantage in each important district of the State where various kinds of fruit and vegetables are grown to the highest degree of perfection.

Largest in the World.

There is no question but that the California Fruit Canners' Association is the largest fruit preserving company in the world. Their tins are found in every center of civilization. Their fruit and vegetables grace the tables of both rich and poor.

FINE BEVERAGE.

This fine whiskey has been known to the trade of the Pacific Coast for a number of years. Those who appreciate good whiskey realize the value of this brand. Year by year the demand for this whiskey has increased, and the agents, E. Martin & Co., 54 First street, report the year of 1904 a prosperous one in the sale of this beverage.

NEW YEAR'S PARTY.

Arthur Morris of 1235 Ellis street, gave a New Year's eve party at which about 20 couples were present, mostly composed of young commercial travelers. The entertainment consisted of musical selections and dancing, after which a nice collation was served. The invited guests ushered the New Year in with California spirit.

THE RICE MARKET.

By M. Phillips & Co.

The new year will open up with the lowest price on rice ever known in the history of the rice industry. The cultivation of rice in the United States, unduly stimulated by the land agents, has resulted in excessive acreage and overproduction, which has made the price of the cereal unstable and promises, like the overproduction of cotton some years ago, to seriously cripple the industry. The sale of rice by the farmer in the open market, instead of tolling with the mills, in which case overproduction will send down prices, reduce the production to the needs of the country and thus restore values, seems the only hope at the present time.

Splendid work has been done in this country in the way of creating new market, and as a consequence we have been able to increase the acreage by far larger percentages than could otherwise have been hoped for. The native rice is rapidly driving the foreign product out of this country. Very little foreign rice comes to this country, with the exception of a small amount, which comes to the Chinese trade in this city; the Chinese are clannish and will not eat the home-grown rice; there is also a small amount of Patna rice and Italian rice which enters New York yearly.

Many farmers in the South are going out of the rice business and will, next season, put their land in cotton and other products which will give them better returns, for with present values it is not a matter of how much they will make on their crop, but how much will they lose.

Many of the mills in the South have combined, as in this way they think that prices can be upheld, but the law of supply and demand cannot be disputed; and if the farmers of Louisiana and Texas produce more rice than we need no power in the world, no combination or trust, can dispose of all of the crop or maintain good prices for it.

With the opening of this season, on October 1, 1904, there was carried over from the season of 1903 over 1,000,000 pockets; this season the crop is estimated at about 4,000,000 pockets. The annual consumption in the United States is about 4,500,000. So you can draw your own conclusions.

Retailers are buying freely; in fact, the universal opinion is that rice has reached bottom, and the next move will be an upward one. Good grades of rice are scarce, especially the fancy Honduras, and there will not be enough to go round of this quality; we look for a material advance on this grade in the next sixty days; fancy Japs are also scarce and demand good prices; poor grades of rice go begging, and it is almost impossible to sell them, as rice is so cheap that the retailer prefers to pay a slight advance and get the best.

China Rice.—New crop is just coming to hand and demands full figures, as exchange is extremely high; we look for an advance in this grade.

Imported Japan Rice.—Very little will come to this market, as it has been superceded by the native rice, which is of better quality, as has been demonstrated by Professor Knapp, the rice expert of the United States.

ABSOLUTELY PURE SALT.

Trade Secure the Best Possible Goods at an Inside Price Through a California Manufacturer.

It was left for the Leslie Salt Refining Company to present to the Pacific Coast trade a California-made salt that is absolutely pure.

After five years of preparation, they were able to present their salt to the public. Its excellence and price brought it, almost immediately, into popularity.

The Leslie salt is purified and sterilized by several expensive processes that make it superior in quality to any of the local salts. At the same time, its cost is less than similar imported salts which have to pay high freight tariffs.

The purity of the Leslie salt is best attested by the fact that it is used by most of the leading creameries of the Coast in making butter. For this purpose an absolutely pure salt is necessary if the best flavor and highest keeping qualities are to be secured.

They have made very popular a free running salt that never cakes in any weather. This salt is put up in 2-lb., 3-lb. and 5-lb. cartons and in 2-lb. caddies. It gives the retail dealer a splendid profit and satisfies the most fastidious housewife.

MR. PAULDING SPEAKS

The Situation Explained by Pacific Coast Secretary.

SALESMEN TELL FOOLISH LIES.

Warns Grocers of Attempts That Are Being Made to Mislead Them.

By J. F. PAULDING, Secretary.

MR. RETAIL GROCER—

Just a few words with you if you please:

I get my salary from the retail grocers.

I am working for the retail grocers.

I was in the retail grocery business myself for many years. I have been helping my fellow grocers as secretary for the last three years, not because I sought the job, but because they came to me and urged me to take it, and assured me that they thought I could serve them better than others who could be secured.

The crowning success of my three years of work depends upon my retaining the confidence of the retail grocers and thus guaranteeing that they will follow my suggestions and by acting as a unit, make of themselves a power that will have to be respected by every manufacturer in the country.

I write this because the representatives of certain mills have been industriously circulating a story that I have been bought by the Globe Grain and Milling Company and am working in the interests of the Globe Grain and Milling Company, and all because the Globe Grain and Milling Company are paying $25 per month to the funds of the Pacific Coast Retail Grocers' Association.

I suppose "every man has his price."

I want to say right here though, that my price is not any $25 per month. In this matter, my price is the agreement of the mills to give the retail grocers protection.

As soon as the other mills will take the same stand as the Globe Mills have taken, they will have bought from me the same earnest, straightforward support that the Globe Mills is getting now. And they will not have to put up a five cent piece to get it either.

I think the men who try to create suspicion among the grocers against the honesty of purpose of the grocers' representative are in a very small business. The "knockers" will find that the grocers will not be pleased to have them try to work such an evident "flim flam" game.

The retail grocers have everything to win and nothing to lose in the campaign that has just been opened for the protection of their profits on flour.

They have only to stand together like business men and act like business men and they will be treated like business men. The cutters get concessions in the shape of extra rebates because they buy big quantities. The mills also try to do them favors in other ways. In other words, they treat them like business men.

At present the rest of the retail grocery trade are being treated more like a lot of wayward children who can be induced to give up something of real value if they are only talked to properly. The salesmen who think they can blind the dealers to the fact that their interests are being neglected by the mills will have to talk facts and not ill-natured gossip.

The solution of the flour problem is not a difficult one.

The Globe Grain and Milling Company believes that it will pay them to guard your profits. They therefore insist that the firms handling their flour shall not sell below certain prices fixed by them.

Because of this action they surrender all hope of the active support of a few firms that insist upon the privilege of cutting prices. They feel that they would prefer the trade of a great mass of retail grocers to the trade of these few cutters. They realize, too, that in the end these very cutters will be forced to handle their flour and will be glad to handle it because it carries a profit.

The other mills are catering to the needs of the few cutters. They know that these few cutters (there are only about five of them) are forcing all the rest of their customers about San Francisco bay to sell flour with less than a fair margin of profit and are absolutely robbing a great part of their customers of trade that they should have and would have were it not that other dealers are allowed to sell flour for less than they are willing to.

These mills are satisfied that the retail grocers will go on handling their goods even though they allow the cutters to sell them at such a price that there is no profit left on them for the grocer who tries to compete with the cutter.

The one way the retail grocers can convince them that this is not true is by not selling their flour.

I do not mean that they should refuse to carry the flour of the other mills in stock. They should have it in their stores, but they owe it to themselves and to the one mill that gives them protection to transfer their trade, wherever it is possible to the mill that protects their interests.

There is only one mill at this time. That mill is the Globe Grain and Milling Company.

Every grocer in the Bay Cities and every grocer who can do so in the cities outside of San Francisco, should not only put in the Globe flours and advance the sale of them wherever possible, but they should tell the travelers of the other mills what they are doing and why they do it. By so doing they will be able to convince the mills that protected goods will get the right treatment at your hands.

This is most important.

When you have convinced the flour mills that you can reward people who treat you fairly, other manufacturers are going to recognize the power that comes from organized effort and almost without solicitation on your part, you will find them willing and glad to co-operate with you in maintaining a proper retail selling price on their goods.

In conclusion I wish to say this:

PRESIDENT SILL TAKES OFFICE.

Alameda County Grocers Celebrate Their Third Birthday On Monday Evening.

President S. J. Sill of Berkeley was installed as president of the Retail Grocers' Association of Alameda County on Monday evening by the retiring president, L. Warnke of Alameda.

After an interesting and valuable business meeting, an adjournment was taken to Foresters' Hall, where eating and drinking and speeches were indulged in until a late hour.

During the course of the evening regret was expressed that Alameda County should not have a representative at the convention of the National Grocers' Association, which meets at Cincinnati, January 24th, 25th and 26th. These remarks led President Sill to voice his sentiments in the matter. He insisted that Alameda County should be represented at Cincinnati and desired to subscribe $25 towards a fund to pay the expenses of a delegate. There were numerous others who came forward and in a few minutes the fund had reached $140. As it only requires $200, it looks as if Alameda County would be represented after all.

The concensus of opinion was that ex-President L. Warnke would be the proper man to send.

Harry Duncan as Toastmaster.

Harry Duncan one of the newly elected directors, acted as master of ceremonies at the banquet. A committee consisting of Messrs. Dierssen, Duncan and Secretary Reed were responsible for the arrangements for the banquet.

Mr. Duncan shone brilliantly as toastmaster and introduced the various speakers with brief and telling comment.

President Sill, in a brief talk, stated that he considered the close friendships formed through his membership in the Grocers' Association was of much more value to him even than the actual money returns. He insisted that he expected to have every meeting as well attended as this particular meeting and even better. If this were not so he would be very much disappointed.

Mr. Jonas president of the Merchants' Exchange, coincided with Mr. Sill as to the value of friendships formed through association meetings. In the course of his interesting address, he stated that the hardest thing for the dealer to meet was illegitimate competition. He hoped that the time would come when merchants of all sorts would be bonded together to insist upon fair dealing not only for the protection of the consumer, but for their own protection. He was glad to see that the grocers had taken initial steps in that direction. Mr. Jonas spoke at length upon the desirability and necessity of the consolidation of the big cities of Alameda County.

Mr. L. Warnke, the retiring president thanked the members for the support they have given him during the preceding year. After referring to

of

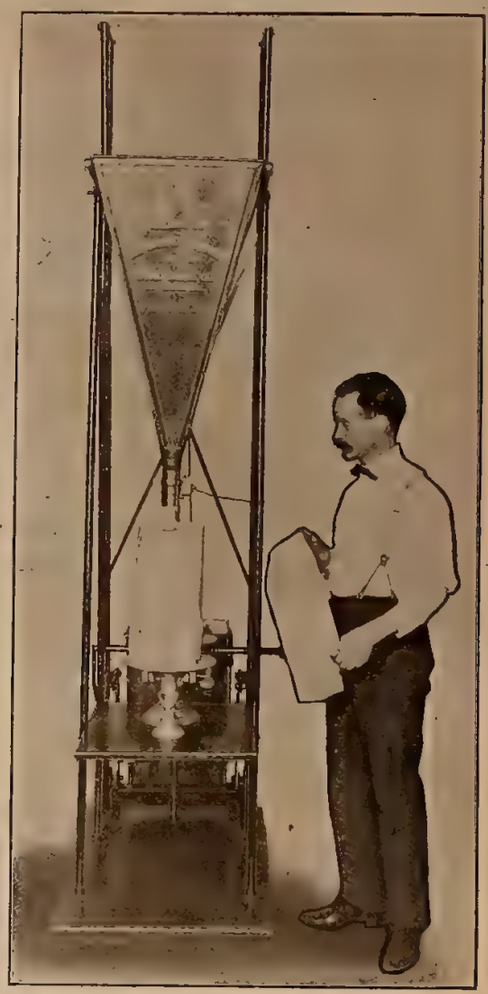
RETAILING STAPLES AT A PROFIT

Consists of:

Giving no more or less than 16 ounces for a pound.

Saving all losses from over-weight, spilling and carelessness.

Saving a large proportion of the time used in putting up packages.



Saving all useless and back-breaking labor in scooping sugar, etc., from barrels and bins.

Pleasing and holding your trade through full and accurate weights.

Automaticaly checking the weight of every package and assuring the merchant that his work is properly done.

Thus Saving Time, Labor and Material.

No other System has been devised Producing Equal Results.

These cuts illustrate the Portable Type of Bond Weighers.

Other types are designed to fit different requirements and of varying hopper capacity.

The Portable Weigher occupies the floor space of two sugar barrels.

A Weigher suspended from a platform over a counter occupies no floor space at all.

A boy can operate it.

He fills the hopper, opens the spout — the rest is automatic.

The weighing is done over an Even Balance Agate Bearing Scale, which can be used at any time without change for any purpose whatever.

It handles any comodity which runs freely through a spout.

The machine is fully warranted, fool proof and will last a life time with proper use.

Mr. Grocer:

This Weigher is now being placed on the market and enthusiasticly received.

It is appreciated by the busy merchant who realizes the importance of accurate and rapid work.

It is manufactured by the various local matters of general interest, he referred to the flour situation and said, among other things:

Want Profits On Flour.

"Gentlemen, you have the key to the situation in your own hands. If we unite in advancing the sale of the flour of the Globe Milling Company, we can bring all the mills to time. Personally, I have placed my third order with the Globe Mills and have had no difficulty in inducing my trade to accept it, and they have, in every instance, been pleased with the goods.

"The time has now come when the grocers have got to establish the value of their organization. If they do not win out in the present contest, they have themselves to blame."

Mr. Wilbur Walker, secretary of the Merchants' Exchange, expressed regret at the absence of Mr. Stulz, who had assisted in the organization of the Alameda County Grocers' Association three years before. Mr. Walker referred to the good fortune of the association in always having a president who could command the respect of the jobbers as well as the members, and of always having an efficient secretary. He added:

Appreciates the Advocate.

"Your association is also fortunate in the publicity that it has been able to secure for its various undertakings through the co-operation of the Grocers' Advocate and its editor. There can be no question but that the splendid assistance given the grocers of Alameda County by this influence have assisted greatly in achieving the success that they have secured."

Mr. Walker assured his hearers that there would be something doing when a body of men like theirs should go to the Legislature and ask for what was fair and reasonable.

A. H. Powers, editor of the Advocate then spoke briefly about various other matters in which those present were interested. He expressed regret that Mr. Warnke should not have been chosen as the delegate to Cincinnati as a delegate. It was this remark that resulted in the action taken by the grocers present latter in the evening.

J. F. Paulding, secretary of the Pacific Coast Retail Grocers' Association, held the interest of the banqueters for twenty minutes. As a grocer of eleven years standing, he knew that the retail grocery trade were the victims of circumstances. They sold their goods at prices that were set by men who settle their bills for from 20 to 50 cents on the dollar.

Not To Raise Prices.

"The general public has a wrong idea of what our association is for," said Mr. Paulding. "They think our associations are formed to raise prices. This is not true. They are formed merely to bring prices back to a proper level from which they usually have been hammmered down by the few firms who think they can make up for loss on profits on their staples by high prices on things the cost of which their customers are not posted, or who intend to fail."

Mr. Paulding explained the flour condition at length. He stated that it was the purpose of the State Grocers' Association to educate the grocers to the possibility that lay before them in bettering their conditions. That they had succeeded so far in San Francisco that all but about seven of the better class of grocers were anxious to have the mills fix and maintain a price at which their flour should be sold, providing the mills would cut off any firm who might not maintain the price.

"Each of the firms who are now opposed to our plans are getting a special inside on flour over the 25 cents allowed to the average grocer," Mr. Paulding added. "We are not objecting to the mills giving the large dealers discounts in proportion to the purchases they make. It is not our claim that the large buyer is not entitled to a greater discount if he buys enough flour at one time to warrant the mills making him this concession. But what we do claim is that the mills should not allow this dealer to use the special rebate to the disadvantage of the rest of their customers."

Mr. Walker at this juncture stated that the manufacturer had the power to regulate the price at which his goods should be sold, and cited instances where this had been done. He told how the manufacturers protected the hardware dealers against unintelligent competition and added that if any mill wanted to protect their customers they could do so.

Must Secure Business Results.

Toastmaster Duncan at this point called upon H. D. Cushing as the diplomat of the association. Mr. Cushing stated that since theirs was a business organization of business men and for business purposes, the members had to look to business results to find out whether it had been a success or failure. He was pleased with what had been done and hoped and expected to see the accomplishment of much more during the next twelve months than had ever been done before. Mr. Cushing spoke of the results of their Collection Bureau, and expressed hope that even better things would come in the near future.

Warnke Chosen as Delegate.

President Sill at this juncture brought up the matter of the delegate to the National Convention. He thought the association should send Mr. Warnke. He deplored the fact that the funds of the organization were not sufficient to allow the extravagance of a delegate, but expressed his willingness to start the fund with $25. Mr. Powers of the Advocate followed close with another $25. There was an answering cheer and Toastmaster Duncan was kept busy for the next ten minutes putting down the names of volunteer contributors.

Ex-Secretary Hopkins spoke briefly about the varieties of methods by which fifty-seven grocers could help themselves. Mr Hopkins is a prime favorite and his remarks were well received.

Quite the address of the evening was delivered by J. S Wixson, who was called on to speak about the flour situation.

Wixson Talks About Flour.

"The reason why we must center all our strength in this flour fight," he said "is because it is an entering wedge for the betterment of conditions in many other lines. It is absolutely necessary for us now to put flour on a paying business. We have the help of one mill towards doing this and if we give that mill enough support, we will prove to the other mills that they made a mistake in not acting as we expected them to

"I am a director of the State Grocers' Association We want to see if we cannot change these methods so that we will be able to pay 100 cents on the dollar for our goods live like white men and support our families in decent style.

"It requires only that we should be able to convince them that they must do this in order to get our business, and you will be surprised to see how quickly they will fall into line

Should Attend Meetings.

"I want to say now, that each of you gentlemen should attend every meeting of our association. You should get together and agree on a line of action. If you will only do that, you will have no difficulty in securing the active co-operation of the mills in protecting you against the few cutters.

"I believe the mills would like to be doing that now if they could only see their way clear to do so. It is our business to help their eyesight

"Each individual grocer must act energetically. He must sell somebody's goods. In order to teach the mills their lesson thoroughly, he must say to them 'I sell as little of your flour as I possibly can.'

MR. PAULDING SPEAKS.

Any man who tells you that I have been bought, or that I am working for some special firm without regard to the interests of my employers—the retail grocers—does so from a bad motive. He wants you to believe that his firm is warranted in treating you unfairly and is willing to lie to you to make you act in a way that will be injurious to your best interests.

To any such man, you can say definitely that I am working only for the interests of the retail grocers, and that if his firm will only do what they should in protecting the retail grocery interests, that I will work as earnestly for his firm as I am working for other firms who protect the retail groces, and that it will not cost them a five cent piece either.

AFTER TRADING STAMPS.

Many Merchants Combine To Demand Protection From This Graft.

A conference of the Legislative committee of the State Grocers' Association, consisting of Messrs. Connolly, Stulz and Warnke, together with committees from the Cigar Dealers' Association and the Merchants' Association was held on Tuesday evening to consider the matter of an anti-trading stamp law. The matter was gone into carefully.

Attorney Chas. A. Son, acting for the Cigar Dealers' Association, presented the draft of a law, of the constitutionality of which he felt assured.

The bill as prepared by Mr. Son has been submitted to Mr. Clark of Miller & Clark of Stockton, attorney for the State Grocers' Association, and to Mr. Wright, attorney for the Merchants' Association. If it receives their approval the bill will be presented and backed up by the force of all the merchants of the State of California.

OF GENERAL INTEREST.

The Illinois Canning Company, capitalized at $1,000,000, to operate and maintain packing houses, canning and pickling factories, filed articles of incorporation at Camden, N. J., December 19. Charles C. Crany, William Moore and George H. B. Martin are incorporators. The latter named is a resident of Camden and was formerly a shoe manufacturer.

The wholesale grocers of Indiana have been in conference with S. E. Morehead of the Continental Tobacco Trust. The wholesalers claim that the Indiana grocers have been compelled by the trust to buy on the "allotment system" and only being granted commissions on condition of "loading up the trade" in advance.

Indiana grocers object to this idea and want the trust to take the commission off the regular bills they buy instead of off the allotment. The committee of wholesalers who met Mr. Morehead consisted of George Brinkmeyer, Charles Wells and C. A. Elliott.

The Chicago Retailers' Journal says: Orme & Sutton Rice Company's office furniture here has been attached for non-payment of rent. They have also been sued by their manager and some jobbers of this city.

Sicily filberts are firmer in the primary market, but offerings for prompt shipment are reported made at unchanged quotations.

Baltimore advices say that the weak tomato canners are about sold out. Rumors concerning a tomato trust continue in circulation, but so far as can be learned no definite progress looking to the clearing up of low-priced goods has been made. However, any change in tomatoes must be an advance, as the pack was considerably smaller than it was last year.

STOCK-TAKING.

The Necessity of Learning the Comparative Values of Assets and Liabilities.

By this time or by the first of February at the latest, every careful retail grocer will have taken stock.

In order that he may know just where he stands, he should have figured up all his tangible assets. When he has added together the value of the stock he has in his store, the collectable value of his accounts receivable and the present value of his fixtures, with his horses and wagons and put them on one side of the balance sheet, and has put the sum total of the bills he owes on the other side, he will know two things.

First.—He will know whether the policy he has followed in the past year brought as much success as his expenditure of time and energy and his investment of money entitles him to.

Second.—He will know what his business is worth in dollars and cents.

Another Valuable Asset.

The business may have an even greater value than this in "good will."

The reputation a store has for selling only goods the quality of which can be depended upon is of large money value to the dealer.

The reputation that everything he sells is fresh and reasonable in price also has a large money value.

The assurance that children and servants will receive as prompt and careful attention and their wants be supplied with as great care as if the housewife came to the store herself, is also valuable.

Another thing that tends to strengthen the value of a business is the belief of the customer that there will be no mistake either through carelessness or intent in the accounts or in the weights and measures.

All of these features are combined under the head of "good will."

This good will is often worth more to the merchant in dollars and cents than the merchandise which his trial balance shows he carries on his shelves and in his storehouse.

It depends upon the service the merchant gives and the quality of the goods he sells.

This good will is not quickly or easily earned. On the other hand, it is easily frightened away.

This fact makes it necessary for the dealer who values this good to be sure that the quality of the goods he sells will always prove satisfactory.

This assurance he has when he sells "Schilling's Best." He can give his customer the same assurance with "Schilling's Best" goods because they are "money back."

The value to the dealer of having his customers absolutely certain of the satisfactory quality of his high class goods is immense.

The additional fact that A. Schilling & Co. protect the retail dealer in the selling price of goods (whose quality they guarantee) adds to their value to the dealer. This fact helps make the increase of money value of those assets that he can put his hands on.

The further fact that encouragement of this policy by the retail grocers will establish its value with other manufacturers, makes it a matter of necessity for dealers to give their support to the goods of A. Schilling & Co. and show by their co-operation that they approve of the policy and appreciate the efforts of this firm to better trade conditions.

It is necessary for retail dealers to convince the manufacturers that protected goods will get the right treatment at their hands. When the manufacturer can be made to believe this, there will be no question about their taking advantage of the power of the retail trade to help them in maintaining the popularity of their goods, which depends upon the dealer receiving satisfactory profits for handling them.

For this double reason the Advocate wishes to reiterate that the dealer owes it to himself as well as to A. Schilling & Co. not only to carry "Schilling's Best" goods in stock, but to advance their sale whenever it is possible.

DEL MONTE MILLS' POSITION.

The action of the Del Monte Milling Company in retiring their flour from the list was taken after a conference with the other mills. They have decided to leave their specialties on the list and have added meals, graham and whole wheat flour. This action on the part of the Del Monte Mills should be appreciated.

MORE THAN PLEASED.

In writing of the Money-Weight Scales, Julius Lilienthal, 444 Van Ness avenue, writes:

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 7, 1897.

Messrs. Pierce & Co., General Western Agents Computing Scale Company:

Gentlemen:—You ask if I am pleased with the Money-Weight Scales purchased from you; to say yes, would be drawing it very mildly, for I am more than pleased. My only regret is that I did not have them years ago.

Yours truly,

J. Lilienthal.

STATE DIRECTORS ACT.

Pass Strong Resolutions and Decide What Laws To Concentrate On.

There was a largely attended meeting of the directors of the State Grocers' Association last Thursday evening, with President Pearson of Stockton in the chair.

The directors decided to concentrate their efforts on the four following measures:

1. Extending the time in which an open account outlaws from two years to four.
2. Making the wife and husband mutually responsible for the necessaries of life.
3. To curb trading stamps.
4. To allow the formation of mutual fire insurance companies along lines that have proven safe in Eastern States.

They passed the following resolutions:

Recommend the Globe Mills.

Whereas, The California Retail Grocers' & Merchants' Association requested the California flour mills to establish and maintain a retail price on their standard brands of flour, in those communities where grocers were organized and asked for same; and

Whereas, The San Francisco grocers and the Alameda County grocers have, by committee and resolutions, the mills with whom they deal, to take this action; and

Whereas, The Globe Grain & Milling Company being the only mill to respond favorably to this request; and be it

Resolved, That we, the board of directors of the California Retail Grocers' & Merchants' Association, request the affiliating associations to show favor to the product of the Globe Grain & Milling Company so far as their business will permit.

Preference to Non-Premium Goods.

Whereas, The entire grocery trade of the United States, both wholesale and retail, is joining in a protest against the pernicious practice of accompanying cereals with premiums; be it

Resolved, That the associations affiliating with the California Retail Grocers' & Merchants' Association be advised to give preference in their sales to cereals that do not carry premiums and that the sale of cereals carrying premiums of any sort be discouraged whenever possible; be it further

Resolved, That the thanks of the association be extended to the American Cereal Company and to the H-O and Force Companies for their action in agreeing to discontinue premium schemes; and be it further

Resolved, That each affiliating association of the State Grocers' Association be advised to pass resolutions similar to this.

Denounce the Tobacco Trust.

Whereas, The American Tobacco Company are starting branch retail cigar stores in many communities on the Pacific Coast;

Whereas, We consider that being their customers, that we are entitled to protection and further consider that this method of dealing direct with the consumer is detrimental to our interest; be it

Resolved, That we, the board of directors of the California Retail Grocers' & Merchants' Association, recommend the affiliating associations that they use their influence with their members to have them use independent goods.

GORDON PACKING CO.

The Gordon Packing Co. were incorporated October 14, 1904, and was formerly known as the Gordon Packing and Manufacturing Co., which succeeded the Sonoma Packing Co. The Gordon Packing Co. are among the leading energetic pushers for trade. They put up pickles, catsups, jams, preserves, etc. The newly incorporated company are officered as follows: James E. Gordon, President; George Gordon, Secretary. The company not long since acquired the Oakland Pickle Works, a well-known plant for the past thirty years or which succeeded the Sonoma Packing longer, and bearing with it a favorable reputation for putting up reliable goods.

The present city offices of the Gordon Packing Company is at 319 Clay street, at which point some of their goods are packed. A removal to more central and commodious quarters for their city offices and salesroom will soon be consummated and due notice of the change and the new location will appear in this journal.

SOMETHING NEW FOR THE TRADE.

The E. Ghirardelli Mercantile Company, E. Ghirardelli, president, and C. V. Lodge, secretary and treasurer, are just putting on the market one of the choicest lines of pickles, sauces, catsup, etc., that this market has ever known. We refer to the absolute high merit of the goods, and to the very artistic manner in which they are packed and the attractive nature of the packages. This company have inagurated their new business on the proper lines of "not how cheap but how good" and will operate their factory on these lines. This so-called high grade method has always succeeded admirably with the leading manufacturers of the United States, and will naturally repeat in their case. As they operate their own factory they can control it to their satisfaction. Consumers are quick to detect superior merit in any food product and grocers are equally alive to it, and will not hesitate to serve their patrons with such goods as will satisfy their trade. On catsups they are not satisfied with "as good as any other," but intend to go a point further. One of the important features for the retailer is that the goods on his shelves shall present an attractive appearance, and in this respect the company have not spared labor or expense in getting up neat label work. The firm are not new to the trade by any means, and are well and favorably known. Their price list will show full in our quotation columns from January 1. This company are Pacific Coast selling agents for Rising Sun Baking Powder Co., also carry a large line of flavoring extracts.

Attracting Trade

SUGGESTIVE DISPLAYS.

An Attempt Should Be Made to Create a Desire for Certain Lines.

Suggestiveness in displays, no matter what the character, is an element which should not be overlooked. Too many retailers fail to develop this element as much as they might when arranging shelves or making counter displays, and, consequently, lose much which they might otherwise gain. The same observation applies with equal force to the arrangement of samples in the salesrooms of wholesalers. There should be an attempt made to create a desire for certain lines of goods and the more this is developed and fostered the more certain are those who do the work certain of good sales.

Sometimes, perhaps oftener than most persons think, this matter of suggestiveness is even more effective in inducing trade than open solicitation. There is a feeling if a person is asked directly to purchase an article that some sort of undue influence is being used to cause one to buy, while if the influence is exerted only through the mute eloquence of the goods themselves no such feeling exists.

Not Necessary to Be Elaborate.

It isn't necessary in arranging a display of this character that it should be very elaborate. Any neat and tasteful arrangement of the goods, one that will emphasize their attractive qualities, will be quite as satisfactory and will lead to quite as important sales. Elaboration is frequently a detriment rather than a means of encouragement. The appearance isn't particularly inviting, nor does elaboration always bring out the stronger points of the goods. Accordingly a dealer should study his goods, his shelving and his light. When he has acquired a thorough knowledge and understanding of these he can arrange his store to better advantage and attract trade much better than in any other way. And the effort required is not large. There is plenty of opportunity for men who are busy with other things to do this sort or work or, at least, direct it.

Show to Advantage.

Suppose a dealer receives a considerable quantity of package goods. They should be arranged so that they will show to good advantage. If the outside of the packages is light they will stand a dark shelf and can be placed there. If they are dark then they must be placed where the light is stronger and where it will emphasize their attractive coloring or size or shape. A little forethought and a little care in managing the display space at one's disposal will be sufficient.

It is wise to display all cereal foods together, for example, all spices together, and all of other classes of goods together. In doing this one emphasizes the other, and the sight of a box of cinnamon or pepper might cause a customer to remember that a supply of different varieties of spices were required. The same might apply with equal force to different sorts of other goods. One might suggest the purchase of another, and in a majority of instances a purchaser will ask for something he or she sees, while, were it not in sight, it would be forgotten. These are little things, but the retail grocer's life is made up of little things, and the more they are developed, the more they are made to yield their share of business the more prosperous the grocer will become.

Room for Improvement.

There is room here for great improvement in most retail stores. It is frequently only a matter of acquiring some idea of the importance of an adequate display to largely increase trade in certain directions. Moreover, the average dealer could profitably improve his surroundings without exciting very much effort. It is often merely a question of introducing a little orderliness, and a little method. It would be done instantly in a majority of instances if the retailer really understood its value, not alone as an advertising medium but as a money saver in the storage and frequently in the distribution of goods.

Goods That Attract.

In arranging attractive displays there is the entire line of canned goods, most of which have exceptionally attractive labels, and some are actual works of art, not only in coloring, but in drawing and finish. Such goods add materially to the attractiveness of any display and should be included wherever possible. Many of the labels have brilliant colors, and such goods would be especially appropriate to use in a holiday display. They would add variety and strength to the ordinary display of goods found in a retail grocery store.

Harmony and contrast are the two most important features of these displays. There is a harmony of arrangement and a contrast of colors which will attract and in most instances will lead to sales. Buyers are irresistibly drawn by warm colors. They are also strongly attracted by the display of handsome packages, no matter what the variety of goods may be. Taking advantage of this the retailer can induce increased sales with no expense for advertising.

It Requires Thought.

Naturally it requires a little thought to make these arrangements all they should be, but after all, what is a little time compared with the increased business absolutely certain to follow? It is by developing these features of store life and management that one may reasonably expect to gain increased business and enlarged profits. Markets are made by good goods offered at reasonable prices but customers are retained by making a store attractive and giving it the appearance of constantly increasing prosperity. It is not so much what one says as it is the little things, the appearance, the looks of the store and the arrangement of the goods that counts.

WHAT ASSOCIATION IS WORTH.

"It makes me tired to hear grocers knocking the grocers' association," said Theodore Hauschild, corner Hamilton and Dodge streets. "I do not attend the meetings and I do not take an active part in the work, but I am in full sympathy with the organization. Instead of kicking because a few do the work, as some stay-aways do, I am very grateful that they will carry on the work so well which I cannot do. The facts are the association has done the grocers of Cleveland lots of good and I see it all the time. One doesn't have to be at the meetings to see the work the organization is doing in bettering conditions."

It is comforting to hear such remarks coming so heartily from those not active in the labors of the association. Secretary Wilson ran into a similarly encouraging incident recently. He had been endeavoring a long time to get a certain grocer into the organization. He was a good man and the secretary knew he ought to be a member. He held off, however, for months. A few days ago he told Mr. Wilson to propose his name, saying: "If I had taken your advice and joined the association months ago I would have saved $150."

He did not vouchsafe further explanation, but as it was a voluntary assertion he evidently meant it literally. --Inland Grocer.

A LITTLE STORY ABOUT PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

A New York business man who was once a ranchman in the West tells this story about President Roosevelt:

"Several cowboys, of whom I was one, were camping near the trail, out on the plains of North Dakota, one day in the early eighties, when we saw a man coming along on horseback. We did not know him, but, from his new and elaborate trappings, we at once decided that he was a tenderfoot. This being the case, we felt that it would be appropriate and interesting to give him a cowboy reception.

"Partly hidden among the bushes, we awaited his coming. Suddenly, when he was almost among us on the trail, we sprang to our feet and gave vent to wild and blood-curdling yells, at the same time emptying our six-shooters. The bullets flew all around the young man on the horse. Being rather careless as to where we shot, in those days, it was a wonder that at least the horse was not hit. The ordinary tenderfoot would have ridden for his life out of range. But this one sat straight as an arrow and never changed his half-amused expression during the fusillade of yells and bullets. More than this, he held his horse down to a walk, and, when he had got a few paces beyond us, he turned in his saddle and made us a low, sarcastic bow. We had no idea who he was, but we at once decided that this particular tenderfoot was all right. The next day, at a round-up, I saw him in the corral roping calves—a dangerous pastime for any but an old hand.

"'Who's that chap with the get-up of stage cowboy, but the nerve of the real article,?' I asked.

"'Why,' somebody answered, 'that's young Roosevelt, a New York swell, fresh from college.'

"'Well,' I replied, 'even with them things against him, I reckon he's about as good as anybody in the outfit.'"—Success.

SONORA WANTS TO HELP.

Sonora, Cal., Dec. 31, 1904.

The Retail Grocers' Advocate,
San Francisco.

Dear Sirs—Enclosed find our check, No. 292, on Tuolumne County Bank for seven dollars, out of which $2.00 is to pay for our subscription to your paper and $5.00 as our contribution to the legislature fund.

We feel very much interested in the bills that will be submitted to the next legislature and sincerely hope they will go through.

We have talked with our Assemblyman-elect, Dr. C. V. Jones, and being a business man, he is very much in favor of the bills extending the lawful limit of an account from two to four years, and also of making a wife responsible for the family's debts for the necessities of life; as to our Senator, Hon. J. B. Curtin, who is an attorney, he is in favor of the second mentioned bill, but as to the first he would not commit himself, but only said that he did not think it wise to have too many amendments to the already existing laws. Mr. Curtin is an able lawyer, a good talker, and a man who will always listen to a food argument.

We think that our city, and in fact, Tuolumne county is very much in need of organization; we have tried to somewhat organize among ourselves, but failed on account of the lack of interest taken in the matter and of the amount of work to be done, which, of course, no one was ready or willing to do. Wishing you success, we remain,

Yours truly,
J. Michel & Co.

NEW SALMON COMPANY.

E. B. Deming says, in regard to the plans of the Pacific American Fisheries Company: "We propose to operate on a large scale. We have the old Pacific American canneries at Bellingham as well as a cannery at Friday Harbor, although we are undecided at present whether or not we shall operate the latter during the coming season."

E. B. Deming, who recently bid in the Pacific Packing & Navigation Company's salmon canneries at Bellingham for $310,000, has organized an entirely new company known as the Pacific-American Fisheries. This concern is incorporated under the laws of Maine for $1,500,000.

The officers are all Chicago men, as follows: President, J. F. Harris; first vice-president and general manager, E. B. Deming; second vice-president, J. G. Snydacken; secretary, Frank L. Deming; treasurer, Samuel Scotten.

PECAN CROP.

The entire crop of pecans for this year, including Mexico, is estimated at 3,400,000 pounds. The average crop since 1896 has been 14,500,000 pounds. Last year there was a little over 7,000,000. There is a good crop of small Louisiana nuts this season, which are eagerly sought for mixed nuts and bring good prices.

Prices are much lower than the trade expected, a good medium polished nut selling at 7 cents at St. Louis, when there would have been no surprise had 9 cents been quoted. It is probable that the crop is about all harvested now. It matured a full month earlier than usual, and offerings began which were accepted by the trade immediately, upon the supposition that there would be higher prices later. Large dealers took advantage of this situation, bought everything obtainable, and are now in a position to virtually control the market if they so desire.

WHEN AMERICANS ARE EDUCATED TO THE USE OF THE healthy beverage—wine—at their tables it will become the greatest industry of California, and will produce an income for this State of 300,000,000 dollars, as that industry now produces for France. Dr. Lyman Abbott writes:

There is a considerable wine industry in California. It would perhaps be greater than it is if Americans were still not ensnared by the delusion that foreign products are presumptively better than home products. We went into one of the wineries in the vicinity of Stockton. Even if I could remember the figures, I should be afraid to report how many were the wine casks amid which our conductor led us. Some of them were so big, that the top of the cask furnished a quite adequate space for dancing. I believe, though of that I am not quite sure, a quadrille had been danced upon one. From the best information I could obtain, by inquiries in different quarters, I could not learn that the wine trade of California had done anything to promote intemperance; in fact, most of my informants were of the opinion that its effect had been in the other direction; certainly the signs of drinking and drunkenness in San Francisco were less than they were in New York, as they are less in New York than they are in London. A little of the wine made in California comes East and is sold as California wine; some of it goes across the sea and is sold abroad as American wines. I do not know why it is, but in American hotels and restaurants, American wines are made little of and often it is impossible to get those of the best brand; but when two or three years ago I was in Southern England, I found in almost every English hotel American wines advertised as a specialty; evidently they were popular and in demand. A good deal of the wine product of California goes across the sea and then comes back again from France as a French or German wine, and still more of it is put upon our tables with French and German labels, without ever having gone across the sea.

Some fifteen years or more ago, a well-known chemist in New York City obtained an analysis of twenty-five bottles of wine. In only two of the twenty-five did he find any indication of adulteration. Despite the general impression, in times past apparently entirely justified, that many of the wines of commerce are manufactured articles, he came to the conclusion, and it seemed to me a just one, that it is now cheaper for the dealer to buy a cheap American wine, to add to it some alcohol, and sell it for the product of a foreign vineyard. It may perhaps interest those temperance reformers, who are very much opposed to the use of wine upon the table, but who do not hesitate to give their approval to alcoholic medicines of various descriptions, that we are told at the winery that the major part of the sherry which they made was sold to the patent medicine venders and constituted a chief element in their patent medicines. Personally, I have entire respect for the total abstainer who really does abstain, and also respect for one who believes that it is legitimate to use wine in moderation upon the dinner-table; but I find it very difficult to maintain respect for the total abstainer who banishes wine from the dinner table and then drinks it out of a bottle from the closet between meals and calls it medicine. About such a one there appears to me a rather serious deficiency, which it is charitable to hope is intellectual rather than moral. Such imbibers are often entirely honest, but they are easily deluded.

California Cans Corn.

California is going to be something of a factor in corn canning from now on.

There were about 10,000 cases packed this season as an experiment, and it was a success; a success, too, to the extent that it will lead to a larger output another year.

All jobbers and retailers should put California packed corn on their lists.

FRUIT IN PACKAGES.

The California Promotion Committee has sent a letter through the State that is of interest to fruit growers and packers. It is as follows:

"This committee especially urges the attention of the people of California, the producers of California and especially the packers of California fruit, of the great necessity of having their products done up in small and convenient parcels which would appeal to the people at large. The committee urges all those who have not adopted the putting of the fruit in attractive cartons to take up this method as far as possible.

"It has been called to the attention of this committee that in many of the large cities of the East it is impossible for the housewife to go to her grocery store and buy, say, an attractive looking pound package of California prunes. The reason is that the prunes are sold in bulk and the housewife is not as much attracted by seeing her goods hauled out of a box with a great many others as she would be by buying them in an especially made attractive carton, and the desirability of selling goods in small packages has been found to create a demand for those goods that enhance the price and bring them in much higher regard in public favor. When people see goods sold in bulk they are apt to entertain the idea that these goods are not a luxury, as when they see them sold in small packages. There is no doubt but that prunes and raisins put up in attractive cartons, weighing from one to five pounds, would greatly help the market for these articles. Only high-grade fruits should be used, and every firm should so far as possible adopt a trade mark so that their goods may be known throughout the whole world. California can market a billion pounds of prunes a year when the world is educated, and the same is true of most of her fruit products."

HONEY.

Causes That Produced a Considerable Shrinkage in California's Output.

The loss to bee-owners this season has been large in many localities. In some cases the entire output was too small to admit of shipment. Honey is produced in a large commercial way in Southern California and the upper San Joaquin Valley. The banner year for the honey crop was that of 1903, when there was an output of 8,400,000 pounds. This year the entire crop amounted to only 2,500,000 pounds. In 1900 there was another falling off, when the crop only turned out to be 2,208,000 pounds. This shows the uncertainty of this crop as out of eight years there were but four years of an abundant yield.

Some of the Advantages the Grocer Derives:

1—They give the correct value of the article being weighed.
2—They prevent loss from errors in calculation.
3—They save time required in making calculation
4—They are made better than ordinary scales.
5—With proper care they will last an ordinary life-time.
6—The pivots are of hardened tool steel, and with agate bearings inserted at the proper point, are practically indestructible.
7—They are sensitive to the very small fraction of an ounce.
8—They are an ornament to any store.
9—They are the only scale that is mechanically honest.
10—Customers, knowing them to be an honest scale, like to have their purchases weighed on them.

Cigars and Tobacco

As the United Cigar Stores Company have entered San Francisco for the purpose of securing business, the following short rule will be of interest to other cigar dealers. It shows what the trust requires from its clerks:

"In showing goods endeavor to make your customer take in his own hands the article you wish to sell. You will find it much easier to make the sale than if you kept possession of it."

A little reflection will show that this rule is founded on human nature. The man who gets the prospective purchaser to take an article in his own hands has in the first place made it apparent that there is every confidence that the article will stand the closest examination and inspection; and, in the second place, the customer is bound to regard with far more enthusiasm an article which he has had in his hands and has for the moment made a part of himself than he will for something which he merely looks at while it is in the hands of another person.

One of the points which the salesman should always act upon is to strive to compel the prospective customer to identify himself with the thing which it is desired to sell.

To Clean Meerschaum Pipes.

Dealers are some times asked by customers the best way to clean genuine meerschaum goods. Here is a simple and easy method that any dealer can remember and give out to the next customer asking the question:

An ordinary silk handkerchief will clean plain meerschaum goods, after care has been used to remove all dust by means of a soft brush. If any particles of grit should remain on the bowl, rubbing the surface of the pipe even with a silk handkerchief would be apt to produce scratches.

Some times there are smuts or marks upon the meerschaum which cannot be removed by dry wiping, and in such cases it may be necessary to give them a careful washing with a soft sponge and a small quantity of soap and water.

Extreme care should be taken not to allow any of the water to reach the inside of the pipe, or it will be practically ruined. As soon as the washing is completed the meerschaum should be quickly wiped dry and polished with a silk handkerchief.

Ignacio Haya, of Sanchez & Haya, has been visiting in San Francisco, making his headquarters with Tillman & Bendel, the local distributors. From San Francisco he will go to Los Angeles and will return East via Salt Lake and Denver.

Inglow & Smith have started a cigar store at Eagle Point, Oregon.

Among the prominent wholesalers who have recently been in San Francisco attending the gathering of the wholesale grocers and tobacconists are: J. C. Lang, head of the National Grocery Co., of Seattle, Wash.; James S. Goldsmith, of Schwabacher Bros. & Co., Seattle; Mr. Fisher, of Fisher Bros., Seattle, and P. C. Drescher, of Mebius & Drescher, Sacramento.

J. E. Bendrick has bought E. A. Beachwood's cigar store at Tacoma.

Finazzi & Co. have succeeded Fenegrine & Co., cigars, at Tacoma.

Mr. Daniels has bought F. A. Clementz' cigar store at Tacoma.

EHRMAN BROS. & CO.,
S. F. Distributers.

It is reported from Grants Pass that Mr. Horning, of the firm of Horning & DuPuy has sold his share of the cigar business to his partner.

A Glass, in the employ of Tillmann & Bendel, has departed for Eureka, Humboldt county, in the interest of his firm.

B. W. McIntosh, who went to Virginia the latter portion of 1904, is expected home almost any day.

I. I. Hess, in the employ of Ehrman Bros., California Street, has started out for the Sacramento Valley to gather in business for his firm.

Mr. Fred Cox has gone down the Coast for the Ehrman Bros. Mr. Cox is a popular traveling man who will give a good account of himself.

Messrs. B. Hess, S. I. Blake and Lloyd Huff, the city men who have charge of this portion of the route, have buckled down to business with the beginning of the new year.

Al Ehrman is looking after the Alameda end of the business.

J. Posner is in the city, having come from Idaho and Washington, where he has been doing good work.

During the month of December Ehrman Bros. report the largest sales month during the past year. . Over 700,000 Optimos were disposed of, which is an exceedingly good showing, and also displays the fact that the Ehrman Bros. are live, energetic business men. The season already shows signs of opening good.

BREWING IN THE CIGAR AND TOBACCO TRADE.

All the signals are hoisted for some further left-over troubles which began in 1904 between jobbers and the American Tobacco Company and between the United Cigar Stores Company and the independent jobbers, retailers and manufacturers of cigars. There are likely to be some stormy days when the cigar trust gets in its work and uses all its powers, well trained by its experiences in the East, to concentrate the retailing of cigars of their own brands within themselves. That the fight is not to be one-sided, the action of M. A. Gunst & Co. in joining the independents, sufficiently proves. The trust, with its unlimited capital, is a power which its opponents must not undervalue if they would fight to win.

The jobbers have not yet succeeded in getting their differences with the American Tobacco Company adjusted satisfactorily to themselves, and during this interval, the independent plug manufacturers have not been idle. So the beginning of 1905 does not promise the most peaceful repose for the tobacconist, be he jobber, manufacturer or retailer.

"JERSEY" CREAM.

Jersey Cream, referred to in this article, is a California product, put up by a California company, on California capital, using for its product the milk of the California ranches, unsurpassed in the world, hence the name of the company, "Condensed Milk Company of California." Their factory is situated at Valley Ford, in Sonoma county, which is recognized as the richest dairy section of the State. Some two months since the ownership and management of this plant changed hands, and the new company has placed therein the best and most approved up-to-date machinery. This, coupled with the fact that they employ only experienced operators, enables them to produce a grade of cream not equalled in the world. In purity, quality and percentage of butter fat no other excels the Jersey Cream. It will keep in any climate, and after cans are opened the contents will remain fresh and pure for from three days to a week, depending naturally upon the climatic conditions where the cream is used.

The Condensed Milk Company of California, whose offices and salesroom is at 319 Clay street, and its management desires it understood clearly that their Jersey Evaporated Cream is open to comparative test with any othe cream product prepared. Their cans are large size, with attractive labels and are a good seller, giving the best of satisfaction to customers in every instance. This, of course, being a matter of much import to grocers handling these goods.

PROFITS ARE POSSIBLE.

Wide-Awake Dealers Find No Difficulty In Getting Their Price for Flour That Has Quality.

During the past week the Advocate's representative has talked with a number of representative retail grocers of San Francisco, Berkeley, Alameda and Oakland. These men unite in saying that they have had no difficulty in selling the "A1" flour of the Globe Milling Company at $1.40, while the price of the standard flour of the other mills is $1.25 and $1.30. The reason their trade is glad to take the "A1" flour at the higher price is because they are able to say to them truthfully, that the "A1" flour, being a mixture of the Eastern "hard" wheat and best California wheat, is a stronger flour and therefore gives better results.

One large grocer of Oakland stated that when one of his best customers 'phoned to him recently for a sack of flour, he had desired to assure himself as to whether the "A1" flour which he had sold her before had given thorough satisfaction. So he asked if she wanted him to send "——" flour, naming the brand she had used prior to the time.

The answer came back quick and sharp. The customer said: "No, sir; I want that 'A1' flour. If you have none in stock, you need not send me any flour until you can get some more of it."

The Globe Mills also offer the "Banquet" flour of the same quality and price as the standard flours to be sold at $1.35 per sack. It pays 15 cents per sack profit. They also offer the "Silver Star," to be sold at $1.25 per sack, which pays 16½ cents per sack profit. Grocers have no difficulty in selling the "Silver Star" at $1.25 per sack, against the standard brands, for which they ask $1.30 and $1.35, although it costs them $1.20.

WONDERS OF INDUSTRIAL LIFE INSURANCE.

Says H. W. Lanier in the World's Work: Thirty-three years ago a New York insurance man's attention was attracted one day by a rather derogatory reference in the Massachusetts insurance report to the work of an English company, which was insuring the lives of workingmen and children on a large scale. Today that man is president of one of three similar American companies, which stand pledged to pay in the future more than two billions of dollars to more than ten millions of people; which are disbursing half a million dollars a week to their policy holders in sums averaging perhaps a hundred dollars; which have assets stored up of nearly one hundred and fifty millions; and most notable of all, which collect, by hand, a quarter of a million dollars a day in ten cent pieces!

HOLDING SITUATIONS.

Good Common or Horse Sense Is What Is Required.

The hardest man in the world to find is the successful salesman. The man who could successfully define the salesman's qualities, and infallibly select the man who possesses them, would hold the key to commercial supremacy, writes H. J. Hapgood in The Book-Keeper and Business Man's Magazine. There are men with the indescribable knack which enables them to sell anything from a gold brick to a cake of soap, but there is no outward sign by which they may be told. Often the good talker with imposing personality and winning manners fails at the psychological moment when the sale should be consummated, while the man of uncouth appearance who presents his case haltingly can "knock the apple off the tree" whenever he attempts to make a sale.

Not Enough To Go Around.

The qualities by which a salesman interests a buyer and commands his confidence are too subtle to be described. The one thing certain about good salesmen is that there are not half enough of them to go around. Demands for them are constant and hard to fill. I am often asked about the general attitude of employers toward college men, especially recent graduates. The public has been misled by the gibes at the self-conceit and errors of the young college man entering business. As a matter of fact the value of thorough intellectual training is greatly appreciated in the world of business, and concerns which would not formerly have considered college men at all are eagerly seeking them today. A generation ago the majority of college men went into professions. Now the majority go into business without any suspicion of a handicap to be overcome.

Still Expecting.

The time when a college man must start in at $5 a week is happily past, and a competent young graduate cannot be had for less than $10 with the promise of rapid advancement. Apropos of this it is amusing to note the variety of salaries expected by college men seeking their first position. The majority are reasonable and eager to make a start at $10 to $15 a week, while others expect $5000 a year from the day they graduate. Needless to say, most of this latter class are still expecting.

Age a Bar.

The saddest fact which has been brought out by systematic study of employment problems is the lack of demand for middle-aged or elderly men. Thirty is the age usually specified, even when the position demands a high degree of ability and experience. If the right man is from 35 to 38, he is still considered, but at 40 the employer is inclined to shake his head, and at 50 the man seeking employment in the higher positions is strictly "up against it." The middle-aged man who has earned from three to ten thousand a year, and is for some reason displaced, is the hardest of all employment propositions. Unless such a one has money or influence, he must usually be content with a poorly-paid routine position or try salesmanship on a commission basis.

Some Are Indifferent.

Curiously enough, the great difficulty in placing many men is found in their own indifference. It would naturally seem as if a man looking for a position would do all he could toward securing it; but the employment expert has no more frequent trouble than lack of co-operation on the part of the clients who come to him. The qualification on which most men fail is found to be lack of industry. Sometimes firms are unreasonable and expect too much of a man at the start. They do not see that the new employe cannot take up the work of an experienced one and master every detail in a moment. A little experience in dealing with new men invariably corrects this error.

Mistakes Go Against You.

The reason above all others for which men are discharged is the lack of common or horse sense. The man who makes inexcusable breaks in business, and goes on making them, is the man who no employer can afford to keep, no matter how great may be his industry, loyalty, integrity or purely technical ability. When a single mistake may lose business amounting to more than the yearly salary of the man who makes it, it is obvious that good judgment is the quality valued above all others by the man who is shopping for high-grade employes.

NEW TONIC BITTERS.

Our quotations show the new tonic bitters to which this article relates, not new in a sense, but perhaps new to many grocers. The bitters are put up in 22 oz. bottles with attractive labels, and are compounded from herbs, roots, seeds and barks, giving them the natural title of nature's remedy, as a tonic, stomach regulator, or blood purifier, and when used as a bitters exclusively, or in connection with any liquors produces the most satisfactory results. All grocers or general merchants who carry liquors, or proprietary medicines or drugs, will find these bitters a very valuable acquisition to their stock. The price at which the manufacturers furnish it to the trade leaves a wide margin of profit for the retailer. These bitters, with other specialties, are put up by the Occidental Chemical Co., No. 1604 Mission street, San Francisco.

SUGAR.

Retailers are now reaping the benefit of an open market and jobbers find themselves facing a loss on every pound of sugar that they turn out. The nominal selling price to the retail trade is 5¾ cents, but this by no means tells the whole story and the whole story is one of varying fractions caused by the unsettled condition of the future. It is a great pity that the jobbers must be forced to sell a third of their business output at cost. They are entitled to a reasonable profit. They earn it and ought to have it. It is a deplorable condition in business when such a large volume of merchandise must be sold at cost or even less. The retailer is not benefited thereby sufficiently to justify his satisfaction at such a condition. Everything should pay a profit and in no other single article of merchandise is this principle more vital than sugar.

The chances for a reconciliation and a new pact whereby the Pacific Traffic Association will resume its control over all the jobbers of the coast in the matter of sugar distribution are becoming slimmer every day. Whether later on, when the trust gets on its fighting harness, developments will warrant a reconsideration on the part of the seceders is on open question. According to the independents it is a firm "No!" and they back their positiveness by a rehearsal of the causes which led to their final withdrawal from the association. Any rate war or price war is deplorable, for it means both worry and loss, and therefore it is regrettable that a sure-profit agreement could not stand prosperity, in which respect it is like many individuals. Some jobbers were so well pleased at the reasonable profit they were making that they were willing to divide that little, on the quiet, with their customers. Others stood their ground and lost business. Such a condition could not last, and it didn't.

New York Sugar Notes.

The year opened with granulated sugar at 4.36c per pound, declined to 4.26c per pound in February, and with fluctuations of 5c to 10c per 100 pounds from time to time, the quotations steadily advanced to the end of the year, when granulated closed at 5.60c per pound.

The average price of granulated for ten years is 4.731c per pound.

There have been no new refineries put in operation during the year 1904. The two refineries noted as nearly completed last year have not run. The Federal refinery recently increasd its output from 400 barrels to 1500 to 2000 barrels, and claims a capacity of 4000 barrels.

Notwithstanding the large advance noted in the price of raw sugars the public have received a full supply of refined sugars at below the parity of the last ten years.

Refined business for 1905 will be done on a different basis than in 1904, inasmuch as the former contract business was done away with and guarantee of prices is also abandoned, placing the business upon a cash basis at the refinery doors.

Willett & Gray of New York, in their circular of the 5th, say of sugar:

Refined.—The new year, 1905, opened with granulated at 4.60c net cash for granulated, almost immediately followed by a general advance of 10 cents per 100 pounds by all refiners, excepting the Federal, which advanced 5 cents per 100 pounds, all refiners now being at the same level and prices being firmly maintained. Quite a good business is being done for delivery within thirty days, all guarantees being withdrawn. The close is strong in sympathy with the improved tone to the raw sugar market and a further advance is expected to take place at any time.

RICE.

McPhillips & Co. say:

The new year's business has opened up with a rush, and trading has been very good, dealers realizing that the market is at the bottom and that the next move will be an advance. Low prices have stimulated the demand and rice is being eaten more as a food product at present prices than as a luxury as heretofore.

China No. 1 rice has advanced about three-eighths of a cent, with a further advance looked for.

Imported Japan Rice.—This article has practically been eliminated, as the trade has at last realized that there is no difference between the American grown Japan rice and the imported; in fact, there is a shade in favor of the domestic article.

Fancy Carolina rice demands good prices, and there will be a continual advance on this grade.

Review By Dan Talmage Sons' Co.

New York, Jan. 3, 1905.

Market for the week has been quiet. Holiday distractions, stock-taking period and the cloudy skies have had their due influence on the minds of buyers, and they were not disposed to interest themselves in offerings, even if unusually attractive.

Advices from the South note quiet market on the Atlantic Coast. Inquiry for samples for consideration after the turn of the year indicates that the interest in offerings is merely postponed. At New Orleans the market is strong. Volume of business restricted by the holidays, still sales for the week are far in excess of equal period last year. In the interior—Southwest Louisiana and Texas—a good demand is reported, particularly for the lower grades suitable for export.

The outlook is very favorable for a good and healthy business. Prices are low, so near to "hard pan" that they afford a secure foundation on which to build future operations.

Cables and correspondence from abroad note but little change in conditions.

CANNED GOODS.

Fruits—Hawaiian-packed pineapples, packed on the islands, in heavy sugar cane syrup, has been a pronounced favorite wherever introduced in the East. This fruit, picked fresh where canned and retaining all its native flavor, reaches the consumer in so delicious a state that it becomes at once one of the desirable items on the bill of fare. There is strength in all lines of fruit and stocks are dwindling away perceptibly. There is still a good assortment remaining, except peaches, pears and high-grade apricots. Extra apricots are scarce and most difficult to pick up. A large order could not be filled.

VEGETABLES.

There is an improved inquiry for standard tomatoes. On the surface there appears to be a weakening in prices, but it is contended that this is more apparent than real. Brokers who are in touch with conditions claim that an inferior lot of old stock—about three years old—is responsible for the weaker feeling. Large holders of standard tomatoes are still demanding opening prices and insist upon getting

Asparagus—This article is pretty well cleaned up and in as much as one of the largest packers will be unable to do any packing during the coming season, there is but a slender chance for a decline in present quotations.

DRIED FRUITS.

Inaction properly expresses the condition of the fruit trade. A good deal of swapping is being done, but as to any large shipments they are not discernible. Prunes are not going to suffer much longer from this back-seat disease. The consumers all over the country are going to be educated in a way that will make them demand the fruit freely. The retailer can well afford to be content with a fair margin if his sales increase, as they certainly will with reasonable prices and a growing knowledge of the value of this fruit as an every-day dish. Here are two recipes from the American Grocer that are right in line with the campaign of education now under way.

Prune Puff.

Whip the whites of three or four eggs to a stiff froth, add slowly one-fourth cup of powdered sugar, beating all the time. Then add one cup of cooked prunes, chopped or sifted, and beat until very light. Put into a small pudding dish and bake about ten minutes; then cool. Serve with a soft custard made with the yolks of the eggs previously cooked. Other fruits may be used instead of the prunes.

These puffs may be served hot, and without sauce, or with whipped cream.

Prune Loaf.

One-half pound of prunes; wash, soak, cook in little water until tender enough to remove the stones. Cut each prune into quarters, and add one-half cup of sugar. Make dough as for baking-powder biscuits; roll out thin and so that the length is twice the breadth. Spread the prunes over this, keeping within an inch of the edges. Roll like jelly cake, pressing the ends firmly so that the fruit cannot escape. Place the roll in one side of a granite pan, pour over and around it one-half cup of sugar, a pint of hot water, and a tablespoon of butter. Bake, basting frequently, and watching closely, to prevent burning. Add more water as needed. Serve with its own sauce or with the addition of cream.

Any fruit may be substituted for the prunes.

This may be cut in slices, like the Swedish rolls, before baking, when time is limited.

The quotation feature of prunes does not alter of late, but there is a stronger and better market and a more hopeful outlook.

Raisins are quiet, with nothing to disturb the evenness of prices. Both peaches and apricots continue strong and stocks are gradually crumbling away.

In nectarines, cherries and blackberries there is scarcely enough doing to make a market. It is evident from a talk with the trade that conditions are comfortable and indicative of a satisfactory future.

SALMON.

Business is decidedly dull. In this connection the following suggestion, made by Mr. Henry Forsman to a New York publication, is of interest:

The jobbing grocers are interested in a proposition to create a fund for advertising salmon to consumers by taxing the various packers a small amount on each case, the aggregate of which will be large enough to provide $20,000 annually for the specified purpose. The scheme is the suggestion of Henry Fortmann, president of the Alaska Packers' Association, who, in a recent interview with the Pacific Fisherman of Seattle, is quoted as offering the following reasons for his suggestion: "The total consumption of canned salmon in the United States has never been more than 2,000,000 cases. There are forty-eight pounds to the case, and by referring to the statistics we see that the total production on the Pacific Coast in the four years from 1900 to 1903 inclusive, was 16,000,000 cases. About 4,000,000 cases were sent to Japan and other uncommon (not regular) markets. Europe consumed 1,125,000 cases a year. Therefore, in these four years about one-half of the amount of our product has been disposed of in foreign markets leaving 8,000,000 cases, or 2,000,000 cases a year for the United States, making 96,000,000 pounds, which shows that the people of this country are consuming but little more than one pound of salmon per caplta per annum."

Mr. Fortmann states that his association would favor a plan whereby all of the salmon packers on the Pacific Coast could contribute to an appropriation for advertising. It is pointed out that an assessment of but one cent a case on that part of the pack furnishing the supply for home consumption would give a fund of $20,000 a year. This sum, distributed among the proper mediums, it is believed by jobbers, would undoubtedly cause a material expansion of the consumption of salmon. Whether a campaign of advertising from year to year is inaugurated, it is felt by distributers that something should be done to counteract the effect of the high prices prevailing early this year, which caused many consumers to stop the use of salmon.

PROVISIONS.

While the market is weak and the quotations in the Advocate's price list remain unchanged, lower prices are being made by almost all of the trade.

FINNAN HADDIES.

Wieland Bros. report:

Owing to very stormy weather on the Atlantic, only very few haddies were caught. This delicate fish is therefore very scarce and high in price.

MACKEREL.

Norwegian as well as Irish mackerel are $1 per barrel dearer with prospects of another raise when Lenten season sets in.

CHEESE.

California flats are lower in price, while New York State factory cheese is firm at present quotations.

COFFEE.

The coming of practically three holidays at once gave the coffee buyers and sellers a rest. The market has been given over to reflections of the past and hopefulness for the future. The year's record will not be blotted with any serious disturbances, panics, failures or wild fluctuations. The surplus of high-grade coffees in this market still exists. Sales can only be made in good round lots, at a concession. Any owner who is frank enough to tell the truth about it will confirm our statement. There is no use confusing or mincing the situation. To offset this condition, however, is the demand, always a steady one, of the roaster for the pick of the market to use in his fine blends. It is the poor, quakery, off-flavor coffees that form so large a per cent of receipts which force reductions in order to make them move at all. A roaster who is alive to his own and his customers' interests will shun these defective coffees as he would poison ivy, and would as soon think of handling the one as the other. The Advocate will have more to say of this in the future. Medium and low grades of Central Americans are still eagerly picked up and on these grades the market is strong.

HAY.

Somers & Co. report:

Receipts of hay for the past week have amounted to 2900 tons, an increase of about a thousand tons over the week preceding. The demand, though not heavy, has become a little more active since the holidays, but consignees still have difficulty in making disposition of all their shipments. Prices have not advanced, though we might say the market seems to have a steadier tone. We cannot but think this a temporary condition, possibly caused by consumers' willingness to stock up a bit for the new year.

MAINE SARDINE PACK.

The Grocers' Criterion has this to say of sardine packing:

According to a compilation of advices received from the Maine packers, the total output of sardines this year was 1,380,000 cases, the largest pack since 1901. Of this large total about 165,000 cases only are left in packers' hands. The rest have all been sold and many have passed into the hands of retailers. The pack of the past five years is given herewith:

Years.	Cases.
1904	1,380,000
1903	1,181,000
1902	1,179,168
1901	1,396,903
1900	815,080

Even though the stock in packers' hands is small, the market has a weak tone and present prices on quarter-oils are the lowest of the season. This is due, largely, to the fact that a declining market and poor quality have combined to cause rejections everywhere and the special prices which have been named in numerous localities are the result of these unsatisfactory conditions. The weakness is most pronounced in the South and Southwest. In St. Louis some remarkably low quotations have been named recently and it is quite likely that much the same conditions prevail elsewhere in some degree.

TOBACCO DANGER.

Retail Grocers Threatened With Serious Loss of Trade By the Trust.

The Tobacco Trust, with its insatiable greed, is now trying to get the business of its former customers—the retail grocers and retail tobacco dealers of the Pacific Coast.

They are not satisfied with the manufacturers' profit. They want the wholesalers' and the retailers' profits as well.

They are opening up numerous stores throughout the city of San Francisco and other large centers on the coast and are planning more stores through the country in which they can sell their goods direct to the consumer at cut rates.

Every cross-roads country store is interested in this as much as are the dealers in the towns where the Tobacco Trust has its retail stores. This is because the trust will do large advertising and will establish a mail order department so that they can supply their goods to the consumer through the postoffice.

The action of the trust in this matter is far reaching.

If they can successfully distribute their goods to the consumer, overlooking the retail dealer, it will mark the opening of a new era in merchandising.

What the Tobacco Trust is able to do successfully will be copied by the other great Trusts. And it will only be a matter of time when the retail dealers will find a great portion of their staple goods being sold direct to the consumer by the manufacturers.

This will follow only if the Tobacco Trust finds that they can do this work successfully.

The Tobacco Trust is not establishing retail stores because it loves the dear public and wants to supply them with goods cheaper. It is establishing these retail stores because it thinks it can make more money by so doing.

The retail grocers and other dealers must unite in putting Trust goods under the counter and out of sight. They must sell them only when the customer insists upon getting them.

They must have in stock the lines of independent goods necessary to replace the Trust goods. They can find independent goods in plenty of as good quality, if not better, than the Trust goods, which pay an even better profit.

We are given to understand that the independent manufacturers are awake to the necessity of co-operating at this time with the retail dealers in order to save their business. We are glad of this because it is only by advertising widely to the consumer that the independent manufacturers can make the public willing to take the independent goods when they are offered them by the retail dealer.

The Advocate will be very glad to co-operate with the independent manufacturers in informing the retail grocers and general merchandise dealers of the Pacific Coast of those lines of goods that are to be sold in place of the goods made popular by the Trust through enormous advertising.

When the Trust finds that, because of the united action of the retail dealers, they are losing more money through the antagonisms they have aroused than they are obtaining through their stores, they will discontinue those stores.

This follows as a matter of course, since the Trust is not impelled by enmity towards the retail dealers, but is merely seeking to establish a new channel through which to distribute their goods, which they think will prove more profitable than the old channels.

The Advocate would like to hear from any retail grocers who have been successful in substituting independent goods for Trust goods, so that other dealers may be able to profit by the methods they have used.

MAJESTIC.

"Mizpah, or the Story of Esther," written by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, and produced for the first time at this play house, met with a hearty welcome Monday night, and with a few alterations will be a general favorite. Its rare love scenes are such as only Ella Wheeler Wilcox can write—strictly her own. In the roles of King Ahasuerus and Esther, assumed by John Gilmour and Miss Adele Block, there was some clever work. The part of Vashti, by Miss Eleanor Gordon, found the young lady equal to the occasion. To Luscombe Searelle, who assisted Ella Wheeler Wilcox, great credit is due for the manner in which the play was staged.

ORPHEUM.

The show at the Orpheum is better, by a long ways, than has been there for some time. Will Cressy and Blanche Dayne, Josie Kine and Phil Gotthold, Nita Allen, Robert Elliott, H. V. Fitzgerald. Eleanor Falke and Chassino, are the principal figures that go to make up the entertainment.

CENTRAL.

The minstrel performance presented by the Central Theatre more than makes good. The burnt-cork artists are all clever in their work, and from curtain rise until the end of the evening's fun the audience were kept in roars of laughter caused by the jokes, and were satisfied with the dancing specialties and songs.

GRAND.

Blanche Bates still continues to draw crowds to witness "The Darling of the Gods." To have seen Blanche in this play is worth half a person's life, for beyond doubt the clever actress is fitted thoroughly and perfectly to the part outlined for her. Saturday matinee "The Darling of the Gods." Beginning with Sunday matinee, the attraction for the week will be "The Silver Slipper."

CHUTES.

Wilson and Leicester scored a hit in "Love Stories Told in Song." An interesting programme includes the four Gordons, acrobats; the Burton Bellringers, Dan Russell and Blanche O'Neill in "Sullivan, the Coachman;" Eldridge, a clever artist, who paints portraits in sand, and Mabel Lamson, a favorite singer. The moving pictures are above the average. The entertainment is deserving of good patronage.

FISCHER'S.

A change of programme with good talent is on at this house. All of the latest biograph pictures are being reproduced.

ALCAZAR.

Next week's presentation at this theatre will be "The Girl and the Judge." It ran for months when produced with Annie Russell and the late Mrs. Gilbert in the cast at the Lyceum, New York, about three years ago. It is full of the crisp wit and unconventionalism. John Craig and Lillian Lawrence are the young couple who fall in love under peculiar circumstances. There are striking character types, such as Clyde Fitch delights in sketching, like the sporting office clerk, personated by John B. Maher; the kleptomaniac by Christie MacLean; the fussy boarding-house keeper by Laura Adams; the broken-down roundér by Luke Conness, and Mrs. Ickleheimer, the pawnbroker, for which Julia Blanc, unexcelled in Hebrew impersonation, has been specially engaged. Ibsen matinee Thursday, Jan. 19, when "Ghosts" will be presented. Harry Mestayer will personate the young artist stricken with paresis, a wonderfully vivid pathological study, which he created in the East in Mary Shaw's production. Lillian Lawrence will act the part of the tortured Mrs. Alving. "The Conquerors" follow.

BEST BE CHEERFUL.

Laugh, and you cheat the doctors. Weep, and they'll soon cheat you. Complain of your ills, and you'll find that the bills will shortly begin to accrue. Envelop your being with sunshine, with scads of health you'll be blest; but grieve and mope, you will soon take dope, and the doctors will do the rest.

IT'S NO USE REPINING.

"If I had only not done this or said that—if I could go back—if I could live that day over again!" What folly it is to indulge in weak repinings of that nature! No human being ever did go back; no lips were ever allowed to unsay words; no feet ever permitted to untread steps once taken. A sensible man does not cry over spilt milk. He hustles around and gets some more milk tickets.

THEY TAKE THE RISK.

No better proof could be required of the value of the goods of the California home brand of pickles, chow chow, etc., than the guarantees given in another column by the Pacific Coast Vinegar and Pickle Works.

In order to induce the trade who are not acquainted with these goods they offer to pre-pay freight on orders received during the month of January.

What is of more importance, they absolutely guarantee their goods to be the best quality for the money and back their guarantee with the assurance that the dealer can "money back" the goods to his customers. They also give him the privilege of acting upon his own judgment as to whether or not they are the best value he has ever received for the money they cost. They even go so far as to agree to allow him to pay for the goods at his own valuation if the goods themselves do not satisfy him that the prices charged are absolutely fair and proper.

The splendid quality of the "California Home Brand" pickles, chow chow, etc. authorize such a proposition.

We would call the attention of our readers to their offer on page 2 of the cover, which we deem worthy of consideration.

THE WORST FOOL UNDER THE SUN.

He is a fool who sits and pines
While other men push along,
Who thinks that his lines are the hardest lines
And croons a pitiful song.
He is a fool who sighs: "Ah, me!
I've arrived in the world too late!"
But the worst fool under the sun is he
That nurses hate.

He is a fool no matter how high
Who fancies that when he dies
No other may worthily occupy
The place that he occupies.
He is a fool who claims to be
Foredoomed to the scorn of Fate,
But the worst fool under the sun is he
That nurses hate.

There was never a man who nursed a wrong,
Intending to scourge his foe,
Unless he dropped future arrow along
And he added to future woe.
The anger we foster became to be
Remorse for us soon or late,
And the worst fool under the sun is he
That nurses hate.

Chicago Record-Herald

SELLS ON ITS MERITS.

One of the oldest and best known firms of coffee roasters in this country, the Nash-Smith Tea and Coffee Company, are doing active work in the Pacific Coast territory with one of their most successful brands, Wedding Breakfast coffee. Much of the success of this brand of coffee is due to its being roasted in an altitude of over 5000 feet above sea level. The blend is the result of years of research in cup values by Mr. Nash, senior member of the firm, who is recognized as a past master in the art of blending high-grade coffee. It has a phenomenal sale wherever it has been placed, and as a result is readily accepted by the grocers in all parts of the country. It is not a new brand—has passed the infant stage and now sells on its own merits. Having a peculiarly rare aroma that pleases the majority of palates, we predict a successful sale in this territory from reports received from other parts.

BETTER BOILED HAMS.

Progress is gratifying to report upon, hence we desire to call the attention of the trade to the new system of putting up boiled hams by Wolters Bros., Twelfth street, between Market and Mission streets. It is scarcely four years since the firm embarked in this business, establishing their offices and plant at 103 Twelfth street, and to-day they operate four delivery wagons and contemplate a removal to larger quarters, the demands of their present business having grown to such an extent that it overtaxes the capacity of their present plant. A very important feature of the hams boiled by this company is that they are of uniform shape, and save much waste at the joint. The hams are without strings, which costs the manufacturer considerable, as twine is 18 cents per pound, and it requires about 25 feet of twine besides the labor to twine a ham.

As the greater portion of boiled hams are sliced and sold by grocers, it will be readily noted that by this new system, the only one in the United States, and a patent process by Wolter Bros. under their own patent, by which hams are boiled in a compressed, perforated cylinder, much waste is saved the dealer in slicing. It is well worthy of the investigation of the trade.

DON'T BECOME A HELPLESS VICTIM OF "CAN'T."

No boy can expect to rise in the world when he is all the time saying to himself: "I can't do this thing; it is useless to try, for I know I can't do it. Other boys may do it, but I know I can't." The boy who thinks he can't get his lessons, who decides that he can't solve his problems, and who is sure that he can't go through college, can not do any of these things. Very soon, he will become the victim of chronic "can't." Negation will have mastered him. "I can't" will have become the habit of his life. All self-respect and self-confidence, and all consciousness of ability will have been undermined and destroyed. His achievement can not rise higher than his thoughts.

Contrast this with the boy who always says, "I will." No matter what obstacles confront him, he says, "I will do the thing I have undertaken." It is the constant affirmation of his determination to do the thing which increases his confidence in himself and his power to do the thing until he actually will do it.

It would be impossible for a lawyer to make a reputation in his profession while continually thinking about medicine or engineering. He must think about law, and must study and become thoroughly imbued with its principles. It is unscientific to expect to attain excellence or ability enough to gain distinction in any particular line while holding the mind upon and continually contemplating something radically different.

Is it not, therefore, more than foolish, even ridiculous, to expect to develop a strong, vigorous mentality while acknowledging or contemplating weakness or deficiency?

So long as you contemplate any personal defect—mental, moral, or physical—you will fall below your possible attainment, and can not approach your ideal or standard.

So long as you allow negative, destructive, tearing-down processes to exist in your mind, you can not create anything, and will be a weakling.—Success.

MANY ARE HANDICAPPED BY FAILURE THOUGHTS.

Most people go through life crippled and handicapped by thinking weak thoughts, diseased thoughts, or failure thoughts. It would be just as sensible for a girl to try to develop the highest type of beauty of physique and character by holding in her mind the ugliest ideals and thinking herself as hideous. If she wishes to be beautiful, she must hold steadily the beauty ideal in her mind and try to measure up to it; then not only the physical but also the moral nature will respond to this effort to attain the aesthetic ideal; but, if she goes through life thinking she is hideous and deformed, and lamenting the fact, beauty will never respond.

What a misfortune to see bright young men or young women hampered and restrained in their careers because of holding sickly ideals and confessing weaknesses and defeats! Banish these ghosts, these unrealities, these enemies of your success and happiness forever from your mind. Rise up out of the valley of despair and despondency, out of the miasma which has poisoned the air around you, and out of the foulness which has suffocated you all these years, into the atmosphere of excellence, of power, and of beauty; then you will begin to accomplish something in life, and to be somebody.

If people could only realize the demoralizing influence of holding sickly ideals or failure ideals in the mind until the standards of excellence are all dragged down to the level of mediocrity or commonness, they would never again be content to dwell in the valley of failure, or live in the basements of their lives.—Success.

GROCERS SPEAK.

Massachusetts Wholesalers and Retailers Unite Against Trading Stamps and Premium Schemes.

The Boston Wholesale Grocers' Association has struck out from the shoulder, and has adopted resolutions declaring that trading stamps and premium giving is wrong in principle, demoralizing and injurious to trade and detrimental to legitimate busness and protesting against such method gives notice to manufacturers with whom they deal that they, individually and collectively, agree to discontinue the sale of all goods containing stamps or premium propositions, of any nature whatever after January 1, 1905. The Boston Retail Grocers' Association recognizes the action of the Boston Wholesale Grocers' Association pledging their co-operation, and in evidence thereof have adopted the following resolution:

Resolved, That we, the members of the Boston Retail Grocers' Association, will individually and collectively cooperate with the wholesale trade to the end that both wholesaler and retailer and the great purchasing public may be rid of an evil that is injurious to all alike. The merit of the goods should control, not the premium inducement. Massachusetts with law, and with union of effort on the part of wholesaler and retailer, leads the way in bringing business methods back to the old and sure basis of price and sale based solely on merit.

IN THE "GOOD OLD TIMES."

In 1838 envelopes were absolutely unknown.

A century ago farmers reaped their grain with sickles, one acre being a fair day's work.

Not until February of 1812 did the people of Kentucky know that Madison was elected president in the previous November.

In 1834 one of the leading railroads of the United States printed on its time-table: "This locomotive will leave the depot every day at 10 o'clock, if the weather is fair."

The first typewriter was received by the public with suspicion. It seemed subversive of existing conditions. A reporter who took one into a courtroom first proved its real worth.

In England, some centuries ago, if an ordinary workman, without permission, moved from one parish to another in search of work or better wages, he was branded with a hot iron.

When Benjamin Franklin first thought of starting a newspaper in Philadelphia many of his friends advised against it, because there was a paper published in Boston. Some of them doubted that the country would be able to support two newspapers.

One hundred years ago, the fastest land travel in the world was on the Great North Road, in England, after it had been put into its best condition. There the York mail coach tore along at the rate of ninety miles a day, and many persons confidently predicted Divine vengeance on such unseemly haste.—Success.

UNCONSCIOUS SUCCESS TRAINING

A modest, unassuming young business man, to his great surprise, was recently promoted to a position very much in advance of one he then occupied. He did not understand when, or where, or how he had prepared himself for such unexpected promotion. His friends, however, and those who have been watching his career, know that, unconsciously, he has been preparing for his promotion ever since he got a job as an errand boy in an office. Indeed, if he had had the position to which he has been advanced in mind from the outset, and if every step he took had been directed toward it, he could not have adopted a more effective means for the attainment of his end.

As a boy, this young man did not wait to be told things, or to do this or that when it was obvious that it should be done. He found out all he could for himself by observation, by keeping his eyes and ears open, and by being constantly on the alert to increase his knowledge; and he always did whatever he saw needed to be done, without waiting for instructions. He did everything that was given him to do as well as he possibly could do it. He did not wait for big opportunities, but found his chance in every little thing that came his way. In every errand he did he found a chance to be prompt, businesslike and polite. In every letter he wrote, he found an opportunity for self-culture, for learning how to be concise and how to express himself in the clearest and purest English. He found an opportunity for neatness and order in filing away papers and in keeping the office clean and tidy. These are a few of the steps which led to his rapid promotion, although when he was taking them he was not conscious that he was laying the foundation of his career broad and deep.—Success.

Points to Watch

SUGAR—
Prices are stationary and all is as quiet, apparently, as the tomb; the smoke of battle has cleared and both friend and foe are calmly waiting. Prices are well sustained and no break is as yet in sight. However, as long as this condition exists it would be best to proceed cautiously.

CORN FUTURES—
Last week we named prices at which futures were being sold; but few houses here ventured to quote a rate so far in the distance and retailers, profiting by bitter experience, are holding aloof.

EVAPORATED APPLES—
Of choice grade have advanced one-half cent per pound; other grades stronger.

JAPANESE PEANUTS—
Due here in two weeks, will be lower than present quotations.

CHEESE—
Martin's is one cent per pound higher, which is a forerunner that it is likely to advance further.

HERRINGS—
Holland has exhausted its supply, and this choice article is higher. The stock in this market will not last long, and in consequence buyers will be compelled to purchase the cheaper grades, of which there are a large amount.

PROTECT YOURSELVES—
By building up trade on "A-1" Flour of the Globe Mills the grocers protect themselves in their profits. The protection of the retail selling price accorded by the mills insures a permanent profit to the grocer after he has made the flour popular with his customers. By making it profitable for the Globe Mills to protect their flour other mills will do the same.

AN ATTRACTIVE PROPOSITION—
It will pay careful dealers to study the offer made to the trade on page 2 of the cover by the Pacific Vinegar and Pickle Works. It will be noted that both quality and value are guaranteed.

Too Expensive.

First Promoter—You say $50,000,000 is about the value of your mine holdings? Second Promoter—They're worth every bit of it. First Promoter—You ought to incorporate. Second Promoter—I would, but it costs $2 to incorporate in this state.—Pittsburg Post

All Must Work Together.

Flour Profits Depend on Grocers Everywhere Lending Their Help.

INTERIOR DEALERS APPEALED TO.

Explanation of Situation and the Possible Results.

By J. F. Paulding Secretary Pacific Coast Grocers' Association.

The retail grocers of Alameda county and San Francisco are placed in a position where they are compelled to appeal to their more fortunate brother grocer throughout the State for assistance.

In many communities in the State the flour mills are protecting the price on their standard brands of flour.

The grocers of San Francisco and Alameda county requested the same protection from the local mills. With one exception they were turned down.

The Globe Grain and Milling Company was the only one to list its goods and promise permanent protection.

Standard Mills Stand In.

The Standard Milling Company of San Francisco have listed their "Summit Snow" flour at $1.35. This is a new firm and they have decided to adopt the policy that will protect their customers. They write as follows:

San Francisco, Jan. 12, 1905.
Pacific Coast Retail Grocers' Association, San Francisco, Cal.

Gentlemen:—We are heartily in favor of co-operating with the retail dealer in his effort to make a fair profit on flour.

"Summit Snow" flour can be recommended by the grocer as a number one, first class flour in every particular. Should we learn of any retailer cutting on "Summit Snow" flour, we shall use every legitimate means to have the price maintained.

Our established retail price on "Summit Snow" from this date, is One Dollar and Thirty Five Cents ($1.35).

Very truly yours,
Standard Flour Co.,
Per C. L. Dingley, Pres.

Whittier Passes Resolutions.

The following letter was received from the Whittier Retail Grocers' Association:

Whittier, Cal., Jan. 13, 1905.
The California Retail Grocers' and Merchants' Association, 456 Montgomery Street, San Francisco, Cal.

Gentlemen:—At a meeting of the Retail Grocers Association of Whittier last evening the enclosed resolutions concerning the protection of the retail prices on flour were unanimously adopted. I send you the original, also a copy of the notice which was sent to the dressers. Very respectfully.

M. T. Owens, Secretary.

The resolutions enclosed in the letter were as follows:

(Original)

Whittier, Cal., Jan. 12 1905

At a meeting of the Retail Grocers' of Whittier, California, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That this Association hereby condemns the action of the Stanislaus Milling Company, the Stockton Milling Company, and the Del Monte Milling Company in refusing to protect the retail prices of the brands of flour manufactured by them, and that the members of this Association will govern themselves accordingly.

A. Jacobs, President.
M. T. Owens, Secretary.

Spread False Reports.

Several of the salesmen representing these mills who refused to protect their customers against having to sell their flour at a loss, continue to whisper here and there that I am actuated by false motives in this movement. They say I am working in behalf of the Globe Mills because they are subscribing to our fund.

When any such statements are made to you it is for the purpose of weakening your confidence in your own employe.

I am urging the grocers to patronize the Globe Mills because they protect the retail grocers in their profits and they are the only mills that think it worth while to look out for the welfare of their customers in this regard. My assistance was not given because the Globe Mills are subscribing to our fund. I cannot be bought that way.

The Globe Mills are giving me instructions what they asked for.

I therefore ask the retail grocers to give them equal consideration. It is my duty to see that protected goods get the right treatment from the retail grocers and if these salesmen want me to "boost" their goods, all they have to do is to protect the retailer's profits.

I now urge the grocers to give to the "Summit Snow" flour of the Standard Milling Company the same preference as they do to the products of the Globe Mill. At the present time the Standard Milling Company is not subscribing to our fund.

Del Monte Mill's Position.

The Del Monte Milling Company refuses to protect the retail grocer on their flour.

We therefore ask the grocers to show favors as far as possible to their competitors but we do not ask to handle their flour even though they are subscribing to our fund.

There is no reason to make the retail grocers lose faith in my honesty of purpose because of their desire to get left for the mere reason that they do not believe the truth. Your attitude at present certainly brands you as disloyal.

Working For Retail Grocers.

I am working in the interests of the retail grocers and those who give the grocer what they are entitled to.

I would like you to return the resolutions and confidence of those who seem to be working against me. But if I have to go it alone, I expect the retailers in order to get what I want. I will have to forego that pleasure. I am working for my people and not for profit.

Grocers Consider This.

We think the big dealer should be given concessions in accordance with his importance. But the manufacture should make these concessions conditional upon his agreeing not to use them to prevent the smaller men from making a living profit.

FAVOR INDEPENDENT GOODS.

Retail Dealers Object to Trust Methods and Desire Change.

The retail grocers and other dealers handling cigars and tobacco in a retail way recognize the fact that their business is threatened by the methods of the Tobacco Trust.

The Trust is not only in position to juggle with prices and force dealers to put more money than they can afford into their particular brands but they are now seeking to take away from the retail dealer his customers.

Firms who sell cigars and tobacco in a wholesale way frequently run retail stores. This has not been a menace to the rest of the retail dealers because there was business enough to go round and the large dealers maintained the retail selling price. The Tobacco Trust now proposes to start retail stores in all the larger cities and by widespread advertising institute a retail cigar business at cut rates that will practically destroy the cigar business of the smaller dealer. The small dealers have only one recourse. They must use their influence to induce both trade to handle independent goods which pay a fair profit and which are distributed through the usual trade channels.

The retail dealers are ready to do this.

The California Grocers' Association passed resolutions condemning the methods of the Trust and urging its members to use independent goods.

What are these independent goods?

The makers of independent brands have taken the opportunity now for combined active co-operation of the retail dealers.

They must take some action towards making it easy for the dealer to sell their goods.

They must advertise their goods with the consumer. They need not use the space the dealer need to let them have the good they have to offer.

The Retail Grocers' Advocate reaches 1200 retail dealers of the Pacific Coast [illegible] Without exception all of these dealers sell cigars and tobacco. We have only one cigar dealer who advertises in our columns. It is the non-progressive policy of the rest of the independent dealers that makes it possible for the retail stores to do business with them as they would like.

ASSOCIATION MEETING.

Dry Goods Dealers Promise Aid In Bettering The Trade.

The wet weather kept the members away from the meeting of the S. F. Retail Grocers on Wednesday evening and there was no quorum present.

A number of dry goods merchants was present.

An interesting conference ensued. Plans were laid for the betterment of trade conditions and there were many expressions of interest in the work.

EVILS OF TRADING STAMPS.

Why These Commercial Pests Are Being Fought by the Business World.

Nearly every State in the Union and also in England, Germany and France legislation is being attempted to secure the abolishment of the trading stamp evil.

The unity of opposition arising from the fact that the trading stamp is recognized as a wholly unnecessary and unbusinesslike method.

It is a third party introduced in the matter of bringing the seller and the consumer together. In this way it adds an additional expense to the cost of distributing goods and to that extent is undesirable. It is particularly undesirable because of an additional expense to no good purpose and is forced upon the retail dealer by methods that flavor strongly of blackmail.

This fact, and the further fact, that the whole trading stamp system is based upon the "get-something-for-nothing" policy makes its continuance contrary to public policy. The fact that the party serving up trading stamps has no definite knowledge of what will be secured when the book of stamps is filled and whether they will even get any returns for the stamps they collect, inject into the system a something of chance which adds to its undesirability.

A conference held by Mr. Clark, attorney for the State Grocers' Association, Mr. Son, attorney for the Cigar Dealers, and Mr. Wright, attorney for the Merchants' Association of San Francisco, resulted in the framing of a measure that has already been presented in both the Assembly and Senate. The attorneys are satisfied that this measure is constitutional. They have studied the laws of other States in order to find their weak points and have taken advantage of the experience that has been bought by these other merhants with the expenditure of much money and time. As a consequence it is very probably that the Supreme Court will uphold their judgment as to the constitutionality of the law which they have framed when it is put on our Statute books.

The law as presented to the legislature reads as follows:

An Act Making it a Misdeameanor to Sell or Exchange Property Under the Representation, Advertisement, Notice or Inducement that an Unidentified, Unknown, Unselected, or Chance Prize, Premium or Premium Gift, or that a Stamp, Trading Stamp, Coupon or Other Like Device Entitling the Holder to Receive Such a Prize, Premium or Premium Gift, or That the Redemption of Such a Stamp, Trading Stamp, Coupon or Other Like Device so Given is to be Part of the Transaction, or to Sell or Exchange Any Trading Stamp, Coupon or Other Like Device to Aid Such Sale or Exchange as Aforesaid and Providing a Penalty Therefor.

The People of the State of California represented in Senate and Assembly do enact as follows:

Section 1. Whoever sells or exchanges any property or offers or attempts so to do upon a representation advertisement notice or inducement that anything unidentified by or unselected by the purchaser at or before the time of the sale or exchange or upon a representation advertisement notice or inducement that anything whose precise nature is not so known to the purchaser at the time of the sale or exchange as to be completely identified beyond the necessity of any further or other selection or upon a representation notice, advertisement or inducement that any property whose selection will depend upon chance or hazard in any manner whatsoever is or is to be delivered or received or is in any way connected with or is a part of the transaction as a prize, premium or premium gift; or whoever sells or exchanges any property or offers or attempts so to do upon a representation advertisement, notice of inducement that a stamp, trading stamp, coupon or other device which entitles the purchaser to demand or receive either from the vendor or from any other person, company, association or corporation any other property unselected by or unidentified by the purchaser at or before the time of the said sale or exchange, or which entitles the purchaser to demand or receive either from the vendor, corporation, association or company anything whose precise nature is not so known to the purchaser at the time of the said sale or exchange as to be completely identified beyond the necessity of any further or other selection, or which entitles the purchaser to receive or demand either from the vendor or from any other person, corporation, association or company any property whose selection will depend upon chance or hazard in any manner whatsoever, is to be delivered or received or is in any way connected with or is a part of the transaction as a prize, premium or premium gift; or whoever sells or exchanges any trading stamp, stamp, coupon or other like device upon a contract to enable the purchaser to sell or exchange property, or attempt so to do, upon any representation, advertisement, notice or inducement of any kind hereinbefore mentioned, or whoever delivers any goods, wares or merchandise upon the presentation of any such stamp, coupon, wares of merchandise or other device so given or caused to be given shall for each offense be guilty of a misdemeanor and be punishable by a fine of not less than twenty dollars or more than five hundred dollars, or imprisonment in a county jail for not less than ten days or more than six months, or by both; provided, however, that the provision of this act shall not apply or extend in any manner to the redemption of any such stamp, trading stamp, coupon or other like device that may have been issued as a premium, prize or premium gift prior to the time this act takes effect; and provided further, that the provisions of this act shall not apply or extend to any sale or exchange of articles in bulk, heap or mass, or a part or portion thereof, which sale or exchange is not made, effected or induced by or upon any representation, advertisement, notice or inducement of any kind thereinbefore specified.

Sec. 2. This act shall take effect immediately.

The above bill is known as Senate bill No. 256 and Assembly bill No.354. Every merchant should send a personal letter to their Assemblyman, requesting their support.

BEWARE!

TRADING STAMPS

1. No one gets something for nothing

Trading Stamps are NEVER Given Away. They cost retail merchants 50 CENTS per 100. No honest man can continue giving $1.05 for $1.00
Retail merchants who give trading stamps must re-imburse themselves in some way.

2. How do customers pay for Trading Stamps?

Either the customer pays more for goods, the value of which they are not familiar with, or they get short measure or short weight, or they get imitation goods.

3. Who is Robbed--The Customer or the Dealer?

The merchant who gives trading stamps and PRETENDS to do it without extra charge; must rob some one. Do you think he robs HIMSELF?

4. Makes Millionaires out of Schemers.

Trading stamp companies are drawing down about one half million dollars ($500,000.00) each year out of San Francisco. Their managers have become millionaires. This money is coming out of the FOOLISH PEOPLE who pay 10 cents more on the $1.00 for goods in order to get trading stamps that cost the dealer 5 cents and for which, when they get 1000 of them (at a cost of about $10 to themselves) they receive something worth about $1.75.

5. Condemned by Good Business Men Everywhere.

Legislatures in many States have condemned trading stamps as bad for both customers and dealers. They are foolish and dishonest schemes employed to rob unthinking people and, into the use of which, many reputable merchants are forced by the unscrupulous managers of the Trading Stamp Companies.

Do not be deceived into thinking that you can get something for nothing.

Trading Stamps Have Been Condemned by the Following Leading Mercantile Organizations of San Francisco:

Board of Trade of San Francisco, Wholesale Grocers Association of California, Coal Dealers Association, Retail Butchers Association of San Francisco, Cereal Manufacturers' Association, San Francisco Retail Grocers.

THE OLYMPIA BOTTLING COMPANY.

A great acquisition to the beer bottling features of the city of San Francisco is the new bottling plant of the Olympia Beer Company at Sansome and Lombard streets, which will be in full operation within about one week. The company have for their purpose constructed a new two-story building, 32x100, in which they have installed the most modern machinery the equal of the largest and finest bottling plants in the United States. In order to accomplish this Mr. Peter G. Schmidt of the Olympia Brewing Company at Olympia, Washington, visited all of the large bottling plants in the East, such as St. Louis, Milwaukee, Chicago, Cincinnati, Buffalo, Newark and New York, and selected from those great plants such of the best ideas as would be applicable to their plant here. Mr. Schmidt is still in the city superintending the installment of the machinery which, as stated, will be in full operation in about one week. When L. F. Schmidt established the Olympia Brewery at Olympia, Washington, he did so because of his knowledge that he had there located a spring of water that would produce a beer of the highest quality, and a spring of ample proportions to supply a brewery of many times the size of the one he first constructed. The great growth in the sales of their fine beer has been such that they are about doubling the size and capacity of their former plant to keep pace with the rapidly increasing demand. Olympia beer always makes lasting friends of its users, because of its very excellent quality. It has been on this market to some extent for the past few years and the trade take to it kindly because it suits their customers. With this new and up-to-date bottling plant, Harris Bros., the owners, will certainly be in a position to do a very heavy business and to place in the hands of dealers an article of which they may well recommend as unsurpassed. The new company have two large attractive delivery wagons and will add more to meet the demands of prompt delivery.

LILY CREAM.

With the beginning of the year Lily Cream shows an increased demand by consumers who have taken a fancy to this product. It is a dainty and popular cream.

Getting Wise to Woman's Ways

The Hardworking Domestic Partner Always Has Something New to Spring

From "Old Gorgon Graham; More Letters From a Self Made Merchant to His Son," by George Horace Lorimer. By permission of Doubleday, Page & Co., Publishers

I'm still learning how to treat an old wife, and so I can't give you many pointers about a young one, for, while I've been married as long as I've been in business and while I know all the curves of the great American hog, your ma's likely to spring a new one on me tomorrow. No man really knows anything about women except a widower, and he forgets it when he gets ready to marry again. And no woman really knows anything about men except a widow, and she's got to forget it before she's willing to marry again. The one thing you can know is that as a general proposition a woman is a little better than the man for whom she cares, for when a woman's bad there's always a man at the bottom of it, and when a man's good there's always a woman at the bottom of that too.

The fact of the matter is, that while marriages may be made in heaven, a lot of them are lived in hell and end in South Dakota. But when a man has picked out a good woman he holds four hearts, and he needn't be afraid to draw cards if he's got good nerve. If he hasn't, he's got no business to be sitting in games of chance. The best woman in the world will begin trying out a man before she's been married to him twenty-four hours, and unless he can smile over the top of a four flush and raise the ante she's going to rake in the breeches and keep them.

The great thing is to begin right. Marriage is a close corporation, and unless a fellow gets the controlling interest at the start he can't pick it up later. The partner who owns 51 per cent of the stock in any business is the boss, even if the other is allowed to call himself president. There's only two jobs for a man in his own house—one's boss and the other's office boy—and a fellow naturally falls into the one for which he's fitted.

Of course when I speak of a fellow's being boss in his own home I simply mean that, in a broad way, he's going to shape the policy of the concern. When a man goes sticking his nose into the running of the house he's apt to get it tweaked, and while he's busy drawing it back out of danger he's going to get his leg pulled too. You let your wife tend to the housekeeping, and you focus on earning money with which she can keep house. Of course in one way it's mighty nice of a man to help around the place, but it's been my experience that the fellows who tend to all the small jobs at home never get anything else to tend to at the office. In the end it's usually cheaper to give all your attention to your business and to hire a plumber.

You don't want to get it into your head, though, that because your wife hasn't any office hours she has a soft thing. A lot of men go around sticking out their chests and wondering why their wives have so much trouble with the help when they are able to handle their clerks so easily. If you really want to know, you lift two of your men out of their revolving chairs and hang one over a forty horsepower cook stove that's booming along under forced draft so that your dinner won't be late, with a turkey that's gobbling for basting in one oven and a cake that's gone back on you in a low, underhand way in another and sixteen different things boiling over on top and mixing up their smells, and you set the other at a twelve hour stunt of making all the beds you've mussed and washing all the dishes you've used and cleaning all the dust you've kicked up, and you boss the whole while the baby yells with colic over your arm—you just try this with two of your men and see how long it is before there's rough house on the Wabash. Yet a lot of fellows come home after their wives have had a day of this and blow around about how tired and overworked they are and wonder why home isn't happier. Don't you ever forget that it's a blamed sight easier to keep cool in front of an electric fan than a cook stove and that you can't subject the best temper in the world to 500 degrees F. without warming it up a bit. And don't you add to your wife's troubles by saying how much better you could do it, but stand pat and thank the Lord you've got a snap.

How to Make a Safety Pin Holder.

Take a piece of fancy silk, a Dresden design will be prettiest, twelve inches long and eight inches wide and a piece of white satin the same size, basting lightly to each piece of silk a piece of cotton batting the same size. Sprinkle the cotton generously with violet sachet powder and fold all evenly together so that the silks are on the outside. Take satin ribbons of the color predominating in the fancy silk and about an inch and a quarter wide and bind all four edges neatly together, mitering the corners and joining the ribbon neatly under one of the mitrings. Stick the white satin side full of black and white safety pins of different sizes, placing them in rows. Fold in three folds, and on the edge of the ribbon of the last fold sew on a piece of the satin ribbon the same as the binding, long enough to go around and tie in a pretty bow holding all together. This case, being very compact, will make a most useful addition to one's traveling bag.

MAKE BUSINESS GROW.

Some of the Points That Must Be Kept in Mind to Insure Success.

"Bees accomplish nothing, save as they work together, and neither do men."—Hubbard.

This sentence tells the story of how retail dealers must act to secure better results for 1905.

Each merchant on entering the New Year, should not only make up his mind that it shall be the best year of all, but he should also decide how he is going to bring about that result. Having made up his mind in this regard, he should follow his plan as consistently and persistently as possible.

Results by Co-Operation.

It is by working together with his fellow grocers that the retail dealer can lessen the influences that make it necessary for him to carry unprofitable lines.

It is by co-operation with his fellow grocers that he can secure information as to the habits of people who would like to start accounts with him but who do not pay their bills.

It is only in this way that he can make it profitable for a clever man to follow up and collect the bad bills for his fellow grocers and himself.

It is only in this way that he can secure the recognition from the Legislature that is necessary to protect him from unjust laws.

Progress by Individual Effort.

There are many points for individual consideration which are just as important, since their neglect will mean the loss of business, while careful attention to them will mean an increase of trade and profit.

Every merchant's store policy should be based upon the fact that "the satisfied customer is the best advertisement."

The dealer should study as to how he can render better service to his customers. The prompt delivery of goods; the neat wrapping of packages; polite and thoughtful attention from clerks; careful consideration of the needs of each particular customer and suggestions as to their possible wants; all these tend towards establishing a service so much better than the ordinary that the customers will spread the news of their satisfaction and their friends will soon be trading with that store.

The policy should include plans for making the store itself more attractive. The windows should be inviting and the displays in them fresh and tempting. Counters, shelves and floors should be speckless. Every article on every shelf should be moved and dusted frequently enough to guarantee that the package will look nice and also that there shall be no dead and forgotten stock in out of the way corners to add to the responsibilities of the profit and loss account.

When the visitor to the store finds it necessary to lift her skirts to avoid soiling them and to walk carefully lest she have her clothing bedabbed with molasses or flour and to keep her hands off counter and show case if she does not wish to get them dirty, she feels ill at ease and goes into the store as seldom as possible.

Quality Holds Trade.

The quality of the goods sold is also an important feature.

The housewife may buy an article cheap and be satisfied at the time of purchase because of the price. But when she gets home and finds the quality unsatisfactory, she forgets the price. She remembers, however, that the goods she got from a certain store were not satisfactory and that she does not care to trade there any more.

People like to buy as cheap as they can. When they find that the cheap goods have been bought dear, they feel resentment towards the dealer who sold them the goods.

The grocer who has a reputation for selling cheap goods loses much more business because of his reputation than does the man who has a reputation for charging the highest range of prices but who also has the reputation of giving his customers only the best. The happy medium between these two, the grocer who always gives high grade goods and charges only a fair price, is the one who does the most business and holds the trade the longest.

Methods That Carry Conviction.

The dealer has one way of convincing his trade that the goods he sells them at a fair price are absolutely what he claims for them. This is to offer them their money back should the goods not prove satisfactory in every respect. The first firm to put the power to do this into the hands of the retail grocer was A. Schilling & Co. This fact has done much towards establishing the success of "Schilling's Best" goods. Because these goods are "money backed," the consumer is made so certain of their quality that she is willing to take them.

This same influence makes the dealer feel that he is safe in recommending these goods to his most particular trade.

The further fact that the retail selling price of "Schilling's Best" goods are maintained by the manufacturer, who will not supply firms that cut their price, makes these goods a specially valuable line to develop.

In the light of the movement now being carried on by the grocers of the Pacific Coast to induce other manufacturers to maintain a fair selling price on their goods, the Advocate would urge that retail grocers not only owe it to the firm of A. Schilling & Co. but owe it to themselves as well, to establish the fact that when a firm protects their goods against cutters as A. Schilling & Co. do, that such protected goods will receive proper treatment at their hands.

PERSONAL MENTION.

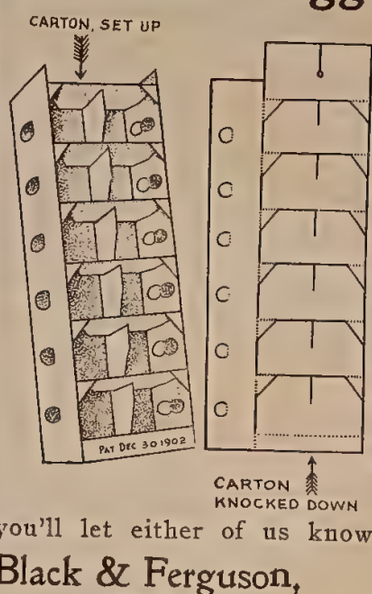
Ed. Elam, who will look after the interests of the American Cigar Co. on this coast, has arrived in San Francisco, accomuanied by J. S. Houseman, formerly of Pittsburg, who will assist Mr. Elam in looking after the controlled brands in this territory.

Mr. H. A. Kretschmar, for many years manager for Illinois and Indiana for the Drummond Tobacco Co., will bring his ripe experience, along with his person, to help Mr. Elam in the work of getting the United Cigar Stores into action. The writer knows both Mr. Elam and Mr. Kretchmar to be gentlemen, every inch of them, as he has had the pleasure of an intimate acquaintance for many years. They are "square," active, energetic and personally popular. While the Advocate in its principles and purposes champions the cause of the retail dealer and the jobber and deprecates antagonisms harmful to the interests of established businesses, it is glad that the work of introducing the new invasion is in the hands of such courteous gentlemen.

Mr. Orrin Thacker of Columbus, O., has compiled with his usual thoroughness a directory of the exclusive wholesale grocers of the United States for 1905, a copy of which he has sent to the Advocate for inspection. We have known Mr. Thacker personally for many years and his long services as secretary of the Wholesale Grocers' Association of Ohio fit him for doing this work intelligently and with extra care. Every dealer in California products should have a copy of this book and others might profit by its possession. The price of same is $1.

A CARNATION REBATE.

A special rebate of 25 cents per case is offered by the Pacific Coast Condensed Milk Company to those retail grocers who maintain a price of 10 cents straight, 55 cents for six tins and $1.10 for a dozen of Carnation Cream.



This discount is to be paid only to those retail grocers who have maintained the price of 10 cents in accordance with the former agreement and who agree to maintain the 10 cent price in the future.

Every movement of this sort that tends to give stability to the price of a standard article is of great value.

There is no doubt but what the acti of the Pacific Coast Condensed M Company has assisted in strengtheni the price of Carnation Cream.

Mr. Stewart, manager of the cor pany, will be in San Francisco short and plans will then be discussed th will result in the permanent and ge eral maintenance of the 10 cent pri on Carnation Cream.

A NEW BUNCO GAME.

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 16, 1905.
Advocate Publishing Co., City.

Gentlemen—We kindly call the attention of your many readers to a dishonest solicitor who is now visiting the residents of San Francisco, Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley.

The man is well dressed, of medium height, smooth faced and a good talker. This is his scheme:

He calls upon the resident in the morning, rings the bell and asks for the lady of the house and in a very slick manner states that he is representing the largest manufacturer of stove polish in the United States and submits a large size tin of stove polish, offering the same for $1, and demonstrates the polish upon the lady's kitchen stove and agrees on a printed slip to send a Japanese boy twice a week for two months to polish the stove and keep it nice and bright.

He hands no business card, no name is printed on the receipt except an unintelligible signature, and the victim expects any day to see the Japanese boy call and perform the required services gratis.

He succeeds in selling the tin of stove polish pockets the dollar, says "goodbye" and that is the last they see of him.

The writer knows of three families who were "taken in," therefore kindly put your readers wise and inform their customers to look out for the "fakir."

Yours very truly,
Sherman T. Blake Co.

MIZPAH TO BE REPRODUCED.

H. W. Bishop, in respons to an almost overwhelming request, announces the repetition of the production of "Mizpah, or the Story of Esther," at the Majestic Theater during the week commencing with Monday, February 6. There is no gainsaying the fact that the drama excited general comment at the time of its run during the week of January 9, and it scored such a success that its co-authors, Ella Wheeler Wilcox and Luscombe Searelle were offered a flat sum of $100,000 for all rights to it in this country and England by one of the leading New York agencies. The scenic elaboration of the production at the Majestic Theater eclipsed any mounting that has ever been given to a production by any Western stock house. The characters too were most artistically presented by Mr. Bishop's players, who with few minor exceptions will again portray their former roles in the promised revival. Miss Adele Block has been specially retained to give her magnificent and appealing rendition of Esther and Eleanor Cordon is cast for Vashti, with J. H. Gilmour in the role of the King. On account of the widespread interest that has been aroused over the play it is well for those who desire seats to telephone or write for reservations at once.

ROYAL CIGAR COMPANY TAKES PALATIAL STORE.

Acquires the Establishment in the St. James Building from the Havana Tobacco Company This Week.

The Havana Tobacco Co., the branch of the American Tobacco Co., having control of its imported cigar business, this week turned over the store at Broadway and Twenty-sixth street to the Royal Cigar Company.

The Royal Cigar Company was originally incorporated some three years ago, and it was reported at that time that it was to conduct not only the store in the St. James building, but also the store in the Flatiron building, at Broadway and Twenty-third street, and a third store at Broadway and Thirty-fourth street, next the Macy department store.

These plans were changed however, and the Flatiron store and the location at Thirty-fourth street were turned over to the United Cigar Stores Co., while the Havana Tobacco Co. took the location at Broadway and Twenty-sixth street.

At the time of the original incorporation of the Royal Company, no names known in the trade appeared among the list of incorporators. It is now announced, however, that John F. Whelan, for several years past proprietor of the Yates House and the Globe Hotel in Syracuse, and also a brother of George J. Whelan, the president of the United Cigar Stores Co., will be the executive head of the Royal Company, and that he will have associated with him Harry Rothschild and Robert T. Dorning of New York, and Wilbur Tibbils, for many years engaged in the cigar business in the Twin Cities, and who recently sold his business at that point to the United Company.

It is announced that the Royal Company expects to shortly open a store in the Wall street district, and that it will acquire other locations whenever such as seem desirable are to be obtained.

The store at Broadway and Twenty-sixth street was fitted up regardless of expense, massive marble columns being specially imported from Italy, and a distinguished artist being employed to execute the mural decorations.

TOBACCO AND CIGAR NOTES.

The jobbers generally are holding out against signing the new contract of the American Tobacco Company. They are helping each other out by a system of exchanging and buying from one another, this is manifestly inconvenient and rather expensive, but the jobbers have no other recourse until some deal is made whereby their customers will be satisfied. Whether this is to furnish them the Trust brands or a substitute made by the independent manufacturers, which latter they insist will be the outcome unless modifications in the new contract are forthcoming Lewin-Meyer Co have decided to throw out tobaccos entirely, as they find them an unprofitable investment considering the additional capital required to keep so many brands in stock.

How to Use a Face Brush.

Immerse the brush in water as hot as can be placed in your face. Soap it well, just as you would if you were about to use it for your hands. Scrub the face thoroughly, taking especial care of the places that most require cleansing. Rinse the face with cooler clean water, so as to get all of the soap out of the pores. Dry carefully and apply a cream or toilet balsam. Any good emollient will answer.

How to Have New Shoes Fitted.

"People who buy ready made shoes would find their footgear much more comfortable if only they would stand up instead of sitting down to be fitted," said an experienced salesman. "Nine out of ten customers, especially women, want to sit in a comfortable chair all the time they are fitting shoes, and it is with difficulty that one can get them to stand a few minutes even after the shoe is fitted. Then when they begin to walk about a little they wonder why the shoe is less easy than when it was first tried on. The fact is that the foot is smaller when one is sitting than when one is walking about. Exercise brings a larger quantity of blood to the feet, and they swell. The muscles, too, require a certain amount of room. In buying shoes this must be borne in mind or one cannot hope to be shod comfortably."

How to Blanch and Shell Chestnuts.

With a sharp pointed knife slit each shell across one side. Cook one minute in boiling water, drain and let dry. Add a teaspoonful of butter for each pint of nuts and stir and shake over the fire or in the oven three or four minutes; then remove the shell and skin together. Keep the nuts covered with a cloth in the meantime, as they shell more easily when hot.

Take Cancer In Time.

An English specialist declares that "too late" has yet to be said in one-half or three-fourths of the cancer cases when seen by the operating surgeon. A general acceptance of the view that cancer has usually a precancerous stage and that this stage is the one in which an operation ought to be performed would be the means of saving many lives.

Attracting Trade

BALLOON WINDOWS.

Try This as an Attraction for Your Grocery Display.

In dressing your windows your chief aim should be to place something therein which will draw the attention of passersby. A window which will cause a child to stop and look at it will also attract the attention of grown people, for it is the child after all, who is the means of making elders stop and peer in at an unusual display. The Advocate suggests that a balloon window is an ingenious idea and one which is bound to hold a few spare minutes of any one.

Balloon Window.

The balloon may be made from paper pasted over cardboard and may be merely the pictorial representation of a balloon, or it may be made by getting a paper balloon from the toy store and filling it out with light wire hoops, so that it will look as though it were filled with gas or hot air.

How to Make It Effective.

To give a more complete effect of the regular gas balloon take some heavy twine and make a netting over the top of the balloon and coming down attach to the sides of the basket two pieces of ordinary clothesline will be tied to this netting and brought down to stakes and there tied, acting as the guy ropes to the balloon. From the sides of the basket have several other ropes attached to stakes also holding the anxious balloon to the ground.

What to Put in It.

The basket of the baloon will be occupied by a sack of flour, a small broom, some vegetables, a package of coffee and whatever else is placed therein should have a design painted on it which will result in attraction. To each of these articles in the basket will be attached a small card giving the name of article and the price.

On the floor of the window will be arranged pyramids of boxes and cartoons as the grocer may choose to place them.

The basket for this balloon ascension is merely a large bushel market basket.

At Little Expense.

The whole window may be gotten up at practically no expense and with very little trouble, and it is certainly a window which will attract and hold the attention of every child who may chance to pass by. And it will also be the means of increasing your trade, for the simple reason that if you can get people interested in the display in your window, they are very likely to have something in your line called to their mind. Instead of going somewhere else they will make the purchase from your store. By all means have the display neat and if necessary add a little by little according to your own ideas.

SNIDER'S TOMATO SOUP.

Snider's home-made tomato soup in 1-lb cans has arrived and to say that it is going well would be putting it mildly. These cans have already become a general favorite and grocers handling this article have awakened to they say, to the fact that their shelves must be stocked up well to meet the required demand. Spohn-Patrick Company agents 16-22 Front street, will attend to your wants in the line.

FRANK B. PETERSON, SAN FRANCISCO

A LIBERAL PROPOSITION.

Inducement That Should Warrant the Trade Handling California Home Products.

We have never before known of a firm that was in position to make such a sweeping guarantee of quality as that which the Pacific Vinegar and Pickle Works makes for its "California Home" brand of pickles, chow-chow, etc.

They guarantee that customers will be satisfied by authorizing the dealer to refund the full purchase price for any package bearing their "California Home" brand label that should fail to give entire satisfaction to the consumer.

They guarantee that their price to the dealer will be satisfactory by agreeing that if he does not find the goods the best value he ever bought, they will accept the price the dealer may make on the same himself, leaving it to his honor to pay what the goods are actually worth.

To induce the dealers who do not know their goods to put them in stock, they agree to prepay freight on all orders for five cases or more sent them before February 1.

Mr. T. L. Matthes, manager of the company, has been in the pickle business ever since he was a boy. He knows that the only way to retain customers is through giving them better goods than they can get anywhere else. He is prepared to do this. The prices asked for the "California Home" brand goods when considered together with the quality of the goods supplied, are really very low.

For prices, etc., we would refer our readers to the advertisement on page 2 of the cover.

IRVING'S MASTERPIECE.

Sir Henry Irving's great masterpiece, "The Bells," from Erckman-Chatrain's story of "The Polish Jew," will be on the programme of the Majestic Theater during the week starting next Monday night, with J. H. Gilmour in the intensely dramatic role of Mathias, supported by a select cast from Mr. Bishop's double organization of players. It will be one of the most elaborately mounted productions of the play that has ever been given to it either in this country or England.

The dream scene in particular is to be one of the most realistic picturings of that famous setting that has ever been offered on the stage. The role of Mathias is the one in which the eminent English actor, Henry Irving, made his way into fame and there are many competent judges who entertain the opinion that in the arts of his portraiture of dramatic characters the leading man at the Majestic and the eminent Englishman run in parallel lines. Aside from the interest that attaches to the famous play, Mr. Gilmour's rendition of the Irving role will appeal to those who delight to indulge in comparisons. Following "The Belles" the Majestic Theater will offer "The Mountebank," with Landers Stevens in the leading role and it is one, too, that his critics and admirers profess to see him in his best work. On February 6 the management announces the revival of Ella Wheeler Wilcox's and Luscombe Searelle's magnificent poetical drama "Mizpah or the Story of Esther," which is admitted to be the drama of the decade.

Twenty Years Ago

the Helvetia Milk Condensing Co. of Highland, Ill., originated the process of preparing unsweetened condensed milk. Owing to its close resemblance to a rich, heavy cream, and in order to distinguish it from sweetened "condensed milk," they coined for this new product the trade name of . . . . . .

EVAPORATED CREAM.

OUR PET BRAND

(and any Brand bearing their Top Label)

has since become famous

In the meantime others have conceived the plan of taking but a small portion of water out of the milk, putting it up into larger cans and palming it off on the public as "Evaporated Cream," though it is far below the standard which deserves this name.

But consumers cannot always be fooled. They want "OUR PET" brand, which can be sold at a popular price, considering its high quality.

Be wise and follow the demand for a brand which shows this top label, the sign of perfect goods.

SUGAR.

Some years ago a bright young druggist of Philadelphia launched on the market a new brand of soap which became famous through his "Don't be a Clam." It is evident that the lesson meant to be conveyed has been well learned by the dealers in and refiners of sugar, only they have reversed the advice and now it is a case of "Do be a Clam." The replies of these people is extremely enigmatic and with a knowing smile they shut up like a steel trap. It is very doubtful if there has been a single new element injected into this sugar business, yet it doesn't do anyone harm to look wise and say nothing and wait for the time when things will go in leaps. That is provided there isn't a truce and a compromise prior to the opening of the real campaign. As far as the breach goes between the sugar refiners on the coast and the seceding jobbers it appears to be stationary and prices are firm to retail trade at 5¾ to 6 cents for granulated.

New York reports a strong sugar market, as follows:

"Since the close of last week, an advance of ten cents per 100 pounds has been made by all refiners here, and at the outports to basis of granulated, at 5.80 cents net cash, but following the advance, orders for one day were taken at the old prices, which privilege buyers made use of to secure quite large supplies for future use. Hence, while present prices are firmly maintained by all refiners, the trade is naturally very limited, but, inasmuch as raw sugars have advanced considerably more than refined, it is not unlikely that a further advance will be made in refined during the coming week. However as buyers are pretty well filled and no longer have the benefit of guarantees against possible decline, but must take and pay for their purchases at contract price, it is not likely that present quotations will be availed of to any extent before another advance follows. Under present conditions and outlook, buyers should endeavor to carry as large stock of sugar as they possibly can."

COFFEE.

Dealers on the coast characterize this as a "between time" when there is a lull in trading. The market shows no change of late and buying continues in a rambling way without any life or interest more than you'd find in buying a barrel of potatoes. The speculative market in New York continues to turn out large blocks of coffee on a surprisingly even market, considering that it is honeycombed with the spirit of the gambler. Stocks in this port are ample except the lower grades; the faith of our local jobbers is buoyed up by the New York continuous vaudeville of statistical ammunition exploited by one of the leading coffee importers of that city. This firm's circulars are sent to all the leading papers of the country and are invariably bullish. It must be conceded that of late their prophesies have not gone astray, but the expected sky-rocket has not yet gone sailing upward.

Willett & Gray, New York, talk on coffees:

"There is a great difference between the conditions that exist in the coffee markets this year compared with last year. At this time last year there was wild speculative trading on the bull side developing the world over, which as usual with such unhealthy features, ended in a collapse; and all the more so because of the unexpected large movement from the mild crops, shaking the confidence of the coffee world in the idea that the season of larger production had stopped. The heavy decline that followed was facilitated not only by speculative causes but by reason of conditions developing with the turn of the year in all markets, quite different from those of today.

"There is a heavy speculation in Europe, where they have been expecting to buy coffee cheaper in Brazil after this country got through with its purchases of this crop. The strong advance in Sterling Exchange in Brazil at the same time when receipts commenced to decrease, rendered it very improbable that the Brazilians would meet the views of the Europeans, and therefore, after the European stocks have been reduced about 1,250,000 bags since the commencement of the crop. European speculators are now making heavy raids in all markets hoping to shake confidence. But the American markets do not possess the same features as last year. The speculative conditions here are on both sides of the market. The large importers have been buying heavily in the first six months of the crop year, during which time the weight of the crop was felt, fully 80 per cent of the Rio and Santos crops being marketed within that period. It is probable also that we have not only seen the largest world's visible supply, that will steadily decrease, but likewise the heaviest visible for the United States, that will become so large as a result of the very quick marketing of the crop in Brazil. But Europe does not believe it to be true that the receipts during the second half of the season will be only about equal to 20 per cent of the entire crop; and it becomes a question whether the views of the trade in the United States are correct or the views held in Europe as a guide to future values.

"To-day we quote Rio 7s nominal at 8¾c., while Rio and Santos 4s sell at 9 3-8c to 9 1-2c, regular New York terms.

"January options, week ending January 12: Highest, 7.65 to 7.70; lowest 7.50 to 7.55, closing 7.50 to 7.55, against last year closing 7.05 to 7.15. No. 7 last year 7 1-2c.

TEA.

M. J. Brandenstein & Co. have this to say:

"The shipments of tea to the United States have ceased and the primary markets are bare. The quality of Formosa is not up to that of 1903; there is a good supply of all grades for requirements and as far as speculation or corners are concerned there isn't a vestige of such a tendency anywhere. This is a good, healthy condition with which to enter the New Year."

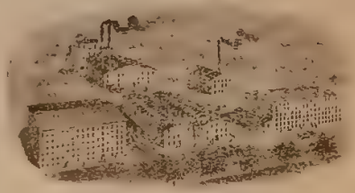
John B. Brown, New York, under date of January 10, says:

"Cable advices from Formosa show a shortage of 70 000 half-chests in shipments over last season; at which time there was not more than enough to fill current demands. The statistical position in green tea is equally as strong and we cannot but anticipate a firmer market as the season advances.

"Foo-Chow Oolongs are in limited supply and prices are held firmly and higher, with active bidding at prices above those ruling on our home market, grade considered. Our general market is quiet; buyers and sellers do not come together freely, the large invoice owners holding their teas at prices which the buyer hesitates to pay."

RICE.

M. Phillips & Co. say:



"Quotations are at a standstill and business is fairly good; the market has a tone of strength with exceptional firmness in the fancy grades. The movement will gradually increase from this time forward and we anticipate a good year in rice."

Review by Dan Talmage Sons' Co., New York:

"The week opened quietly, with increased interest toward the close. Stocks are fairly well assorted, with the exception of strictly fancy and the lower medium grades, which are really in scant supply. Prices are steady, as recent arrivals from primary points show quite an advance over previous figures. This is especially true of Honduras sorts, and the low prices on Japans have attracted more than ordinary attention.

"Advices from the South note an improved inquiry on the Atlantic Coast. At New Orleans the market is comparatively quiet as to movement of stock, although widely distributed requests for samples indicate speedy renewal of at least normal activity. In the interior—Southwest Louisiana and Texas—large sales have been made of the lower qualities (particularly of Japan sorts) for export. The low prices have attracted the attention of Cuban buyers and a considerable quantity has also been forwarded to Europe."

DRIED FRUITS.

The amount of dried fruit in California, aside from prunes is rather small. There are still sufficient of the latter to keep the market in an abnormally depressed condition, although there is a growing firmness, the growers are in a fair way to get the inoculation of better business methods into their gray matter and when this is accomplished there may not be any less prunes but there will be a larger consumption and a profit in the business; it would seem that out of all the combined wisdom of so many producers there should come relief and prosperity. Peaches still remain the one fruit above all others that are the most attractive to buyers at present. There are no changes in apricots or raisins and they are subjected to the same apathetic conditions usual in January.

CANNED GOODS.

The most interest manifested by those who like to see both sides of the market—the Eastern and Western—is in the course of trade and prices beyond the mountains. Our own home view of trade and prices is largely one of the past as the present signifies little because of the sparseness of orders. Both jobbers in the East, our own jobbers and the retail trade throughout the country are still filled up and only buy a few cases here and there when there is a vacancy. While on all grades and brands there is steadiness there is a scarcity in some lines heretofore mentioned.

BALTIMORE NOTES.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 9, 1905.

During the past week business has improved in the canned goods market here. There has been a better demand for tomatoes than was anticipated, and altogether the outlook for that article is more encouraging than it has been at any time during the past month or more. While there has been no improvement as yet in the prices, the undertone to the market is decidedly better. A reaction in them, toward a higher level of values is certainly long overdue.

In the line of other vegetables there is a fair demand for corn and a growing demand for string beans, and new kraut, spinach, cove oysters and other articles are fairly active. Peas and corn have not been active recently, and there is nothing new to say about them.

Fruits of all kinds have been dull and quiet for several weeks. Peaches, pears, and apples have been more active than any other articles in that line but the changes in them are unimportant.

The remarkably cold and wintry weather throughout this section still continues and it interferes greatly with the shipments of canned goods. It has caused a scarcity of fresh oysters for canners' use, the prices of the raw material being prohibitive for that purpose. There is no sign yet of the usual "January thaw." T. J. Meehan & Co.

NUTS.

Garcia & Maggini continue to report a quiet market since the holidays. There is naturally a lessening of interest on the part of consumers and the movement is much restricted. Prices as a rule are firm; this is particularly true of almonds; the grocers have disposed of all their stock; choice, selected grades are particularly strong and scarce. Walnuts of an inferior grade are offered at almost any figure that will attract a buyer; the plump, white meats bring top prices. The first shipment of new crop Japanese peanuts is due here in two weeks and fancy grades will bring 5 1-2 to 6 cents. The extraordinary shortage in pecans of 50 per cent has made a very strong market but prices remain reasonable and without any speculative features.

SALMON.

A slow market and a steady one sums up in the fewest words the salmon situation. With so little doing it is most difficult to coin new words to sustain interest in the reports as they appear from week to week. This does not indicate that what is known as the "Salmon situation" is without its sparkling bits of gossip and below are a few selected at random from a mass of Marconigrams and exchanges.

The Alaska Packers' Association has on hand about 600,000 cases of salmon.

Stock on hand in first hands of all brands in the United States, 1,000,000 cases.

The gross profits of the Alaska Packers' Association for the year 1904 were only $109,198. Conditions such as are not at all probable to ever occur again were antagonistic to profits and the small gross outcome was a gloomy surprise to the company. But, undaunted, they are going ahead to curtail expenses, eliminate as far as human energy and sense can do so, every element of weakness and put the association in a stronger position than for sometime past. Towards this purpose the company have issued $2,000,000 6 per cent 15-year gold bonds and increased the capital stock from $5,000,000 to $7,500,000. The list of directors contains the names of some of the most substantial citizens of San Francisco.

The stock of Alaska salmon in London and Liverpool at the close of the year 1904 was about 100,000 cases on the way at that time, from San Francisco, 410,000 cases of Alaska salmon, making a total of 810,000 cases, as against an average consumption of Alaska salmon of 500,000 to 600,000 cases. Therefore, the English handlers argue, a reduction in price must be brought about in order to move so large a supply.

Stocks in hands of jobbers and canners on the coast of Sockeyes and Chinooks, are about cleaned up. All over the country the reports indicate light holdings of Alaska salmon and when spring time comes they will be obliged to fill the gaps. Alaska medium reds are scarce and pinks are growing steadily less, so reds will have to satisfy the market when the season of heavy consumption sets in. Prices of reds is 1.05 to 1.10 in large lots to jobbers. Pinks, 70 to 75.

CHEESE.

Wieland Bros. report:

"Martin's New York cheese is fully one cent per pound higher in its price and an advance of one half cent per pound is looked for shortly.

"California flats and Young Americans are easier. With an increasing supply a further drop is sure to come."

HOLLAND HERRING.

Fancy selected Holland herrings are higher in price. The stock in this market is so small that in less than six weeks it will be exhausted, and as Holland has no more, retailers who handle fancy selected stock will be forced to buy cheaper grades, which are still plentiful.

PROVISIONS.

During this week a change has taken place in this market, a decline of one-half to one-fourth cent in almost all of the quotations, while boiled hams, with skin on, have advanced one-half cent per pound. Lard, both pure and compound, went sliding down the scale also.

The provision market for some time has really been at a standstill, so far as prices go, and business has not been as brisk as desired. So in consequence after many consultations during the latter part of 1904 the leading provision business men have decided upon a reduction in order to dispose of what they have in stock. These are not the only declines that are to take place, for indications point to many more at an early day.

HAY.

Somers & Co. say:

"During the past week 3820 tons of hay have been offered on our market, an amount greater by 980 tons than was received the week before. The slightly active demand has fallen off considerably, and this, together with the unsettled weather conditions, has caused the market to be very quiet. Consignees are still holding out for former figures, but buyers are well stocked up and seem unwilling to pay the prices asked. During the week there has been practically nothing of interest to report; trade continues dull and the market seems to be determined, not by general conditions, but by the daily supply and demand. The Government is now taking about one thousand tons for the Philippine Islands, but this is counteracted by the lack of other export and coastwise shipping. The recent rain which has extended well into the South has caused the farmers down there to let go their holdings so that that district will not have to draw very heavily on our stocks, although it will probably continue to do so to some extent."

GROCERY JOTTINGS.

A. Pistolesi, who is now located at 752 Washington St., has been in the grocery business within a stone's throw of his present place for 44 years. When Mr. Pistolesi started in the grocery business his location was considered a very choice one since the elite of the city had their residence within a few blocks of the store, while the Maguire Opera House and the Metropolitan Theatre were close at hand and the City of Paris and White House only a few blocks away. Mr. Pistolesi is assisted in his store by his son who now manages the business.

Amusements

MAJESTIC.

"All the Comforts of Home" has enjoyed good crowds this week. The play is full of funny situations that are well presented by the splendid company presented by Mr. Bishop. The show is one of the best of the week.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

"The Silver Slipper" is a dazzling success. The company is a strong one. The piece itself is light and serves to introduce many catchy songs and numerous beautiful dances.

ALCAZAR.

"The Girl and the Judge" is winning a deserved success at the Alcazar. The play is full of heart interest and the company are all cast for parts well fitted to their talents. It is to be followed by the "Conquerors."

TIVOLI.

As usual the grand opera season results in packed houses. The bill is changed each night and music lovers are securing a decided treat.

CENTRAL.

They are exploiting a "Working Girl's Wrongs" at the Central this week. Patrons of the house relish the return of their accustomed melodrama and show their appreciation by a largely augmented business. The piece is full of interest and splendidly staged. The attraction for next week will be "Jerusalem, the Holy City," a great biblical play.

FISCHERS.

The continuous additions made to the program at this house have tended to make it a very popular place of amusement. The acts follow each other in quick succession and it would be hard to get more for the money than is given there. There are two performances every evening at 7.30 and 9 o'clock and an afternoon performance at 2 o'clock.

CHUTES.

In addition to the attractions of the Zoo and other concessions there is a very interesting and varied program tendered at the theatre. The offer this week includes musical comedians, club swingers, monologist, balladist and numerous other numbers.

MOTHER OF PEARL.

The Industry of Inlaying It in Precious Woods.

The sole curiosity for sightseers in the city of Hauoi, a town of the French Tonquin, is the industry of inlaying mother of pearl in precious woods. In fact, one street, called the Street of the Inlayers, is given up to the trade. The workmen are genuine artists, combining artistic perception with great manual skill. Furnished with rude tools, but with great patience and skill, these workmen produce articles of great beauty. They have applied the principle of division of labor, or specialization, to their work. The cabinet makers first put together the various parts of the materials to be incrusted. The joining is done without the aid of nails and with a nice system of dovetailing and use of paste, of which lacquer is the base. From this cabinet maker the wood passes into the hands of the designer, who makes sketches for its ornamentation on rice paper.

These designs are transferred to the wood by the inlayer, whose duty it is to choose the pearl that will best serve to bring out the beauty of the design. The mother of pearl is obtained from a [illegible] species of shellfish, called casque, caught chiefly upon the shores of the island of Poulocondar.

The inlayer cuts the pieces of pearl into little bits and chooses the combination of colors which will make the contrast necessary for the artistic success of his work. The iridescence is heightened by the use of pearl dust furnished by a kind of mussel taken from the brooks of that region. When the bits of mosaic are chosen the inlayer tries to give them the form of the design chosen and disposes them as a mosaic in the wood. The crude morsel is made translucent by pumice stone. The pearl is then fixed in a vise, and the labor of patience begins. Kneeling before the vise, he shapes the pieces with a file no larger than an ordinary color crayon. When the pearl is shaped it is necessary to trench it in the wood. This is ordinarily done by children fourteen or fifteen years old. The bits of pearl are then set in the grooves and fixed with paste. The whole is gently heated to melt the paste and so fill the interstices. The design is then polished, varnished and given the finishing touches. The work has been counterfeited, but never successfully.—New York Herald.

SELLS ON ITS MERITS.

One of the oldest and best known firms of coffee roasters in this country, the Nash-Smith Tea and Coffee Company, are doing active work in the Pacific Coast territory with one of their most successful brands, Wedding Breakfast coffee. Much of the success of this brand of coffee is due to its being roasted in an altitude of over 5000 feet above sea level. The blend is the result of years of research in cup values by Mr. Nash, senior member of the firm, who is recognized as a past master in the art of blending high-grade coffee. It has a phenomenal sale wherever it has been placed, and as a result is readily accepted by the grocers in all parts of the country. It is not a new brand—has passed the infant stage and now sells on its own merits. Having a peculiarly rare aroma that pleases the majority of palates, we predict a successful sale in this territory from reports received from other parts.

John Albers, Jackson & Leavenworth, has a fine store and is doing a fine business. He feels that the mills owe it to their customers to protect them in their profits and he has been able to sell considerable of the flour which pays him for handling.

A. Koster, Jackson and Hyde, is a member of the Grocers' Association and a supporter of its methods. He has a very neat store which is carefully stocked.

When Man Ceases to Be Useful.

The moment a man reaches the stage where he thinks more of his dinner than he does of his duty, more of his coat than he does of his character, more of his standing in "society" than he does of doing his plain duty as a man and citizen that moment he ceases to be a factor in the preservation of the state.—Rev. T. B. Gregory.

DAN O'CALLAGHAN.

City Agent for Prominent Insurance Company—Will Also Handle Real Estate.

Dan O'Callaghan's many friends among the grocers of San Francisco will be interested to learn that he has disposed of his interest in the wholesale shipping and commission firm of O'Callaghan & Nelson Co. to engage in general real estate and insurance business.

Mr. O'Callaghan has been appointed city agent for the Liverpool and London and Globe Insurance Co., the largest fire insurance company in the world. This company was the first insurance company to write (in 1852) a fire insurance policy in the city of San Francisco.

Mr. O'Callaghan will also devote himself to the handling of real estate. His careful personal attention will be given to buying, selling and renting real estate, and to the care of property. He has been connected with the grocery world for so long that he needs no introduction.

For many years engaged in the wholesale commission business here, his kindly willingness to oblige has earned him many friends who will now have the opportunity to do something for him in return.

Having long been identified with the growth of the city, he is thoroughly posted in values and conditions, and his knowledge in this regard will be of great help to his clients.

The older San Franciscans will remember Dan O'Callaghan's father, Captain James O'Callaghan, who came to this city in 1849 and who was assessor from 1851 to 1853. Captain O'Callaghan was one of the most prominent contractors of earlier days, many of the largest wharves having been constructed by him, while a large part of what is now the wholesale district of the city was filled in under his direction.

Dan O'Callaghan & Company are located in the Navada block at 412 Pine street, near Montgomery street. Telephone Main 5238.

The Advocate solicits for Dan the kindly consideration of the grocers in all parts of the State.

PROTECT FLOUR PRICES.

Dealers Not Allowed to Sell "Globe" Products at Less Than a Fixed Figure.

The selling price of the standard brands of flour of the Globe Grain & Milling Company are protected in every particular by that concern. While quality makes price with this mill as with all the other mills, the Globe Mills require that the large buyers shall agree not to use his inside price to force the smaller dealers to sell without a fair margin of profit.

Grocers find no difficulty in selling the "A-1" flour of the Globe Mills to their best trade. B. T. Scott of Alameda advertised it liberally as being "worth 40 cents more than the other flours and costing only 10 cents more."

The Globe Mills put up flour under special brands for the retail dealers who buy in sufficiently large quantities. This is a practice that is followed by all the flour mills of California. If the Globe Mills should refuse to do this, they would merely be denying themselves business which would be secured easily by their competitors.

Flour of the "A-1" quality is not issued by them under private brands, however. They find no necessity for doing so since they have ready sale for all their "A-1" flour under its own name.

The dealers who have their special brands put up by the Globe Mills, usually claim that their flours are the same as the "A-1. They sell this special brand at a shade less than the price required for "A-1." The retail dealer can meet this competition readily by ordering the other standard brands at the same price as the cutter makes and explain at the same time that the "A-1" flour would have to cost more because of its special quality.

HAVE YOU NOTICED all these Signs around Town?

It shows that most of the Grocers keep what people ask for—WUNDER BEER If YOU don't, wake up phone to our bottling works and they will send their man to see you.

Points to Watch

HIGHLAND BRAND EVAPORATED CREAM—
Reduced from $5.00 case to $4.10.

SALMON—
While moving slowly are going to attract attention shortly by reason of the prospective reduction of pack. Prices will do better.

SUGAR—
Continues its mysterious course by reason of the warring elements and no forecast of the future is of the least value; the card prices in our list are the nominal prevailing quotations.

DRIED PEACHES—
There is more concentration in hands of a few houses and prices will go higher.

WALNUTS—
Look out for lots that have been rejected and are now being offered at a low price.

OYSTERS—
Futures are firm and the outlook is for higher prices.

CODFISH—
Firm and have advanced in past week ½ cent.

LIMA BEANS—
Have a weakening tendency and any attempt to market any important shipments would lower prices. Other beans are firm.

NORWAY MACKEREL—
Bloaters, ones and twos on account of small catch are higher.

IRISH MACKEREL—
Irish holders are refusing to ship to the United States unless given an advance of $2 per pound. However, this stiff asking price does not in any way effect the market.

YACHT CREAM—
Has been reduced 35 cents, formerly selling at $3.60, now at $3.25.

PROVISIONS—
It is predicted that lard is liable to advance any moment. Bottom prices have been reached in everything in the provision line.

CANDY—
The prevailing high prices in raw materials have caused the manufacturing confectioners to advance their prices from 1 to 3 cents.

ABOUT FLOUR PROFIT.

Review of the Situation and Some of the Influences That Affect It.

By J. F. Paulding, Secretary Pacific Coast Retail Grocers' Association.

Our office is hearing every day that more grocers are interesting themselves in the matter of securing fair profits on flour.

The Globe Milling Co. reports numerous accessions to their list of customers who appreciate the fact that through their efforts the retail selling price of certain brands of flour is guaranteed so that the man who puts his money into Globe flour knows that he will receive good returns from the investment.

The Globe Mills offer the trade three brands of flour. Their "A1," to be sold at $1.40 per sack, which is a mixture of Eastern and California wheat and therefore of better quality than the average standard flour; the "Banquet" flour, to be sold at $1.35, which is the same grade as the average standard flour; and the "Silver Star," to sell at $1.25 in order to meet the demands of the trade which wants to buy a cheap flour and will be satisfied with an inferior quality.

The Standard Flour Co. offers the trade its "Summit Snow" flour, which must be retailed at $1.35 per sack. We are informed that this is a Stockton flour of the same quality as the other standard California brands.

Grocers Must Act.

We once more would call the attention of the grocers of the Pacific Coast to the fact that the only way they can show the other mills of the State that they want a profit on their flour is by showing them that they are willing to give support, as far as they are able, to the mills who refuse to allow their goods to be cut. For these reasons, as well as because they can secure a fair profit by handling the flours mentioned above, we would urge the grocers to show preference to these goods and sell them whenever they can.

Mills Are Responsible.

The older mills of San Francisco are very largely responsible for the fact that the price of their flour is not being protected to-day.

They lay great stress on the fact that they sent out a "disinterested party" to interview the retail grocers as to their desire to have the price of flour protected. The writer knows that their salesmen circulated among the grocers trying to convince them that the movement was impossible of success and would result in loss for them. This was done previous to the time they sent out the independent party to investigate.

I want to say now that if these salesmen had expended the same amount of effort in convincing their trade that the mills would do every thing in their power to maintain a proper retail selling price on their flour that the entire grocery trade of the cities about San Francisco Bay, cutters and all, would now be securing a profit on flour instead of selling standard brands at too low a price.

Outside Grocers Can Help.

I wish also to urge those grocers in communities where the price of flour is protected to use their influence with the mills from whom they purchase their supplies. I would suggest that they ask the mills, either directly or through their travelers, to lend protection to the retail grocers of the Bay cities and let the mills know that they are interested in the movement.

The backing of disinterested parties will greatly strengthen our cause. It will hasten the day when these outside parties will be able to secure protection on other things than flour in which they would be helpless without the assistance of the retail grocers of the Bay cities.

Retail Grocers Interested.

One of the largest retail grocers of Berkeley told the writer that while he had turned in his third order for "A1" flour to the Globe Mills, he had not purchased any flour of the other mills in the last thirty days. He has a large stock of these flours on hand and this stock grows less very slowly since he makes it a point to push only the flours on which his competitors among the cutters cannot set the price for him.

While a few of the larger stores in San Francisco have not yet put in the flour of the Globe Mills, yet the majority of the large stores have done so and we are pleased to learn that it has resulted not only in profit for them but in satisfaction to their customers.

This week we print a letter from Whittier in which they express their appreciation of the action of the Globe Milling Co. in protecting the retail price of their standard brands and also condemning the action of the Sperry, Stockton Port Costa and American Mills.

The feeling of the retail grocers in other parts of Southern California is shown by the following article sent out by W. R. Baxter, secretary of the Southern California Grocers Association:

"Why the above mills will protect their flour in Los Angeles and refuse to help our northern brother grocers is a mystery.

"I can see no reason for them to take such a stand.

"We are not better than our northern brother grocers and we should use our influence with the above mills to have them name a retail price on their flour in San Francisco and also protect that price.

"Why a man of Mr. Sherwood's caliber should say that the retailers asking for a profit is a fad is ridiculous, to say the least.

Who did he authorize Mr. H. W. Peters, his manager for Southern California to sign up with our society per February 1 1904 to maintain the retail selling price on their flour if he considered it a fad? And why, if this be a mere fad do they go to every effort to have their listed retail price maintained in Southern California?"

We are glad to print herewith the names of those who know no fear as to the attacks that have been made upon us personally by the drummers for the various mills which have refused to grant the protection asked.

LEGISLATION.

State Grocers' Association Has Much Important Work on Its Hands.

State Secretary Paulding and Editor Powers went to Sacramento last week. Their visit revealed the fact that there was a great deal of work on hand for the merchants of California.

Several of the measures in which the retail grocers are interested have been introduced in both Houses. It was found that two dangerous measures had been presented which the grocers will have to oppose.

Both of these dangerous measures are bills introduced by Senator Wright of Santa Clara County.

Senate Bill No. 250 would make it impossible to attach any debtor unless the creditor could show fraud, intent to leave the State, or some other wrongful act or intention on the part of the debtor.

Senate Bill No. 276 would make it impossible to bring attachment for any sum less than $25.

Mr. Paulding has written the various grocers' associations throughout the State informing them of the danger in these bills and advising them to write their representatives in both Senate and Assembly showing the evil effects that would follow if these bills became law.

The Anti-Trading Stamp Bill.

The fact that the Constitution of California makes gift schemes, as well as lotteries illegal is the basis upon which the attorneys for the State Grocers' Association and several other organizations of retail merchants of the State expect the Kemp Anti Premium and Anti-Trading Stamp bill to stand as a successful bar against this kind of graft.

This phrase in our State Constitution will enable our State Legislature to give the merchants of California protection that is not possible in other less favored States.

Every merchant in California is interested in any manufacturer makes him a present or premium scheme. By the scheme the merchant is really compelled to lottery chances, since he is forced to sell with his goods, prior to receipt, the chances that may or may not be fulfilled of getting some article other than that which the customer ordered to buy.

The Statute of Limitations.

Most of the lawyers in the Legislature to whom I have mentioned the Statute of Limitations, some of them state very generously that if the merchant cannot collect a bill in two years he should "charge it off his books."

The fact that the founders of twenty of the most important States in the Union, including Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and New York, have felt it was unwise for an open account to outlive in less than six years and that in Illinois and four other States the limit was placed at five years is proof positive that the lawyers who are responsible for the limit being only two years in California, West Virginia, Florida and Texas have not acted wisely.

The further fact that practically the entire merchant class of California want the Statute of Limitations on open accounts extended and that the only people who oppose it are the lawyers, makes another fact very notable. This is that unless the merchant brings suit on an account before it is two years old, he must give up all hopes of collection. It is hard to believe that the lawyers would be willing to force this condition of affairs upon the retail merchant class for the sake of additional fees that are secured to them and the Advocate thinks that the bare fact that the law as it stands to-day tends to increase litigation is the very best argument for the necessity of a change.

In another column we give to our readers reasons why the State Grocers' Association measures now before the Legislature should be supported. We also explain why the Wright bills, Nos. 250 and 276 should be opposed.

We would urge our readers to write any representative in Senate or Assembly they may know in regard to these measures.

The members of the Legislature want to do what their constituents want. It is the duty of these constituents to let their representatives understand what their requirements are.

Should they write, they can be sure of having their needs satisfied. At the same time, their representatives would not be at fault should they refuse to assist in legislation in which they have no personal knowledge that their constituents are interested.

ARGUMENTS ON LAWS.

Reasons for the Passage of Measures Desired by the Retail Merchants.

NOTE.—We would ask that you read the arguments we present carefully and then state your ideas in your own words in a letter to your Legislative representative.

Senator Keane's Anti-Premium and Anti-Trading Stamp Bill, No. 344—This measure is to do away with trading stamps and other gift schemes. These schemes are undesirable for the following reasons:

1. By adding to the expense of selling goods, they make these goods cost more for the consumer. The consumer while buying mush, flour, etc., is made to pay for a mere chance of getting rocking chairs, etc., by clever schemers who bunco them into thinking they are getting something for nothing. This introduces an element of chance into legitimate trade—something that honest dealers cannot afford to participate in.

2. These schemes are forced on the retail merchants by methods very much like blackmail.

3. No good comes of these schemes. The amount of business done is not increased, the distribution is merely diverted from one store to another. They merely result in allowing a few clever grafters to levy toll on the entire population, both merchants and consumers.

Senator Muenter's Statute of Limitation, Bills Nos. 63, 71, 75 and 78—One of these provides that contracts not in writing(open accounts, etc.) shall not outlaw for four years instead of two years, as at present. The present law is undesirable and unfair for the following reasons:

1. It encourages litigation since the merchant must bring suit inside of twenty-four months after a transaction has taken place unless he wishes to jeopardize his chances of collecting anything on the account.

2. Not one of the large financial centers of the U. S.considers two years adequate for the life of an open account. Only in Texas, West Virginia and Florida do open accounts outlaw in two years.

In all the large financial centers the time of litigation is placed at six years, except Illinois, which makes it five years. The fact that in such States as Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania and fifteen other States, open accounts do not outlaw for six years, is an unanswerable PRACTICAL argument against those LEGAL theorists in California who think two years is sufficient.

The lawyers in the Legislature say that if an open account cannot be collected in two years it cannot be collected in four years, and the merchant might as well strike it off his books. Please tell your representatives whether this is true or not. The practical business men in this and every other State will give forceful evidence as to the lack of the practicability of this theory of the lawyers.

The fact that the merchants of California have come back, year after year, to ask for this change is the best evidence of the actual necessity of it. The merchants face a condition. They are opposed by a theory which is contrary to the logical conclusions of the financiers of all the larger and older States. We think this shows that the greatest amount of evidence is in favor of the merchants.

Muenter's bill No. 56, making the separate property of the wife responsible with that of the husband for the bills for the necessaries of life—This measure does not make the wife responsible for the husband's private debts or his business debts. Therefore, her property will not be placed in jeopardy through his bad judgment. It merely makes the wife's separate property responsible for the food she and the children eat, the clothes they wear and the various other necessities they enjoy. The law as it stands today is a great incentive to fraud. The law we ask is based on a similar measure now on the Statute Books in the State of Illinois. The laws of California already hedge around the debtor with so many protections of things exempt from attachment that the law which we ask for would not jeopardize the interests of the honest family. At the same time, it would do much towards preventing dishonest people from employing the Statutes in order to defraud their creditors legally.

Bills for the necessaries of life should be in a class by themselves, since there are times when a man MUST HAVE CREDIT for food, etc., for himself and family and the merchant that MUST GIVE THIS CREDIT should have any conservative and fair protection in the power of the Legislature.

LAWS TO BE OPPOSED.

In writing your Legislative representatives we would urge that you ask them to oppose the following measures.

Senator Wright's Bill, No. 250—This bill provides that before an attachment can be brought, the creditor must prove that the debtor intends to defraud him in some way by leaving the State, transferring his property, etc. It practically takes away all chance of collection by attachment except where fraud can be proved and would work a serious injustice to retail merchants and do no good to honest debtors.

Senator Wright's Bill, No. 276—This measure provides that no attachment can be issued on accounts of indebtedness for less than $25. It would put a premium upon dishonesty since parties who contracted bills to the extent of $20 or so could refuse to pay and the merchant would have no recourse. We understand that it is favored by the big corporations who do not like to be annoyed by processes made necessary by employes who try to beat their creditors. We deem it unwise to sacrifice the welfare of the retail merchants' body of the State to serve the purpoess of a few big corporations.

BE READY.

Be ready to adopt new ideas. We progress only through change. It is just as unreasonable to stick to old ways merely because you are used to them, as it would be to refuse to ride in an elevator merely because you have been accustomed to walk laboriously up stairs.

WILL LEND ASSISTANCE.

BUYING FUTURES.

Seattle Grocers Mark the Specialty Man for Disapproval.

In a circular to the members of the Seattle Retail Grocers' Association, Secretary J. J. Higgins says:

"While your inventory is fresh in your mind, we want to remind you that much of your dead stock is the result of the specialty salesman. When he calls again politely turn a deaf ear to his pleadings for an order."

Then Mr. Higgins adds:

"There should be a relentless war waged by all wholesalers, retailers and trade papers and asociations against future buying and special deals. It is a form of speculation that is seriously handicapping the retail trade and it has in the past driven and now threatens to drive many retailers throughout the country into failure and bankruptcy.

"Many merchants who ought to be free from debts and with a good balance in the bank are sitting up nights worrying over the problem of how to get money to meet their just bills as a result of this kind of injudicious buying.

"Just what good reason can be produced for urging retailers to overbuy in a city like Seattle where all kinds of goods carried in a retail store can be purchased and delivered within a half day's time, I have yet to learn, and instead of the nuisance abating it is growing.

"A retailer told me a few days ago that even the pickle factories were now taking orders for futures in their line.

"Instead of the manufacturers and wholesalers carrying these goods in stock as they did a few years ago, they are now forcing the retailer to bear this burden.

"If this feature continues, it would seem as though the necessity for the wholesaler had passed and their services could easily be dispensed with.

"These abuses have grown to such proportions in some parts of the country that grocers have been forced to form buying clubs and buy their goods in quantities and place them in warehouses owned and controlled by the retailers. A continuation of the system of future buying and special deals will force retailers all over the country to adopt this expedient.

"No retail grocer can meet his bills promptly if he is coaxed or wheeled into putting all his capital into idle stock, the greater portion of which is sure to depreciate in value before it is disposed of, and which should be carried for him by the wholesaler. No merchant can make progress under a load of bills which keeps him down.

An Enemy Rather Than Friend.

"The salesman or house which urges any merchant to overbuy is an enemy rather than a friend.

"It is true that all the trouble does not lay at the door of the manufacturers, wholesalers, salesmen and specialty men.

"Many grocers like to talk big and tell of the big business they are doing. In order to carry out their boast, they want to be considered heavy buyers or plungers, so to speak. The salesmen knowing these men's weakness (for salesmen are good judges of human nature) realize that if they don't load them some other salesmen will. Then the specialty men come along and load them up with their lines. Should the specialty man be a stranger, he is sure to get a tip on the buyer's weakness from the regular salesmen, who invariably accompanies the specialty man.

"These specialty men have a great gift of gab, and the tenacity of a bulldog qualities that get and hold their jobs for them, and that seldom fail to pull an order. The average grocer is an easy mark for the specialty man and he only wakes up to his mistake months afterwards when he is taking note of the dead stock on his shelves.

"But unfortunately the trouble is not confined to the indiscreet buyer. If it were we would consider it a just punishment for his folly.

"The result of at least four-fifths of the future buying and special deals is that the retail price of the goods thus sold is cut to less than cost when the expense of doing business is added.

"Snider's catsup in pints is being sold at 15 and 16 cents a bottle, Gold Dust at 15 and 18 cents a package, and Royal Baking Powder at 35 cents a pound. Tomatoes that cost 85 cents a dozen are sold at 70 cents, and corn that costs $1.10 a dozen at $1. Add the cost of doing business which is 15 per cent, and a net loss of 25 per cent is the effect of cut prices on these staples.

"These are only a few of the articles that are being slaughtered as the result of future buying and special deals. Others are raisins, currants, dried fruits, soda, soap, nuts, Pioneer cream, breakfast foods etc., etc. The retail prices are demoralized on all these articles as a result and no retailer is assured of a fair margin on his investments.

Refuse to Handle Them.

"If all the interest a manufacturer has in his goods is to see how many of them he can put on the market through the instrumentality of the grocer as a free distributing agency regardless of whether the grocer gets pay for that service, then we consider it the bounden duty of the grocer in justice to himself to refuse to handle the products of that manufacturer and to 'knock' them whenever occasion presents itself.

"We firmly believe that if retailers would adopt such a course, it would shift to the manufacturer the burden of maintaining fair retail prices, and that is where the burden properly belongs.

"The up-to-date merchant is getting wise and will no longer patiently put up with these abuses. Manufacturers and wholesalers who hope to retain the patronage and friendship of these merchants must help to eradicate these evils.

"The trade papers will do the same.

"Then let the national and local associations take up the cudgel and fight together and the trouble will be remedied. It is up to these allied interests to speak in such a straightforward and positive manner that they cannot be misunderstood."

J. J. Higgins, Secty.

The following resolution has been sent out by the Seattle grocers

To the State and National Association:

Whereas, the legitimate end for which future buying and special deals were devised, namely, to give an increased profit to such merchants as were able to avail themselves of them, is being constantly perverted in such a manner as to work a great hardship on retailers generally because the prices on all such articles are usually cut to the cost of the special price, thus not only depriving those who are able to buy in such quantities of a fair margin on their investment, but actually causing a loss to them and to the trade generally, therefore be it

Resolved, That the members of this association are in favor of the entire withdrawal of all such forms of buying unless they are so safeguarded by proper agreement that a legitimate margin on the investment is assured to the extent at least of a uniform retail price maintained by the manufacturer; and further be it

Resolved, That the secretary be instructed to ask the aid of the State and National Association to remedy the existing evil and to notify all interested manufacturers of such goods as are being cut before the execution of any policy that may prove detrimental to their interests.

AN ARTICLE OF QUALITY.

There is hardly a city or town that the wise grocer is free from the wiles of the salesman or drummer as he is often known. NO ROYAL ROAD.

Some Thoughts as to the Elements That Help Make Success.

In previous articles we have pointed out the necessity for system, for care in selecting goods, for satisfactory service and attractive stores.

There is one great law that stands above all these and, to a certain extent includes them.

It can be expressed by one word: WORK.

There is no "royal road" to success. "Organization" helps reach it. Handsome windows and a well-kept store help reach it. Other things are of great assistance. But all these depend on properly directed effort.

The grocer must work.

He must work hard.

It is not enough that his hands be kept busy. From 7 in the morning till 11 at night of mere bodily toil sometimes results in failure. While his hands must be busy, it is even more important that his head must work, too.

How the Head Counts.

If the dealer is selling goods without a profit merely because they are advertised largely, he isnt using his head.

If he has similar goods available of better quality, or even equal quality, on which he can get a profit, and he does not introduce them to his trade, he is not using his head. He is especially at fault if he is able to "money back" these goods to his customers.

When he works in this way without using his head, the more work he does with his hands, the more goods he sells, the greater amount will he lose.

Is it Right or Fair?

When a manufacturer spends the surplus profits in advertising his goods so effectively that he forces their sale over the goods of competitors, we admire his energy and cleverness.

When he fails to protect the retail selling price and allows it to be hammered down by the cutters until there is no profit left for the dealer, then every dollar he spends for advertising is a detriment to the retailer. All his advertising money is taken from the dealer's pocket and is used against him to force him to do business at a loss or abandon his customers to his competitors should he refuse to meet their competition.

Is It Cleverness?

This may be clever on the part of the manufacturer.

If the retailers help the manufacturer in his efforts to work their ruin, it is anything but clever on their part, however.

If they use their heads and refuse to be used as tools by these unscrupulous manufacturers—which they can do by intelligent co-operation—then this apparent "cleverness" of the manufacturer will be found to be "stupidity," for the manufacturer will find that his methods have been turned against himself and will destroy his business.

Where Protection is Accorded.

There are some manufacturers who do not believe in the kind of "cleverness" that includes in its results the getting of service from the retailing grocer without pay.

They have a "cleverness' that recognizes the necessity of paying for services rendered. Their "cleverness" teaches them that permanent success depends upon right dealing both with the consumer and with the distributer. They put quality in their goods so that the consumer will always get his money's worth. They insist that every dealer shall secure sufficient margin so that other competing distributors can be sure of a fair return if they invest their money in purchasing the goods and their time and brains in making them popular with their trade.

The most marked example of such goods and of this policy on the Pacific Coast are found in "Shilling's Best." For years the firm of A. Shilling & Co. has spent time and money seeking to impress upon the grocers the necessity of looking out for their own interests by lending aid to firms that propose to pay for their assistance.

The Pacific Coast Grocers' Association was created to help make retailers understand that the manufacturer who fixed and maintained a fair retail selling price on his goods is the dealer's true friend. The manufacturer who forces the dealer into frenzied cutting by unfair discriminations, circus-like advertising and co-operation with cutters may say he is leaving the retail dealer to sell his goods as he pleases. This is a misstatement.

Such manufacturers merely hand the dealer to the untender mercies of the cutters who force him to sell at the prices they fix. This is the worst kind of slavery.

The Advocate would like to see the Schilling policy adopted by more manufacturers. There would then be fewer failures among retail grocers.

DIVIDING PROFITS ON FLOUR.

C. A. Hutton & Co. No. 606 Merchants' Exchange, distributors of the Standard Milling Co.'s "Summit Snow" flour, have embarked upon a plan by which the grocer becomes a shareholder and a profit taker on all flour sold. C. A. Hutton & Co. issue to every grocer profit-sharing certificates on all flour purchased, based of course upon the amount purchased; thus each purchaser receives his percentage of profit under the terms of such certificates, on all flour he may sell, likewise on all flour other grocers may sell of this same brand. In other words, it becomes a mutual profit sharing proposition between all grocers handling the flour.

Further this company have listed their flour with the association and agrees to maintain prices, which entitles them to the appreciation of all retailers and enables dealers to sell "Summit Snow" flour at a good legitimate profit.

CANDY CONFECTIONERS.

At a Recent Meeting It Was Decided To Raise the Prices.

The Grand Hotel one day last week was the scene of a largely attended meeting of all the large manufacturing confectioners of San Francisco and Los Angeles who had assembled there for the purpose of devising ways and means to increase the price of candies.

After the meeting had been called to order a resolution was introduced by one of the most prominent members calling attention to the fact that owing to the prevailing high prices of raw material that it was unwise to continue under the old scale of prices.

The resolution was thoroughly discussed before it was finally adopted. By the passage of the same the price of candy is higher. The Advocate's price list has the new quotations.

"The price of candy has been too low for the last year, and everyone connected with the business has sold on very small margins," remarked a manufacturer.

While this fact has been staring the manufacturers in the face, they kept away from an increase until the proposition forced itself upon them to advance in order to permit of legitimate profits.

ABOUT FLOUR PROFITS.

from them by the retail grocers. Mr. Baxter, speaking for the grocers of Southern California, says:

Paulding Attacked.

"Because J. F. Paulding has fought a good fight in the interests of the manufacturers who have co-operated with the association workers in maintaining prices, his integrity has been questioned by those whom he has attacked.

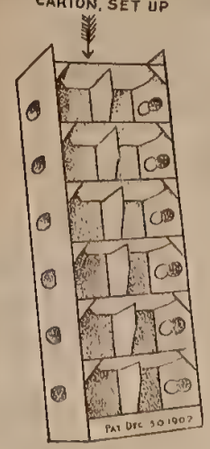
"There is nothing wonderful about this. It is human nature.

"The claim is pushed forward that because Mr. Paulding has advocated the sale of the product of the one mill whose goods are on the protected list, this mill has subsidized him and that for a specified sum he is pushing their line.

"Such childish claims are hardly worthy of answer.

"Those who know Mr. Paulding's integrity and worth do not for a moment place dependence upon these accusations."

Much to Be Gained.



In conclusion I wish to call the attention of the retail grocery trade to the fact that they have everything to gain by pushing the sale of flours the price of which is protected, and nothing to lose. When they convince the California mills that it will pay them to protect the price of their flours in the Bay Cities, they will have convinced them that it will pay them to protect their flours in other cities of the Pacific Coast.

They will have done more.

They will have convinced other manufacturers that the active co-operation of the retail grocery trade of the State is of sufficient value to warrant their making a strong effort to secure their friendly and active support, even at the cost of the possible, though not necessary, antagonism of a few cutters.

J. F. Paulding, Secretary.

UNITED STORES AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

One Now in Operation and Four More to Be Opened in the Near Future.

WASHINGTON, D. C. The United Cigar Stores Co. is striving to establish itself in Washington, the opening having been made on Christmas eve, says Tobacco.

Local dealers do not appear to view the enterprise with any degree of apprehension, and have contented themselves with quietly investigating the new store themselves or through their expert help. It is understood that the United Company has planned to ultimately locate five retail stores in Washington, the other four to be placed immediately in the locations where the largest demands for goods at retail prevails.

The success of the venture may be regarded as somewhat conjectural. Washington is a peculiar city so far as the retail cigar trade is concerned, and there is much more of the social and friendly feeling entwined in the business than is the case in the larger commercial centers. In Washington a man buys his cigars and tobacco from persons who have been long in the business and whose places of business have become meeting places for friends who have other matters to attend to beside the mere purchase of smokes. For instance in one popular dealer's store all the business of several beneficial associations is transacted and accommodations are furnished for that purpose. In other establishments there are reading and smoking rooms attached to the store proper and such places have all the advantages of a quiet club for the customers. Whether the United Cigar Stores Co. will ever be able to seriously break in upon these old and well-established concerns is a matter of some doubt.

COMPLAINT DEPARTMENT.

Grocers are invited to send to this office complaints of abuses that they suffer from. We will see that the matter is referred to the proper sources for correction. Among the abuses to be considered are:

1. Cutting of listed goods.
2. Selling to consumers by jobbers, c.
3. Short weights and short measures.
4. Any abuse which united effort might abate.

VOICE FROM THE NORTH.

Washington Trade Journal Advises California Grocers to Handle Globe Flour.

The New West Trade of Tacoma, in an article on the flour situation in California, says:

"San Francisco Retail Grocers Advocate, in a recent issue, notes that four flour mills, doing business in and around the California metropolis, have refused to accede to the demands of the retail grocers for a uniform card price on flour, and that only one mill—that of the Globe Grain & Milling Company—has decided to protect the trade from price cutters.

"There is only one way in which the two thousand, more or less, retail grocers of San Francisco can show their disapproval of the former and their disapproval of the latter, and that is, by pushing the sale of the goods of that manufacturer who sands by them and selling no more of the products of the others than is absolutely necessary.

"United action along this line by all those grocers constituting a very large majority, who believe that the cutting of the price of a staple such as flour below cost, or even below a fair legitimate margin of profit, is detrimental to every individual grocer, will convince those four mills that the grocers are in earnest and will bring about better conditions."

Note—The following are the flours now listed with Secretary Paulding:

Globe Grain & Milling Co.

"Al," per sack	$1.40
"Banquet," per sack	1.35
"Silver Star" per sack	1.25

Standard Flour Company.

"Sumn it Snow," per sack	$1.35

The following mills refuse to agree to use their efforts to prevent cutters from selling their standard brands at a price below what the retail grocers can sell at and make a living profit:

Sperry Milling Co.
Stockton Milling Co.
Port Costa Milling Co.
Del Monte Milling Co.
American Milling Co.

PRAISE FROM THE SOUTH.

San Diego, Cal., Jan. 18, 1905.

Aaron H. Powers, Esq., 456 Montgomery St., San Francisco, Cal.

Friend Powers—I have received and just finished examining your New Year's edition of the Retail Grocers' Advocate, and while to some extent I am familiar with your progress, I certainly was not prepared to realize the full extent of the accomplishment made by yourself and your associates.

Every progressive and up-to-date grocer should and will have your Advocate on his desk, and put in his spare time consulting it, and will as a consequence have money to lend while the old fashioned retailer, who depends solely upon his personal experience, will have passed into bankruptcy.

If Paulding shall be as successful with the Pacific Coast Retail Grocers' Association as you and your associates have been with the Advocate, old things wil have passed away and the Pacific Coast retail grocer will be a prosperous, independent and happy citizen.

With an earnest hope that you will succeed in the future as in the past, I am. Yours as ever,

A. D. Jordan,
Sec'y Retail Dealers' Association of San Diego, Calif.

CIRCLE WINDOW.

A Neat Design Which is Particularly Adapted to a Good Display.

Cartons and bottled goods are particularly adapted to window displays, as they can be arranged in a great many various designs and combinations, only limited by the ingenuity of the window dresser. Pyramids, cones, squares, crosses, stars and circles are some of the designs that may be made with these handy and convenient implements.

How to Construct It.

The display this week comprises what we will call a "circle window." To the framework of the window, have a carpenter construct a large circle, taking up the entire width of your window space. Cover the framework with gilt paper, says Modern Grocer. Next tack cartons to the inside and outside edges of the circle, and on the top outside edge arrange some bottled goods, which are held in place by wires.

Use Electric Lights.

The inside of the circle is studded with incandescent electric lights, placed at regular intervals, except on about one-quarter of the space nearest the floor. A large pyramid of cartons is built up in the center and at the rear of the circle. On either side of this are two high pyramids of bottles, with plates of glass between the tiers. A row of attractive bottled goods runs the entire width of the window on the floor across the front. Back of this row other bottles are arranged in tiers and on either side of the window.

There is a great chance here for individual taste in adding glass jars of fruit and other attractive articles where they will show up to advantage.

By the way, are you keeping your windows free from dampness?

And are you keeping them clean, so people can see through them?

If not all your labor will be in vain.

THE CUSTOMER PAYS.

A clear showing of how the customer pays for trading stamps and other premiums is made by the Springfield, Mass., Republican, which said in a recent article:

"The statement printed yesterday morning that a large user of trading stamps in this city had given away 800,000 trading stamps with $22,500 worth of business during December, is illuminating to those who understand the workings of this system.

"The lowest price which is known to have been quoted locally on these stamps to merchants is $12.50 for $10,000. On this basis 800,000 stamps would cost the dealer $1000. It would be necessary for him to put an additional charge on the customer, therefore, of 4½ per cent. To this, if the State law stands, must be added another 3 per cent tax, making an extra 7½ per cent which a customer must pay on his purchase.

"The outside public little understands what games can be played with these trading stamps.

"One of the most familiar to the trade is that by which a pound of coffee, a pound of tea and '$15 worth' of stamps are given for 95 cents or $1.05. To make up the price the tea is listed at either 60 cents or 70 cents, and the coffee at 35. The price of the tea is changed from 60 to 70 cents, according to what it is believed the customer will stand, but it is all the same tea.

"As a matter of fact, both the tea and coffee is of the cheapest kind, costing the dealer in the vicinity of 15 cents a pound. Making an allowance of 8½ cents for the cost of trading stamps, the profit to the dealer will be found to be ample, the cost of his goods being something like 48½ cents."

WANT PRICES PROTECTED.

An Active Secretary Helps Members Secure Profits on Their Leading Staples.

No association is stronger than its secretary.

Charles W. Jones, secretary of the Whatcom County Grocers' Association, stated in his review of the service given to the members of his association by the secretary that he expected himself to see that "Protected goods got the right treatment at the hands of the retail grocers."

W. R. Baxter, secretary of the Retail Grocers' Association of Southern California, devotes himself to the same purpose. He calls upon the association members frequently and makes it his business to see that the dealers understand the importance of pushing protected goods.

In this way, the protected goods are made popular among consumers. The sale of them is largely increased. The sales of protected goods take the place of sales on unprofitable and unprotected goods.

The results are greater enthusiasm among the members for their association because of the addition to their profits. It lessens the danger of some member cutting through carelessness. It also makes the manufacturer who protects his retail selling price realize that he is getting a fair deal from the men at whose request he has assumed the risk of losing the business of the cutters.

In speaking of the attitude of the retail grocer in Southern California with regard to this matter, Mr. Baxter says:

"Wednesday, January 18, 1905, I called on 73 of our members and found but very few unprotected goods were being sold where it was possible to sell protected goods. This is encouraging and the sooner all grocers adopt this method of doing business the sooner the manufacturers will help the retailer to make a profit on their products.

"In the next issue of the Retail Merchants' Report will be published a letter which was sent to the jobbers of our city and also their answer. It is very gratifying to be able to notify the members of our Association that every jobber in our city will work with us to protect the manufacturers' established price and help the retailer to make a profit.

"The question was asked each jobber whether he approved the plan of securing from the manufacturer a fixed retail price on groceries.

"To this question each jobber replied in the affirmative and each signified his willingness to co-operate with the association in furthering this end.

"If the manufacturers of unprotected goods will not name a retail price and protect the same, it is the duty of every grocer in Southern California to refuse to either buy or sell such an unprotected article.

"Statistics prove that 98 per cent of the retail trade of Southern California want protected goods. If the manufacturers of unprotected goods would rather cater to the 2 per cent (the cutter) than the 98 per cent (the manufacturer's friends) let them sell the cutter.

"One of the largest grocers in Southern California has notified the Secretary that beginning February 1, 1905, none of his stores will either buy or sell any unprotected article. If one of our largest grocers can take this stand why can't the smaller grocer.

"I say any of us can and it is our duty to do so."

It is regrettable that the secretary of the San Francisco Retail Grocers is not able to give the San Francisco grocers the same service.

Gentlemen—Please find enclosed check for $2 in payment for my subscription to your valuable paper. I am much pleased at your efforts to help the grocers secure the enactment of the laws we need. The wife should be responsible for the groceries the family uses if she has property. Open accounts should not outlaw in two years. It should be four or six, at least, and longer.

ATTRACTIVE BILLBOARDS.

Many attractive billboards are going up that show the Jersey Cream can of the Condensed Milk Company of California to splendid advantage. Big stands are used and the bright red of the label makes a strong contrast to the background of green meadows and hills while a pretty dairy maid standing near a Jersey cow add beauty to the pictures which really have decided artistic excellence.

WITH WEDDING BREAKFAST.

Tom Brennan Arrives To Tell the Mode of Success to Be Won.

Tom F. Brennan a former San Franciscan, is now in town and will devote the next few months to telling the trade of the bay cities about the help "Wedding Breakfast" coffee has been to grocers in other communities and how it can help them secure the same results.

"Our people believe in protecting the retail selling price of their goods," he said. "We have been doing it for years, independent of association help. But I can assure you that we are glad to have the active co-operation of the trade through their organizations in our efforts.

"The Nash-Smith Tea and Coffee Co. are pioneers in the business. Our Mr. Nash put up package coffees before the Arbuckles. Our "Wedding Breakfast" blend has been on the market 16 years now. There has not been a year that our business has not increased sometimes more than 100 per cent.

"This has been due to three things. First, to the quality which has always been kept of uniform excellence without regard to what it cost us; second, to our protecting the retail selling price and refusing to supply firms that cut; third, to the price in most cities it can be retailed for 30 cents and leaves the dealer a margin of 5 cents though it is often sold for 35 cents.

"Dealers are realizing more and more how great an aid companies like ours are to them in helping them hold their coffee trade and in helping them win back customers who are weaned away by the wiles of the coffee peddler who canvasses from house to house with his buggy. They are learning that customers who are given bulk coffees that are satisfactory one month and, six weeks later when they get coffee of a different quality look for a change and get it.

"When customers find a brand of coffee they like, they stick to it. If the grocer knows, I don't mean 'thinks' I mean 'knows' that every package of "Wedding Breakfast" or any other high grade coffee, is going to be the same five years hence or twenty-five years hence as it is today and when he knows—not "thinks" but "knows" that there is full net-weight in each package, he feels safe in recommending those goods to his trade. When they once use that coffee and like it and they will like it—their trade belongs to him. They may try a pound from this man or a pound from that peddler or try a fly at the kind that throws in a cup and saucer. But they are coming back, eventually, to the package they are sure of and that satisfies them.

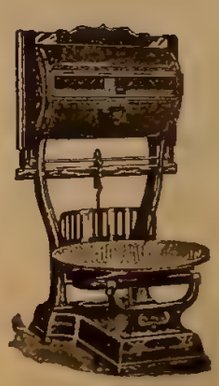
"I have been selling 'Wedding Breakfast" coffee for five years. I have met many grocers who have been selling it for fifteen years. And I want to say right now that the staunchest friends of "Wedding Breakfast" coffee are those that have used it longest.

"Our distributors in this territory are Frank B. Peterson & Co. We will cooperate with them introducing it here and I am satisfied that the trade of California will be as appreciative of this piece of goods as the grocers are elsewhere.

"Our coffee is matured in the high altitudes of Colorado. We have our own process of roasting by direct contact with the fire—a method that saves largely the essential oils that give to coffee its flavor and the aroma that make up so much of its value."

Mr. Brennan will work in conjunction with Mr. Peterson's salesmen and introduce "Wedding Breakfast" coffee which has come to this market to stay.

STORE FIXTURES.



The need of interior work in stores offices, etc., will at all times be promptly attended to if the Pacific Store & Office Fixture Co. (Inc.), at 3253-3259 Sixteenth Street San Francisco, are called upon. But few of the hundreds of grocers in the city and nearby suburbs have any knowledge of the extent of the fine new plant erected last year by this company, or realize their ability to handle this class of work which they make a special feature of their business. Being fully prepared to execute this line of construction, they are enabled to handle any steel contract for any class of interior fittings and do it with dispatch and at figures that those less favorably equipped could scarcely attempt. Their store covers everything from ordinary plain counters, shelving, etc., to the finest pieces of bar fixtures or bank and office fittings. To the wholesaler, produce and commission dealer merchandise broker or others needing any interior office fittings, the Pacific Store & Office Fixture Co. (Inc.) is recommended by the Advocate.

DANGEROUS ASURES.

Bill No. 369 introduced by Mr. Cleveland would prevent the general merchandise dealers of California from selling a bottle of cod liver oil, a box of pills or any medicine whatever without a prescription from a physician. As practically every general merchant carries a line of patent medicines this bill, if made a law, would work a great injustice not only against them but against their customers. Every reader of the Advocate who feels that this business will be affected by this bill should write at once to his representatives in the Assembly and Senate telling them why the bill should not be passed.

Money Weight Scales

Some of the Advantages the Grocer Derives:

1—They give the correct value of the article being weighed.
2—They prevent loss from errors in calculation.
3—They save time required in making calculation
4—They are made better than ordinary scales.
5—With proper care they will last an ordinary life-time.
6—The pivots are of hardened tool steel, and with agate bearings inserted at the proper point, are practically indestructible.
7—They are sensitive to the very small fraction of an ounce.
8—They are an ornament to any store.
9—They are the only scale that is mechanically honest.
10—Customers, knowing them to be an honest scale, like to have their purchases weighed on them.
11—Sold on easy monthly payments.

With the Money Weight Scales you at once weigh goods AT THEIR MONEY VALUE.

Cigars and Tobacco

The tobacco trade at the present time is in an unsettled condition, and the Advocate's price-list remains stationary. It is likely that there will be some changes in the prices in the near future. The invasion of the United Cigar Stores is said to be the cause of the condition of the tobacco market. Notwithstanding this statement the Independents are preparing themselves to handle their opponents in a manner that will be somewhat surprising to the Trust.

Meeting of the Cigar Merchants.

The cigar and tobacco merchants held a meeting Monday of last week at 102 O'Farrell street. President J. S. Parry reported that he had divided the city into sections to further the interests of the business.

The following gentlemen were selected as an advisory board: C. B. Poar, William Glynn, Horace Orear, Thomas Ferguson, Max Etlinger, H. Bendixon, A. Hess, B. W. McIntosh, L. Korn N. P. Peterson, C. Dodge, R. E. Starr, E. J. Gillen, L. Willard and George Carrington.

Mr. Parry also called the attention of the members at the meeting to the way the United Cigar Stores were advertising by promising to give better cigars for the money than the established cigar dealers. He was strong in his condemnation of the acts of the Trust.

Long discussions ensued in which many members took part over the Trust signs, and Ed. L. Allenberg suggested that the association publish a list of the Independent goods, so that those dealers who could not distinguish between Trust and Independent goods could read for themselves and ascertain the goods (Independent) which they should handle.

The next meeting will be held at the call of the chair, probably in the first week in February.

C. H. Schmidt, vice-president of Tillmann & Bendel's, is in the East on a business trip. He will visit some of the largest cities.

Inlow & Smith have started a high grade tobacco store at Eage Point, Oregon.

N. R. McMath is now in the cigar business at Connell, Wash.

Eugene Cerf, the well-known cigar proprietor, has opened a stand in the Merchants' Exchange.

The Japan Advertiser says that the authorities have arranged to conduct a Government tobacco factory at Nagasaki, with a branch factory at Shimabara. The date for the formal opening of the factory has been fixed for February 1.

How They Put a Premium on Honesty.

A novelty in the cigar business which is being introduced by the United Stores Co. is a system of insurance for employes. The company undertakes to issue and pay the premiums for every one of its employes whose salary is less than $2500 a year, paying the premium so long as he is in their employ. The amount of the policy will be his salary for one year, provided this is not less than $1000.

In cases where the salary does not reach this figure the policy will still be $1000. The object of this innovation is of course, to provide for the widows and children of men who die when in the company's emplay. Cigar salesmen are not usually particularly provident, and more than once salesmen of the company have died leaving their family totally unprovided for. The idea is one that redounds to the credit of the company, the worst enemies of which could find nothing to cavil at in this. At the same time it is one that has considerable merit from a business point of view.

It will cost a good deal of money, but the company is rich and can afford it. To a great system like the United Cigar Stores Co. it is a matter of prime importance to secure the very best class of help. Any money which attracts good men to its service is money well spent. Again it is equally important to keep its men when it has them, and a man will think twice before leaving a service, when by doing so he sacrifices an insurance policy or is put to the necessity of paying the premiums out of his own pocket. Finally, the system puts a premium on honesty and industry, inasmuch as it gives additional inducements to a man to deserve to hold his job.

THE LONG CLAY PIPE.

It is curious how the long clay pipe has dropped out of usage, says the London Chronicle. But its tradition lingers. Recently an American, dining at a Fleet street inn which trades on its survival, called for a long clay and smoked it in the belief that he was doing in London as London does. But the man who wants to buy long clays would be puzzled where to find them. Yet, thirty years ago there was not a provincial town without its shop devoted exclusively to the sale of specially manufactured clay pipes, and the business was a flourishing one. The long clay, of course is a serious thing, and, unlike the cigarette, cannot be combined with walking or writing. That, perhaps, is the explanation of its present disfavor with smokers.

SOME IMPORTANT QUESTIONS.

A Few Things That Retail Grocers Should Consider Carefully.

If you have not received as much profit out of your business this year as you have a right to expect, there must be something wrong. Every merchant is entitled to at least 10 per cent of his gross receipts as clear profit.

Figure this out and answer the following questions for yourself: Have you actually saved 10 per cent of the gross receipts of your business in the last year? If not, can you satisfy yourself as to what has caused this shortage?

If you have looked at this proposition of profit and loss in your business from every point of view, you will readily realize that it is the small leaks in your store which cause you the greatest amount of worry, loss of time and money. The larger losses you can partially control; the little losses are the ones that lose for you the most money.

All of these losses can be prevented. A latest improved National Cash Register will protect you against the losses which occur in your store and which have caused the shortage in your profits for the past year. An up-to-date, modern National will "stop the leaks" in your business.

You surely are not willing to carry on your business with a system which loses you money. If you are willing to investigate a more modern and up-to-date one that will guarantee you the proper profit from your business, write to Messrs. Pierce & Co., 14 Turk street, San Francisco, and they will have a representative call upon you and explain the most modern method of taking care of receipts in a store—a system which will save you your profit.

TAKING CHANCES.

You Must Keep Your Wits Collected When In Business.

"It is curious," said an out-of-town guest at one of the down-town clubs, "how men who have grubbed and saved and are ordinarily possessed of good judgment, often lose their heads at the prospect of making a handsome profit in a single transaction. I don't refer now to the 'easy Reubs' who buy gold bricks, but to staid, cautious business men, who take it for granted that they are dealing with men like themselves.

Experience of Shrewd Men.

"You have just told me about a concern made up of shrewd, careful and progressive business men, that has lately been forced to the wall. I know a similar story of two young men in the town where I live. Both were industrious and bright, and both were so economical in their personal expenses as often to bring down upon them the charge of being small and mean—of being misers. One of them was a merchant, and the other was the manager of a big manufacturing concern; and in a few years each of them had accumulated a handsome property—that is, for the town in which they lived—say $40,000 apiece.

How People Are Mistaken.

"Then an opportunity was offered to them to buy a manufacturing plant at a 'bargain'—they had been church workers together and had otherwise been brought together in close personal relations—and they agreed to go into the venture, the one abandoning his lucrative position and the other a profitable business. Both were able to raise all the cash that was needed for the new business, and everybody who knew them predicted that the firm could not fail to make a success of it.

"Within less than a year that firm went into bankruptcy. The partners watched every penny of outgo with the eyes of a lynx, they were close buyers of raw material and their credit with every local bank was AI although, as yet, there was little occasion for them to borrow money on any great scale. In order to economize still further, however, they undertook to sell most of their products direct, instead of selling them, as had previously been the case, through commission houses; and, suddenly, the failure of one big concern that was a heavy debtor to them was announced, and then everything was up with them. The insolvent concern could scarcely pay ten cents on the dollar, and in consequence these two young men, starting out under such promising auspices, were compelled to hand their property over to the courts. They didn't recover a dollar of their original capital, and to-day one of them is a traveling salesman on a small salary and the other is a car conductor. Be it said to their credit, however, that misfortune did not 'drive them to drink.' Both of them are still reputable and industrious citizens.

Bad Collections.

"But their experience shows the importance of keeping your wits collected if you are in business. It is all well enough to keep down expenses of production and personal living, but it is equally important indeed, more important—that the money that you put out in the shape of credit to customers is in a fair way to be returned. 'Bad collections,' I venture to say, are responsible for a large majority of the business failures of the present day, and this is only another way of saying that the creditors have taken undue risks. Such business is bad policy and every busines man, especially young business men, should be on guard against it. It doesn't pay."

A. H. Powers, San Francisco

Dear Sir—I have been reading your New Year's edition and want to tell you how much it pleases me.

It certainly is fine. I think every grocer in California should have a copy. If he would read it as I have, it would make him a better grocer and a better business man.

I want to tell you right now that the grocers could better afford to pay $10 a year apiece for the Advocate than lose its help and its advice.

Wishing all my old friends of Alameda County a Happy New Year, I remain. Yours truly, Geo. R. Young.

SUGAR.

What sugar is worth in the mid-west or in New York does not have much weight with prices here, since the condition is such a mixed one. A sugar war is the promise held out by the various refining interests but as yet there has not been more than a skirmish. If there are any plans maturing for a reconciliation they are kept well under cover, although a hint in that direction has leaked out. The public is familiar with the refusal of the West to sell sugar to two of our jobbers and the reasons therefor; this intensifies the strain between the wholesale interests who are at "outs" with the Trust and the Trust and its methods. The position of raw sugars and improved prices on refined in the East warrant advances here, but if the local disturbance remains unreconciled prices will surely go lower.

Willett & Gray, New York, say:

"Following the upward movement in raws, two general advances of 10 points each were made by all refiners, one on Friday and the other following, bringing the net cash quotations for granulated up to 6 cents. This is the highest price on record since the Spring of 1891 when tariff changes were imminent. The highest previous quotation for granulated, since the present tariff went into effect, was 5.89 cents net cash in August 1900, when stocks in principal countries were small.

"Withdrawals against outstanding contracts are good, causing a delay in the deliveries by some refineries, particularly Howell's. New business has been only fair and rather limited, because buyers generally have already engaged supplies for thirty days ahead. A few of the strongest buyers, however, who are confident of much higher prices during the season, are placing large orders, being prepared to take and pay for the sugars when contracts mature, which they expect the refiners will require them to do. Price guarantees are still withdrawn.

"Refiners continued to take orders to some extent after the advance today at the previous basis of 5.09 cents net cash.

The present margin of 76 points between raw and refined is only a moderate one, for this time of the year, and, in view of the strength of the general situation, buyers may consider it safe to continue purchases."

COFFEE.

From time to time we have been advising the trade that good, old, roasting grades of mild coffees would show an improvement, and since the New Year has opened this has been verified; from 12 cents upward washed grades have done better. Grades running from 9½ to 11 cents have been most in demand. New crop coffees running from 9½ to 13½ cents have gone out in a small way. Low grades from 6½ to 9 cents are not to be had and of course buyers are insistent that in some odd nook or corner a few parcels can be discovered. It is the worse for the consumer that grades of this sort are at all taken by the roaster; they lack every element of fitness for the table. New crop Salvadors have recently sold at 9½ cents for fair grade. Ecuadors bring 8¾ to 9¼ cents. Stock in first hands is exhausted.

Willett & Gray, New York, report:

"The receipts at Santos the last few days have been running larger than they were the first two weeks of January. However, one of the best informed houses in Brazil cables that notwithstanding the larger receipts for a few days, the total for the month of January at Santos will not exceed 300,000 to 350,000 bags.

"The more Europe loses of her coffee stocks the more anxious are the people over there for a decline in the market. While there is naturally a difference of opinion as to present or future 1897-1898 to 1901-1902 steadily increased from about 9 000,000 bags up to 15,500,000 bags, but since 1901-1902 the outturn of these crops has ben steadily decreasing from 15,500 000 bags to 9,500,000 bags annually. This decrease is not due to unfavorable weather as sometimes reported, but is due to the poverty of the soil in which a great many of the present plantations are laid out. Therefore, a change in the weather conditions is not likely to contribute to an increase of the crops, since existing conditions of the plantations are more likely to result in smaller crops for several years.

"The Venezuela crop which had been reported about 60 per cent of a usual crop, is now understood to be only about 40 per cent of the annual yield expected. It is also now known that the Haiti crop will turn out not to exceed 50 per cent of the crop raised there last year.

"Thus we see that the coffee world is going into a cycle of smaller supplies and so long as opinions differ as to values we conclude the market is surely healthy.

"No. 7 Rio is quoted at 8 7-8c. to 9c., acording to position and Rio and Santos 4s, change hands at 9 3-8c. to 9½c., as to selections.

"January Options, week ending January 19: Highest, 7.65 to 7.70; lowest, 7.50 to 7.55, closing 7.50 to 7.55, against last year closing 7.50 to 7.55. No. 7 last year 8¼c."

TEA.

Firmness and steadiness are the dominant features of teas; there is but little of an interesting character to be picked up in the market all joining in the one report that trade remains fairly good but is practically at a standstill as to prices.

John B. Brown & Co., New York, under date of January 27, write in part as follows:

"Japans First crop teas are commanding a premium throughout the States and even second and third pickings are well maintained as to price.

"Formosas continue in active demand at full to advancing prices. Some 6000 half chests have been sold within the last two weeks. Considerable of these 6000 have been resold at a profit. The estimated supply of Formosas will prove considerably short over the last two previous years, and predictions are freely head of considerably higher prices in the quite near future. Japans are slow but prices firm. Low grade Indias of rough leaf and dark, unattractive liquor are offered at concessions, but as the American trade buys but little of these kinds it is quite natural that they should sell at a less price. Tippy, Indias, and Ceylons are selling at full rates.

DRIED FRUITS.

Dried peaches are in a fair way to be cleaned up in a most thorough manner; a crop of some 800 cars has been put down until it is estimated that only forty cars remain unsold. Prices are strong with an advance in some grades; sellers are quite independent in their demands. The stock on the Coast, it is alleged, is controlled by three shippers; as the stock on hand is not sufficient to meet the needs of the country before new crop is available higher prices are anticipated. Apricots have been closely sold up until there are not over twenty cars remaining on the Coast; while there is less movement in this fruit than in peaches, still there is sufficient to take up every car before the new crop comes to market. In apples there is wanting life and interest, particularly in sun-dried, which are neglected. Evaporated of choice grade are firm. The stock of prunes is no longer a formidable one and there is every promise of a much healthier condition in the future; there are said to be but 750 cars on the Coast, as against 1600 cars a year since. There is a good supply of 50-60s. 45-50s, 80-90s and 90-100s are very scarce; 70-80s are in only fair supply. Prices have been at such a ridiculous figure that any change will be in the direction of improvement; it remains with the growers to provide an adequate remedy for the evils which disturb this fruit and render its cultivation so hazardous as a profit-maker.

The only notable item in canned goods to stir the stagnant pool of trade is the slight increase in foreign shipments. January and February are two of the quietest months and they are well up to their reputation, as there is only the most insignificent sort of trading going on. From week to week prices have been without any appreciable change. Stocks of fruit are so light that no one cares to cut a price to force a sale. increment to increase their holdings. Tomatoes, both East and West, are flat. Good corn is firm but medium to common grades are feeling the influence of association with damaged stock that greedy packers sent out to their patrons last fall.

Baltimore advices say:

"Baltimore Md., Jan. 16, 1905. Tomatoes are slightly firmer, and it is so easy to buy choice quality now at the minimum price. The very weak sellers of last month have sold out, evidently, and the present sellers are less anxious. Choice quality tomatoes bought at to-day's prices are not likely to show the purchaser any loss. Standards 2-pounds are 47½c and 3-pounds 60@62½c, usual terms, f. o. b. Baltimore.

"T. J. Meehan & Co."

MARKET NOTES.

William Cluff Co. have been appointed agents for the well-known brands of goods put up by Curtice Bros., Rochester, N. Y.

Opening prices by packers of tomatoes in San Francisco:

	2½ lbs.	Gals.
1899	75	$2 35
1900	80	2 25
1901	75	2 10
1902	65	1 90
1903	85	2 10
1904	70	2 00

The Booth Packing Co. of Baltimore have sold out to the Gibbs Preserving Co. This makes the latter one of the largest canners in the country.

Evaporated apples in the East are much firmer. There are about 300 cars of evaporated apples now held by first and second hands as against 1200 cars at same time in 1904. Canada has somewhere near 20,000 boxes on hand. Some two weks ago there was sold for export by an Eastern firm in a single transaction, 10,000 boxes of prime grade at 5¼ cents.

Pennsylvania dealers are suffering from large quantities of corn syrup that has turned sour. It is claimed that thousands of barrels have been returned to the jobbers.

Recently the Guthrie Wholesale Grocery Co. went into a receiver's hands. It had in stock $1000 worth of matches from the Diamond Match Co. The company demanded the return of the goods. The referee refused this, but allowed the company's claim. The match company appealed. The judge reversed the decision and declined to allow the claim as the match company were illegally operating in Oklahoma under the trust law; not only did he so decide, but the judge also had the matches confiscated to the Territory.

SALMON.

A firm market and a more cheerful outlook prevails, even though there are not enough cases of salmon moving just now to create anything of a stir. There is going on, at this moment, events in the salmon packing industry which, when completed will put the affairs of all the leading packers in better shape than they have been in years. The attempt of the McGovern combination to take in the earth was a most disastrous one and the Alaska Packing Co. have had their lines cast in most unpleasant places. All these different elements are being so readjusted that, with the lessons learned, salmon are going to be put on a more solid business basis.

The Orient has been so large a buyer of salmon that it has furnished an outlet for the congested market and it is likely to continue a good customer.

The British Columbia and Puget Sound packers have declared their intention not to pack during 1906 and 1908 and to follow a weekly close of thirty-six hours during the years 1905 and 1907, this move will have the tendency to put an extra bruce into prices.

NORWAY MACKEREL.

Wieland Bros. report:

"Norway mackerel bloaters, ones and twos are higher in price on account of small catch. The bloaters and ones are particularly scarce while threes are still plentiful.

IRISH MACKEREL.

"Irish mackerel are doing considerably better in price and holders in Ireland refuse to ship to this country unless at an advance of $2 per barrel. As stocks in this market are still large, prices are not yet affected by this view of exporters in Ireland."

SPANISH OLIVES.

"We have received the first shipment 106 casks in all of new crop of Queens and Manzanillos. The fruit is much better than last year and prices are lower on account of a good crop."

PROVISIONS.

Armour Packing Co. report:

"Bottom prices on everything have been reached in the market. Lard may advance 50 cents any moment."

HAY.

Somers & Co. report:

"The hay market continues in a rather uninteresting condition, as has been the case for two or three weeks past. The total shipments for the current week amount to 3580 tons, in comparison with 3820 tons for the week preceding.

"Town trade is rather dull as well as the regular export shipments, but this is made up for to some extent by a considerable amount being shipped to the Orient presumably for the Russian Government. Although this demand has taken quite a quantity of hay off the market, yet there is sufficient of all grades to supply other wants; in fact, we could get along easily with lighter shipments.

Rain has fallen quite freely in all parts of the State of late and crops have been greatly benefited. This is especially true of Southern California, where crop prospects are said to be better than they were at this time last year. However, the season has not advanced far enough to absolutely assure us of abundant crops. We have known of seasons when heavy January rains were followed by cold and dry spells and so, although thus far prospects are good, much will depend on later conditions."

POINTS ON TEA.

The following facts should be borne in mind by all dealers seeking to increase their tea trade. They are good points to memorize and give out to the consumer:

First—Tea is the only beverage whose purity and quality are guaranteed by the United States Government.

Second—Tea is the only manufactured beverage which can be taken for a lifetime without some detriment to the human system, provided the leaves are not permitted to boil or to draw over ten minutes, under which circumstances tannin is developed which may affect the nerves of delicate constitutions.

Third—Tea is beneficial as a delightful medium of carrying water through the system, and as a harmless tonic for wearied brain and muscle.

Fourth—Tea is the cheapest beverage known, costing only one cent for four to six cups at the price per pound of 50 cents, as there are from 200 to 300 cups of tea to the pound. Therefore, the higher grades only should be used.

TOBACCO TRUST COUPONS.

No Tags to Be Put on Goods Sent to Massachusetts.

In Massachusetts both wholesale grocers and retail grocers united in passing resolutions not to handle any goods carrying premium coupons or other gift schemes. One evidence of their power is a letter sent out to the trade by the American Tobacco Co., in which they say:

"Several customers in Massachusetts have requested that we do not pack coupons in our tobaccos or cigarettes intended for shipment into Massachusetts. In deference to this desire, and because of the obvious inconveniences that would be incident in packing coupons intended for some customers, and leaving them out of goods intended for other customers, we have concluded to cease packing coupons into any of our tobaccos or cigarettes hereafter shipped into Massachusetts. This, of course, does not apply to shipments made into the State of Massachusetts by or for customers whose places of business are outside of that State."

How to Make a Complexion Balm.

Half a pint of alcohol, two ounces of spirits of camphor, two ounces of spirits of ammonia and five ounces of sea salt, to be added to sufficient boiling water to make a quart in all, when the mixture should be placed in a bottle and thoroughly shaken before use. This lotion, which should be well rubbed into the skin daily, is said to be especially efficacious in taking the fatigue out of tired muscles.

Amusements

THE MAJESTIC.

J. H. Gilmour scored another striking success this week as Mathias in "The Bells." His rendition of the character is thoroughly original and marks him as a thorough artist of remarkable versality. This, with his Hamlet, exhibit a talent such as is not looked for in the members of the average stock company. Elsie Esmond made a decided hit in the one-act character sketch, "Our Bitterest Foe," that followed The Bells.

THE ALCAZAR.

"The Conquerers" is well worth seeing, largely because of the surprising sympathy of John Craig in the leading role. Harry Hilliard and Harry Mestayer both do splendid work. Lillian Lawrence and Viola Allen carry their parts well. The piece is elaborately staged and gives evidence of very careful stage direction. "The Gay Lord Quex," an unconventional satire of English society, follows next week.

TIVOLI.

Grand Opera, in Italian, still draws, and deserves, crowded houses.

CENTRAL.

The striking production of "The Holy City" at this theatre surprised even those who thought they were prepared for anything the Central might present. It is a splendidly pictoral melodrama in which is told the Biblical story of the beheading of John the Baptist and the crucifixion. Christ is not represented by any character in this play, but by electrical effects, which were really startling. Much credit should be given the management for the costuming and stage setting.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

If you haven't seen the "Silver Slipper" you want to go. This is its last week. There are lots of pretty girls and new songs and plenty of fun. J. H. Stoddart appears next week in "The Bonnie Brier Bush."

THE CHUTES.

The Star Trio composed of Jennings, O'Brien, Horace Mann and Cad Franks, offer an exceptionally amusing sketch in "Our Uncle," at the Chutes. Astonishing pictures are made out of rags by Auer, "the rag picker." John T. Powers has a lot of new specialties to offer. The Yale Duo, Mabel Lamson and the Biograph complete a varied and interesting programme. The free theatre together with the other concessions offers the public an amusement ground that they take full advantage of.

FISHER'S.

Ten first-class vaudeville teams make up the offering at Fisher's. The acts are all high-class and the house draws well. The fact that there is a second performance each evening about 9.30 o'clock has proven a very popular feature.

MORE FAME FOR MONTEREY.

Fame is fast settling upon Monterey through the enterprise of the Monterey Packing Company.

This concern packs the now well-known "Crescent" brand of mackerel, which are broiled in pure California olive oil and deliciously flavored.

They are fast replacing the French sardine in this market, and the company finds it difficult to supply the demand. Orders for several carloads for export had to be turned down this season.

As the label with Monterey upon it is now going all over the world, the old home of "fishers of men" bids fair to add a supplement to its identity.

WHITTIER ENTERS PROTEST.

A Lively Town That Doesn't Want to Be Shoved Off the Map.

Whittier, California, Jan. 13, 1905.

Dear Mr. Powers—What has Whittier done that you take her off the map on page 9 of the New Year edition"

Now, listen. We know a good thing when it looms up big enough, and we think the Pacific Coast Retail Grocers' Association all right and we want to help push it along. Dont you "fergit" us again and we will let you off this time.

We met last night and passed resolutions of appreciation of the Globe Milling Co., and condemning the action of the other four mills up north. We handle some of their cereal products and hope they will not try to make enemies of us instead of friends by continuing their present course.

Your New Year edition is a splendid one all through.

Mr Paulding makes a bullseye when he says "We think the big dealer should be given concessions in accordance with his importance. But the manufacturers should and must make these concessions conditional upon his agreeing not to use them to prevent the smaller men from making a living profit."

That's it in a nutshell. Print it on the brains of every grocer in the State.

With best wishes Yours Very truly

A. Jacobs.

Serving a Life Sentence

"Old Gorgon" Shows What One Kind of Wife Will Do For a Man

From "Old Gorgon Graham; More Letters From a Self Made Merchant to His Son," by George Horace Lorimer. By permission of Doubleday, Page & Co., Publishers.

As long as fond fathers slave and ambitious mothers sacrifice so that foolish daughters can hide the petticoats of poverty under a silk dress and crowd the doings of cheap society into the space in their heads which ought to be filled with plain, useful knowledge a lot of girls are going to grow up with the idea that getting married means getting rid of care and responsibility instead of assuming it.

A fellow can't play the game with a girl of this sort, because she can't play fair. He wants her love and a wife; she wants a provider, not a lover, and she takes him as a husband because she can't draw his salary any other way. But she can't return his affection, because her love is already given to another, and when husband and wife both love the same person and that person is the wife it's usually a life sentence at hard labor for the husband. If he wakes up a little and tries to assert himself after he's been married a year or so, she shudders and sobs until he sees what a brute he is, or if that doesn't work, and he still pretends to have a little spirit, she goes off into a rage and hysterics, and that usually brings him to heel again. It's a mighty curious thing how a woman who has the appetite and instincts of a turkey buzzard will often make her husband believe that she's as high strung and delicate as a canary bird!

It's been my experience that both men and women can fool each other before marriage and that women can keep right along fooling men after marriage, but that as soon as the average man gets married he gets found out. After a woman has lived in the same house with a man for a year she knows him like a good merchant knows his stock, down to any shelf worn and slightly damaged morals which he may be hiding behind fresher goods in the darkest corner of his immortal soul. But even if she's married to a fellow who's so mean that he'd take the pennies off a dead man's eyes (not because he needed the money, but because he hadn't the change handy for a two cent stamp) she'll never own up to the worst about him, even to herself, till she gets him into a divorce court.

Natural.

"I say, I have just come from my landlord's, and, would you believe it, I had the greatest difficulty in the world to get him to accept a little money."

"Nonsense! And why, pray?"

"Because he wanted a lot!"

Singing Master—Why, you have no voice at all! Singer—Well, but I always pay for my lessons double the amount usually paid by others. Singing Master—Say that again; your voice sounded much better, I thought.

Points to Watch

SUGAR—
Still being sold at cost, although the threatened war has not broken as yet. Prices are considerably lower here than in east.

ASPARAGUS—
Canners do not expect to be able to supply the demand. The heavy rains make even heavier flood losses probable.

COFFEE—
There has been a decided break in the eastern market. Central American coffees are in larger supply here now than they were last year.

A VINEGAR OFFER—
An opportunity to secure quantity prices on vinegar and yet buy it and pay for it as it is needed is offered in the ad. of the Pacific Vinegar & Pickle Works on page 2 of the cover. Their guarantee of price and quality and their offer to prepay the freight on the first shipment makes this offer worth while.

RICE—
It will be worth while to read the report of M. Phillips & Co. on page 22.

CHEESE—
Limberger is on the advance, being 1 cent per pound higher. Now selling at 16@17 cents. No sign of decline before May.

BUTTER—Owing to the disposal of the large amount which was in cold storage and other kinds, the market shows upward tendency with higher prices to come.

LOS ANGELES ACTIVE.

The importance of the matters now before the legislators have been realized so strongly that a special meeting of the Los Angeles Retail Grocers' Association was called for Thursday, February 2, 1905, at Burbank Hall, 540 South Main street, when the above measures will be discussed. Combined action will be taken in conjunction with the other associations of the State. All grocers in Southern California were requested to be present at this meeting whether members of this association or of affiliated associations of this State.

THIERBACH INCORPORATES.

The papers this week tell of the incorporation of the Chas. F. Thierbach Co. for $100,000, with the following directors: Chas. T. Thierbach, H. J. Kuhlmeyer, J. C. M. Dieken, J. F. Wohler and E. A. Bruer. Mr. Thierbach has won many warm friends among retail grocers by long years of fair treatment in supplying them with coffees.

CONTEMPTIBLE LYING.

Flour Salesmen of Oakland Seek to Weaken Grocers' Stand.

The salesmen for the flour mills that refuse to protect their customers from the cutters are trying to arouse discontent among the retail grocers of Alameda county by telling them that the Globe Mills is selling their "A 1" flour to Sallinger Bros.' department store under the Sallinger private brand for 30 cents a barrel less than they charge the trade for "A 1" flour.

A leading grocer reported to the Advocate that he called one of these salesmen down very hard, telling him that the Sallinger flour was not "A 1," but was sold in open competition to match a sample offered. He also told the drummer that his mill any any other mill would jump at the chance to get the contract if the Globe Mills did not have it.

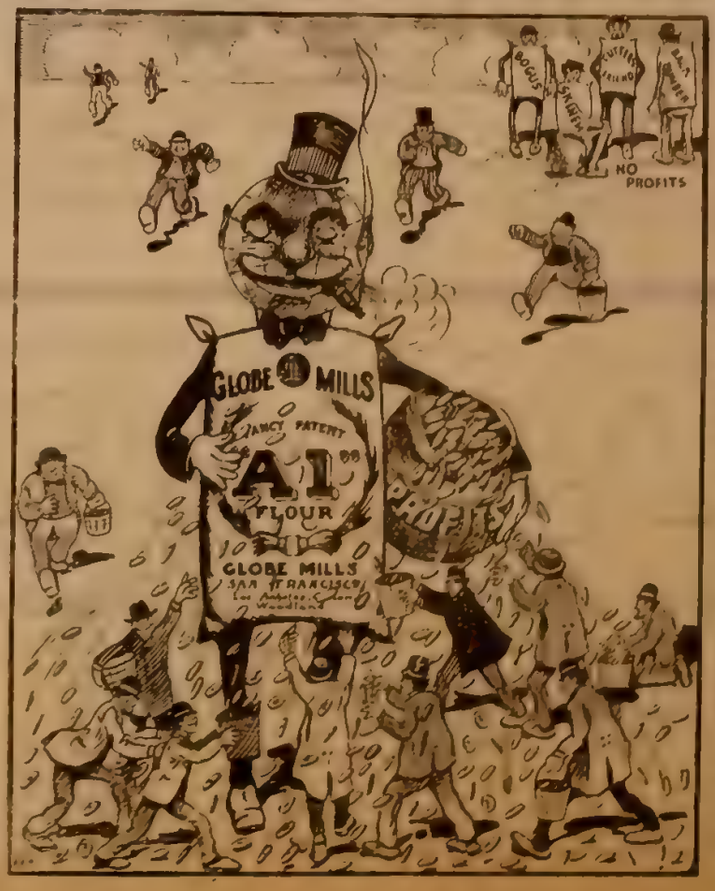
No one is allowed to cut the price of "A 1" flour or any other brand of the Globe Mills.

The Standard Milling Co. will not allow the price of its "Summit Snow" flour to be cut.

The mills that refuse to protect their customers from the unfair competition of the cutters are:

Sperry Milling Co.
Stockton Milling Co.
Port Costa Milling Co.

SAN FRANCISCO WORKING.



The San Francisco Retail Grocers, through their president, J. Salomon, have written to their legislative representatives in both the Assembly and the Senate reminding them of the necessity for the laws asked for by the retail merchants. Mr. Salomon has been very active in seeing that no legislator was left in doubt as to what the retail grocers of San Francisco want or the justice of their claims. His action will do much towards helping the State Grocers' Association secure favorable consideration for their laws.

American Milling Co.
Del Monte Milling Co.

In speaking of the situation in San Francisco, the "North West Trade" of Spokane says:

"The retail grocers of San Francisco, and California can show their approval of the latter (the Globe and Standard Mills) by pushing the sale of the goods of those manufacturers who stand by them and selling no more of the products of the others than is absolutely necessary. United action along this line alone will convince those four mills that the grocers are in earnest and will win from them the desired response."

We produce herewith a cartoon showing the flour situation as it stands, to date.

AN IMPORTANT WEEK.

Much Progress Made at the Legislature With Merchants' Measures.

The week ending January 28th, was a very important one for the retail grocers of California.

Keane's Anti-Premium and Anti-Trading Stamp and Anti-Premium bill was reported favorably by the Judiciary Committee of the Assembly. Many merchants have appealed to their representatives to favor this measure and a strong feeling exists that it should become a law.

If the retail merchants who have not written their representatives yet, would do so at once, they will practically insure its passage.

This measure will not only relieve the retail merchants of the State from the necessity of giving trading stamps, but will also save them the necessity of selling to their customers chances for prizes that they may never get together with their sales of flour, mush, etc.

Wife's Separate Property.

The bill making the separate property of the wife responsible with that of the husband for the necessaries of life, came up in the Assembly when only 59 members were present. Thirty-eight votes were cast in favor of it and 21 against it. It requires 41 votes to secure the passage of a measure. We lacked three votes of having enough to secure the passage of the bill. It was brought up at an unfortunate time as at least half of the absent members favor it.

Fortunately Mr. Cushing, acting secretary of the State Association, was on the ground. When he explained the situation to those members who had voted against the bill, unanimous consent was given to its reconsideration.

When the bill comes up again, it will have been amended to meet the objections of those who voted against it. The amendments will provide that the property controlled by the wife previous to the marriage and that which may be willed her after marriage shall be exempt from the provisions of the measure.

State of Limitations.

Several important interests are unfriendly to the extension of the Statute of Limitations. Some of the lawyers in the legislature are opposed to extending the Statute of Limitations and some of them would like to make it even more difficult than it is now for the creditor to collect his bills. These men are very few, however. The great majority want to deal fairly by retail merchants.

Upon the advice of friends of the grocers in both houses the efforts of the State Association will probably be directed to securing an amendment to the present law so that the Statute of Limitations will begin to operate from the date of the last item on the bill. This will be a considerable relief since at the present time the bill for each item begins to outlaw as soon as the article is bought and a payment does not renew the bill.

The object of the proposed amendment will be to keep a bill alive from the date of the last transaction. If within two years of the time the bill is contracted, the creditor can secure a payment on the bill, no matter how small; this payment will be the last transaction and the life of the account

FRIENDLY LEGISLATORS.

A Review of the Men Who are Helping the Measures Merchants Want.

Some of the members of the legislature of 1905 seem to consider the merchants of the State as a band of robbers seeking to secure a dishonest advantage of the general public.

Most of the Senators and Assemblymen realize that the retail merchants of the State make up its best and most conservative citizens. They realize that these men could not afford to ask for unfair legislation and would oppose them if bad bills were introduced.

The merchants of California are asking for nothing that has not been approved by the best business and legal brains of the older and more conservative States.

Among the men who have helped them in their attempts to correct injustices that now oppress the merchant class of California are the following:

Some Senatorial Friends.

Hon. Edw. I. Wolfe, of San Francisco, has voted for the measures to relieve the merchants from unjust laws, and has also used his influence with his fellow senators to show them the wisdom of doing likewise. The merchants of San Francisco should appreciate the friendship of Mr. Wolfe and, should the occasion ever arise, they will unquestionably support him loyaly.

Hon. A. E. Muenter, of Stockton, is showing his ability and friendship for the retail merchants and for every just measure that comes before the Senate. The merchants of Stockton have a valuable representative in Mr. Muenter and will stand by him under all circumstances.

Hon. Geo. B. Keane is the special champion of the anti-trading stamp and anti-premium bill. He succeeded in getting a unanimous vote in its favor at the hands of the Senate Judiciary Committee. He will number thousands of merchants as his friends because of the whole-hearted help he has given in advancing the passage of this measure. This one bill means a greater relief to the retail merchants of San Francisco than any other measure before the legislature.

Hon. Charles M. Shortridge, of San Jose, has always supported the measures introduced in behalf of the retail merchan's. The Santa Clara county merchants appreciate this and will no doubt reciprocate when the occasion presents itself.

Hon. John N. Anderson, of Santa Ana, has given the proper consideration to the measures desired by the merchants.

Hon. Howard A. Broughton, of Pomona, is in close touch with the business men of his community. He knows the changes that should be made for their protection and has given favorable consideration to our measures since he knows they would help protect the merchant against dishonest cattle and work no injustice upon the honest citizen.

Hon. Benjamin W. Hahn, of Pasadena, has been one of the most loyal supporters of all measures that would tend toward relieving the burdens of the retail merchant. He introduced the mutual fire insurance bill in the Senate two years ago and secured its passage in that house by a good majority.

Senate Judiciary Committee.

The entire Judiciary Committee of the Senate, while not approving all the bills presented in behalf of the merchants, have shown that they are fair minded men.

They have unanimously recommended the passage of the anti-premium and anti-trading stamp bill. If the support of the following Senators will be sufficient to pass the bill, it will surely pass:

Judiciary Committee—Lukens (chairman, Selvage Shortridge, Ward, Wolfe, Savage, Pendleton, Hahn, Muenter, Carter, Bauer, Simpson, Broughton, Irish Anderson, Wright, Keane, Mattos, Curtin and Emmons.

The following Senators have also assisted us in our movement to secure the passage of the anti-premium bill:

Hon. Hamilton A. Bauer, San Francisco.
Hon. H. E. Carter, of Los Angeles.
Hon. J. B. Curtin, Sonora.
Hon. John B. Irish, Downieville.
Hon. G. R. Lukens, Oakland.
Hon. J. G Mattos, Jr., Centerville.
Hon. C. W. Pendleton, Los Angeles.
Hon. Wm. H. Savage, San Pedro.
Hon. Thos. Selvage, Eureka.
Hon. M. W. Simpson, Alameda.
Hon. M. L. Ward, San Diego.
Hon. Eli Wright, of San Jose.

Assistance in the Assembly.

The "lower house" numbers many warm friends of the merchants' measures among its members.

Hon. J. A. Goodrich, of Pasadena, has always been a loyal supporter of all measures that would relieve the merchants of a burden. He was the champion of the mutual fire insurance bill, which passed the lower house two years ago by such a large majority.

Hon. George A. McGowan, of San Francisco, has been a loyal supporter of all measures tending to give the merchants better collection laws, etc.

Hon. Nathan C. Coghlan has shown his friendship for the merchants by introducing the anti-premium and anti-trading stamp bill in the Assembly. If the efforts of Mr. Coghlan can secure this measure, it will pass as he is a tireless worker and a favorite among his fellow assemblymen.

Hon. Gus Hartman, of San Francisco, has always shown due consideration for the merchants' desires and is one of the most influential members of the Assembly. The merchants can always count on his loyalty as long as their requests are right, since Mr. Hartman, through a life-long business experience, has learned what merchants need.

Hon. R. S. Beardslee, of Stockton, is a new member of the Legislature. He has however, the natutal tact and instinct of a successful lawmaker and the merchants of the entire state should feel proud of the way he has handled measures trusted to his charge.

Hon. J. P. Transue, of Los Angeles, has given favorable support to those measures introduced by the merchants both at this session and the session of 1903. The merchants of Los Angeles have a valuable man representing them, and need not fear of adverse legislation as long as he can prevent it.

Hon. Frank C. Prescott, of Redlands, has won high standing both among his confreres in the Assembly and his constituents as a considerate gentleman and a conservative and careful legislator. He has always shown every consideration for the needs and desires of the merchant class. He always assures himself of the justice of a measure and when he is convinced that it deserves favorable action he is a tireless worker in its behalf.

Supported Merchants' Measure.

The following Assemblymen were supporters of the Beardslee bill, No. 152, relating to the wife's separate property being held for debts for necessaries of life:

Hon. E. R. Amerige, Fullerton.
Hon. Marc Anthony, San Francisco.
Hon. Thomas E. Atkinson, San Francisco.
Hon. John A. Bliss, Oakland.
Hon. John J. Burke, Oakland.
Hon. Charles O. Busick, Sacramento.
Hon. F. A. Cromwell, Petaluma.
Hon. Harry Ellis, Stege.
Hon. R. H. E Espey, Oakland.
Hon. H. S. Gans, Red Bluff.
Hon. Dr. W. F. Gates, Oroville.
Hon Warren M. John, San Luis Obispo.
Hon. C. V. Jones, Sonora.
Hon. P. S. King, Napa.
Hon. Aubrey M. Lumley, Porterville.
Hon. Edward J. Lynch, Walsh Building.
Hon. E. T. Manwell, Wheatland.
Hon. H. S. McCartney, Los Angeles.
Hon. C. H McKenney, Ione.
Hon. Fred J. Meincke, San Francisco.
Hon. Fayette Michelitree, Palo Alto.
Hon. J. W. Moore, Undine.
Hon. Frank J. O'Brien, Sacramento.
Hon. S. H. Olmstead, San Rafael.
Hon. Eugene E. Pfaeffle, San Francisco.
Hon. John F. Pryor, Hanford.
Hon. E. M. Pyle, Santa Barbara.
Hon. Philip A. Stanton, Los Angeles.
Hon. Louis Strohl, San Francisco.
Hon. H. L. Tripp, Santa Rosa.
Hon. William H. Waste, Berkeley.
Hon. W. H. Wickersham, San Pedro.

It is to be noted that nearly all members of the Assembly were absent when the vote was taken, and among the absentees were a number of our friends. As we asked only three votes of having enough to carry the measure on its first vote, we look for success when the vote is reconsidered.

EARN THEIR CONFIDENCE.

The First Requisite of Securing a Permanent Clientele of Profit-Paying Customers.

The retail dealer who is going to make a real success of his business must have the confidence of his customers.

The store that seeks business by advertising cut rates and selling trashy goods, never knows how much trade it really has. The trade comes and goes. Their trade belongs to no one and like every other favor that has to be purchased, the trade of the cutter is shifted without compunction to the bidder who offers the lowest prices.

The only dependable line of business is that which is won by quality. There are three requisites in securing this "quality" success. First. The goods sold must be what they are represented to be. Second. The retail dealer must believe this. Third. He must be able to make his customers believe it.

The most effective way open to the dealer of convincing his customers that he believes in the honesty of the quality of his goods, is offering "money back."

"Money Back" means repayment, unquestionably, when the customer is dissatisfied.

This policy costs very little when the enormous effect that it has in winning the confidence of the customer is considered. It convinces the customer that the dealer is honest with them. Feeling that he is honest with them, they will be honest with him. Not once in a thousand sales will the dealer be imposed upon if he sells the right goods in the right way.

Another great advantage of this policy is that it enables the dealer to do business on profitable lines. The remembrance of satisfaction holds customers and makes them desire to continue trading with a particular store when they know that they are sure of getting what they want there. This means that such dealers will be able to sell with a fair margin of profit without having his customers object.

There should be no question about what this term "profit" means. If it costs a dealer 10 per cent to run his business and he sells something that costs him $1 for $1.10, he has not made a profit of 10c. He has really netted a loss of 1c, since 10 per cent of the $1.10 sale is 11c, which represents the cost of handling those particular goods. The dealer should have a margin sufficient to pay his expenses and have at least 10 per cent besides. He will then be earning fair wages for himself and will secure the adequate return for his investment and the risk he incurs to which he is entitled.

A splendid example of the effectiveness of the "money back" principle is shown in the success of "Schilling's Best." Through the slogan of "money back," these goods have won the confidence of the public so that they not only are glad to get them, feeling they are getting the best, but they are willing to pay the retail selling price fixed by A. Schilling & Co., which leaves a margin such as we describe which enables the dealer to pay his expenses and still have a considerable profit remaining.

The Advocate hopes to see the day when other manufacturers will follow the policy of A. Schilling & Co. in rehabilitating the establishment of retail selling prices on a fair basis so that it will be the rule to get profits instead of the exception.

AN IMPORTANT WEEK.

will be extended two years from that payment.

This amendment will be a great improvement over the law as it stands at the present although it will not give the retail merchants of California the protection that is given to the retail merchants in every State except Virginia. In Texas and Florida while all other unwritten contracts outlaw in two years, book accounts live for four years.

The management of the Association has secured valuable information in that they now know the interests that are opposed to their measures. With this knowledge, they should be able to place these measures before the next legislature in such a shape that they will receive favorable action.

Mutual Fire Insurance.

The proposed Mutual Fire Insurance bill was drawn very carefully by the attorney for the State Grocers' Association. It is far superior to anything that has been produced previously since it corrects certain omissions and oversights in bills of the past. This measure will be introduced, although the influence of the organization will probably be spent in letting the members of the legislature understand that they are in earnest in desiring it and are not pushing it merely because other matters of immediate value require their close attention.

Ask for What You Want.

The only way they can know what their constituents want is by having their constituents write them and tell them. They are glad to hear from their constituents even though they may not know them personally, since the information they can secure directly, is the best proof to them of how they can be useful to their district.

It makes no difference whether you know your representatives or not you should write them.

Dangerous Measures.

Numerous letters arrived in Sacramento at the request of Mr. Paulding protesting against Senator Wright's bills Nos. 250 and 276.

The Wright bill No. 250 would prevent a creditor from levying an attachment unless he could show some element of fraud on the part of the debtor. This would absolutely prevent attachment in the great majority of cases.

Wright's bill No. 276 would prevent any attachment issued for indebtedness for less than $25.

Both of these measures are very dangerous, and if the retail merchants do not write to their representatives at Sacramento protesting against them they have themselves to blame if they have to suffer in consequence.

Will Injure Many.

Cleveland's bill No. 369 would prevent all grocers and general merchandise dealers of the State from selling a bottle of castor oil or a box of quinine pills or any other medicine without a physician's prescription. This would not only seriously interfere with the business of the general merchants of the State but it would also work a gross injustice upon those people who are at a distance from drug stores.

There is another specially vicious measure introduced by physicians and druggists. It is Senate bill No. 360 and No. 517 in the Assembly. This bill, if it should become a law, would require that no drug of any sort should be sold except by a registered druggist. It would work a great harm against the general merchants of California, since it would absolutely forbid their selling any patent medicines or other proprietary drugs.

Senator Lukens has introduced bill No. 367 which, while it provides that all druggists must be registered pharmacists, and all medicines shall be sold only on prescriptions, provides also that medicines in original packages, sold by general merchandise dealers shall be exempt from these provisions. We would therefore suggest that when writing, the retail grocers should mention Senate bill No. 367 favorably.

Must Act at Once.

Immediate action must be taken in these matters.

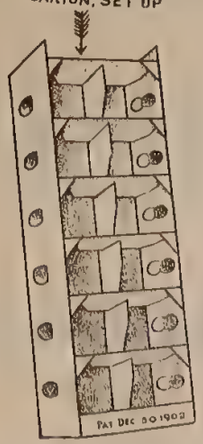
The legislative work is progressing rapidly and all those bills may come up for definite action any date. Every merchant in the State owes it to himself to let his representatives at Sacramento know what measures he is interested in and what measures he is opposed to.

The State Grocer's Association, speaking for all grocers, is writing the members of the legislature. This carries weight, of course, but a letter from his own constituents always carries much more weight with a member of the legislature than anything else.

Write and write to-day.

ROCHDALE RESULTS.

The Napa Rochdale store, after paying 7 per cent interest to its stockholders, was able to pay a rebate of 3 per cent on purchases made at the store during 1904.



As many stores give out rebate checks calling for from 2½ to 5 per cent on cash sales, and count it a desirable advertising investment, it looks to a disinterested observer as if the Napa Rochdalers were paying for the privilege of hiring a man to run a store in apposition to the established merchants.

THE VALUE OF TIME WASTED.

Probably the most expensive item in the retail grocery store is the time wasted in keeping books. The time so spent could be used in many ways that would build up trade and make money.

There is no longer any excuse for this drain upon the grocer's time for the Perfection Short Credit System provides a method of keeping accounts that saves everything that can be saved, including temper and customer. So say San Francisco dealers.

COMPLAINT DEPARTMENT.

Grocers are invited to send to this office complaints of abuses that they suffer from. We will see that the matter is referred to the proper sources for correction. Among the abuses to be considered are:

1. Cutting of listed goods.
2. Selling to consumers by jobbers, c.
3. Short weights and short measures.
4. Any abuse which united effort might abate.

ADDRESS
RETAIL GROCERS' ADVOCATE

Note—The 'S. F. Retail Grocers' have a Grievance Committee of which Chas Suss is Chairman to attend to local complaints.

GOOD SENSE TRIUMPHS.

Washington Grocers Abide by Organization That Guards Their Profits.

A few months ago the "Fair," a department store of Bellingham, Wash., selling groceries, withdrew from the Whatcom County Grocers' Association and began cutting prices. The Jobbing trade of Washington did not approve of the "Fair's" policy. They deemed it hurtful to their customers and, to that extent, to themselves. They therefore refused to supply the "Fair."

The "Fair" soon found it profitable to return to the association.

A short time since, the Advocate received the following letter:

My Dear Sir: You are hereby notified that the following firms doing business in this city have by the deliberate cutting of prices in staple articles, so demoralized business in this section that our association has been obliged to declare them unfair and we ask your co-operation in bringing them into line again.

The Fair Store.
Barry's Cash Grocery.
Henry George.

The circular letter goes into the hands of every member, jobber and commission merchant on the Pacific Coast, as well as to the local associations.

We trust you will see the advantage in taking a decided stand with us and notify us immediately the position you will occupy in the matter.

Thanking you in advance for your co-operation, we are, yours fraternally,
Whatcom Co. Grocers' Ass'n.

We are pleased to be able to report the receipt of the following note:

Bellingham, Wash., Jan. 24, 1905.

Dear Sir: It is with pleasure that we notify you that Henry George and Barry's Cash Grocery of this city have come into line and have been voted upon the "fair" list by this association. Please govern yourselves accordingly. Yours very truly,
Whatcom Co. Grocers' Ass'n.

Once you get your customers to saying "We want Bayle's" you can introduce to their notice the great variety of Bayle's Food Products and create a demand for them all. The name on the label is the guarantee after one has been tried.

TRADE IN VINEGAR.

Quality Required to Insure Continued Satisfaction to the Customer.

It is well worth the retail grocer's while to cultivate a trade in pure vinegar.

The recollection of quality remains long after the price is forgotten. It will pay the dealer to induce a customer to take a pure vinegar at a fair price, for this reason if for no other.

Such vinegars always pay the dealer a fair profit. They also insure that the customer will come back again and insist upon getting the same grade of goods.

On no article is there more adulteration that on vinegar. This can be readily understood since the prices range from 8 cents to 40 cents per gallon.

We have pure food laws which, if enforced, would require that the dealer be very careful as to the standing of the firm from which he buys. A large portion of the so-called Eastern vinegar sold on the Pacific Coast market is manufactured in California. Much of it contains adulteration that is absolutely injurious to health. The dealer who carries these goods in stock not only works a wrong to his customers, but jeopardizes his own safety should the Board of Health undertake the enforcement of the pure food laws.

An Interesting Offer.

This gives an added interest to the special offer made by the Pacific Vinegar and Pickle Works on page two of the cover. This firm has the largest vinegar and pickle works in the West. They absolutely guarantee the purity of their vinegar, the guarantee being that their goods more than comply with the requirements of the pure food laws of any State.

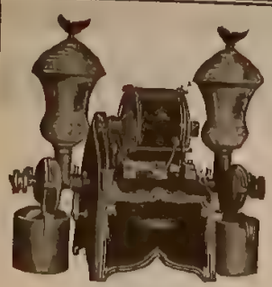
Their facilities for turning out high class goods and the quality they produce are such that they are able to make the following offer:

If the dealer, after receiving their vinegar, does not find it better value at the price they quote than the vinegar of other producers at the prices quoted by those companies, the Pacific Vinegar and Pickle Works agrees to accept the other producers' prices or ANY price that the retail dealer may name for their vinegar.

Can Get Quantity Price.

It will be noted, too, that they offer the retail dealers an opportunity to buy as they may need the goods and still receive the quantity discount. The dealer who can use ten barrels of vinegar in a year can take this vinegar one barrel at a time and receive a rebate of two cents per gallon, provided he takes the ten barrels in the space of twelve months. The rebate of one cent per gallon is allowed to those dealers who will purchase five barrels during the year.

A special offer is made to the readers of the Advocate during the month of February. This offer is to prepay the freight on the first shipment that may be called for on contracts made before March 1st, whether that shipment be for one or ten bbls.



There is no reason why a careful dealer should not make use of his vinegar as an advertisement for his store.

It will be necessary for him to call the attention of his trade to the vinegar in the beginning and to the uses to which it can be put. In this way he can secure the first order. He will find that the quality of the goods will do the rest and that most of the customers for his high grade vinegar will help him sell more of it to their friends and neighbors to whom they will recommend it.

The Advocate would advise its subscribers to communicate with the Pacific Coast Vinegar & Pickle Works, cutting out the blank in their advertisement on page 2 of the cover and secure definite information as to prices, terms, etc.

WASH-DAY WINDOW.

Simple and Attractive Means of Drawing Business.

Wash day is always an interesting event for the housewife not one of pleasure, but of necessity. Frequently she runs out of materials and forgets to supply them until the last moment, when there is a scurrying to the grocer for the various needful articles. As a consequence an appropriate "Monday Window" which should, by the way, always be displayed the Friday or Saturday before Monday, as one of the important features of a window display is suggested.

How to Make Up the Display.

The window this week as suggested by the Modern Grocer, is made up of the articles necessary for Monday's washing. In the center place a wash tub, in which put a clothes wringer and washboard. Across the top of the window stretch a clothesline and in the center hang a sign, printed on a piece of paper with the words "Washday" attached to the line by clothespins. On either side suspend by strings the regulation made-up lengths of clothes lines.

On each side of the wash tub, in the form of a V, pile up packages of soap and starch, and down in front of each pile put pyramids of blueing, appropriately labeled with price tags.

On the floor of the window forming a semi-circle, arrange packages of gold dust or other preparations used to aid the washing of clothes.

The space within the V may be used for placing clothes lines, cakes of soap, bottles of blueing, etc. This can be made a most effective window with little trouble and will instantly appeal to every housewife.

WRIGHT IS WRONG.

One of the San Jose Senators Violently Antagonistic to the Retail Merchant Class.

Senator Wright of Santa Clara Co. made a bitter attack on the retail merchants of California before the Judiciary Committee of that body on Wednesday of last week.

It was when the bill allowing the extension of the Statute of Limitations came up.

Mr. Wright insisted that two years was long enough for any open account to live. He declared that if the merchant could not collect it in two years, he could not collect it in four years. He insisted that the retail merchants of California were not good business men when they allowed their bills to run for two years.

Acting State Secretary Paulding was forced to protest against the language in which he referred to the retail merchants as not being business men.

Senator Wright denounced the retail merchants of California as being selfish and unfair in asking for betterment of the present collection laws.

Although the entire merchant class of California thinks an open account should live more than two years and the legislators of every other State in the Union except Florida have declared that open accounts should live for from three to six years, Senator Wright is abusive in speaking of the merchants because he does not agree with them—nor with the other men of business we have already spoken of.

Senator Wright evidently feels that it is a crime for the retail merchants to try to collect bills. He has introduced one measure (S. B. No. 250) that would make it practically impossible to attach a man's debts since no attachment papers can be issued unless the creditor can show fraud is concerned.

He has introduced another measure (S. B. No. 275) which positively prohibits an attachment for a debt of less than $25.

The retail merchants of Santa Clara county will unquestionably remember the attitude taken by Mr. Wright in the future.

Mr. Wright forgets that he is in Sacramento to represent his constituents and to seek to secure for them the protection they may feel they need.

The splendid support given the measure asked for by the merchants by Senator Shortridge is in strong contrast to the action taken by Senator Wright. Mr. Shortridge has served his constituents well and is deserving of every consideration from them.

FROM THE FRONT.

California's Delegates to the National Convention Send Bulletins of Their Progress.

Winnemucca, Nev., Jan. 19th, 1905.

We are living swell. The commissary department is well supplied. It looks as if Connolly would weigh 300 pounds by the time we get back. We have a very pleasant party. Lots of snow.

Stulz, Warnke, Connolly & Wear.

Kearney, Neb., Jan. 21st, 1905.

Nevada is bad, but Wyoming is awful. We will be in Chicago tomorrow morning. F. B. Connolly.

CONNOLLY WRITES A POEM.

Chicago, Jan. 22d, 1905.

Retail Grocers' Advocate:

While the train sped through the snow
A suggestion came from Joe
That we drop a line to our friend, A. H. Powers.
Then Frank Connolly also spoke,
And Wear said, "That's no joke."
And this is how we wiled away the hours.

Ludwig Warnke said, "That's great,
We'll inform the Advocate
How we reached Chicago early Sunday morn.
And we had a time quite hot,
Thanks to Westerfeld and Lott,
And the Chicago grocers—kings they all were born."

There's Sullivan, Liddell and Kling,
Whose praises we all sing,
And several more whose names we do not know.
They took us all to dinner,
Bought fine wines and nothing thinner,
And now they're going to take us to a show.

Reached here 7:30 Sunday morning and went to the Great Northern Hotel, where a bath and breakfast were very welcome. A committee of Chicago grocers, including Messrs. Lott, Newland, Tebbets and Westerfeld, then took our party in charge and we were their guests for the rest of the day. We lunched on the ninth floor of the Pullman building and later went to Lincoln Park, where we took in the toboggan slide.

After dinner we spent an evening at the old Iroquois Theatre as the guests of the Chicago grocers.

Quite a number of grocers are in town who leave with us tomorrow on the "Grocers' Special."

We saw Mr. Hayes for a while this morning. He returned to his relatives later. Frank B. Connolly.

Chicago, Jan. 23rd, 1 a. m.

Our party, the "Jolly Four," practically owned the Pullman from the time we left Oakland until we arrived in Chicago. We found Mr. Lott had engaged headquarters for us at the Great Northern Hotel. After a pleasant day we were the guests of the Chicago grocers at a swell dinner at the Tiptopia.

Our day was spent most enjoyably in seeing the sights of which Chicago is the proudest. The toboggan slide interested us all, especially Mr. Stulz, who became an expert tobogganist.

There were fourteen at table at our dinner, which preceded an evening's entertainment at the Iroquois Theatre.

With best regards for yourself and the Advocate, which latter has many friends in Chicago. I am, as you know, sincerely yours. L. Warnke.

Chicago, Jan. 23rd, 1905, 10 a. m.

After thirty years, I again took a chance of sliding on the ice and was glad to find that I had not forgotten what it all meant. Our party expects to see that California is properly represented at the big convention in Cincinnati. Yours truly.

Jos. A. Stulz.

Cincinnati, Jan. 25th, 1905.

There were more than 100 grocers in a special train from Chicago to Cincinnati. We arrived at 9 o'clock Monday evening and were met by a brass band and escorted to our headquarters. The session of the National is very interesting and valuable. I will bring you full particulars later.

There was a very enjoyable smoker last night. Tonight we go to see "Ben Hur," as the guests of the Cincinnati grocers. There will be a banquet tomorrow night.

We crossed the Ohio river on the suspension bridge today. It was a remarkable and interesting trip. Tomorrow we visit the National Cash Register factory at Dayton.

There is considerable wire pulling.

Twenty Years Ago

the Helvetia Milk Condensing Co. of Highland, Ill., originated the process of preparing unsweetened condensed milk. Owing to its close resemblance to a rich, heavy cream, and in order to distinguish it from sweetened "condensed milk," they coined for this new product the trade name of . . . . . .

EVAPORATED CREAM.

OUR PET BRAND

(and any Brand bearing their Top Label)

has since become famous

In the meantime others have conceived the plan of taking but a small portion of water out of the milk, putting it up into larger cans and palming it off on the public as "Evaporated Cream," though it is far below the standard which deserves this name.

But consumers cannot always be fooled. They want "OUR PET" brand, which can be sold at a popular price, considering its high quality.

Be wise and follow the demand for a brand which shows this top label, the sign of perfect goods.

Cigars and Tobacco

There is scarcely anything, except the ordering of one to leave the store, that will drive a customer away from one's establishment so quickly as a show of indifference on the part of the man behind the counter.

I was waiting in a cigar store recently when a man came in and inquired of a clerk the price of his cigar moistening boxes.

"We have them for $1 and $1.50," replied the clerk.

"Let me look at one," said the man who had inquired the price, and the clerk, in an indifferent sort of way, said: "Which kind do you want to look at, the $1 or $1.50 kind?"

The prospective customer turned away with the remark that he would not look at any. Almost anyone would change his mind under similar circumstances.

The American people may be more or less cold-looded, says Tobacco, and may not care much for sentiment in business, but there are very few who forget the stores where they are treated cordially and where goods are shown as though it were a pleasure and not as though one was expected to purchase everything one looked at. There is no truer saying than that courtesy in business pays.

Study This Wisdom.

There are many young men behind cigar counters all over the land who waste more or less time and energy in longing for an opportunity to sell cigars on the road. To all such we commend the study of the following words of wisdom:

If you want to go on the road because you think it is an easy life—then don't.

If you think you would like it just because it is "a change"—then don't.

If you are going into it "just to see a little of the world"—then don't.

If you are going to try it for any reason except that you think it is a desirable career and one in which you can distinguish yourself—then don't.

Selling Goods.

For selling goods on the road is a very serious business. There is something more to it than writing down fat orders in a morocco-bound book and sending in a big expense account at the end of the week.

Ask the next traveling man you see if this is not true. There is lots of the hardest kind of work in it; lots of irregular eating and sleeping; lots of disappointment, and more discouragement in a week than you could extract from a clerk's position in an entire year.

And just because there are obstacles to be overcome it is a good career for the right man; the quitters soon get thinned out and try something else.

There is money in it—for the right man. And if you feel it in your bones that you could sell goods and have the grit to feel that way even after some human iceberg deliberately destroys your card before your eyes and walks away and leaves you when you strike him for an order may be you are the right man.

Emil Judell, who has been traveling in Nevada, has returned after an extended trip.

Harry Bercovich, cigar and tobacco dealer of San Jose, is putting in a new front in his store at the corner of First and Santa Clara streets. It will be a handsome place when finished.

Charles Mattheas of 1430 Market street is making a number of beneficial changes to the interior of his cigar and tobacco store. When completed it will admit of a better display of his goods.

Ehrman Bros, California street, report the state of trade excellent.

Mr. F. Cox, representing the above firm, is in the San Joaquin Valley and is forwarding orders rapidly.

Mr. I. Hess has just returned from a Sacramento Valley trip, coming in with a large number of sales on his book.

The Southern mines is being diligently looked after by B. Hess. Bower is very popular in this district, and it takes a hustling good salesman to keep up with him.

The tobacco and cigar merchants held a largely attended meeting Thursday evening in the Eagles' Hall at 731 Market Street. Ways and means were discussed to combat the attempt of the trust to monopolize the Coast territory. The meeting was enthusiastic, and the Independents are gradually assuming a position which will be very antagonistic to their enemy, the United Cigar Stores Co.

President Parry is working like a trojan and it will not be his fault if good results are not accomplished.

W. G. Rork of Louisville, Ky., is in this city and will remain about two months. Mr. Rork, who is vice-president and manager of sales of the H. N. Martin Co., will look after the latter's interest during his business sojourn. He will be located at the Coast office, 421 Market Street.

F. Jesse has opened a cigar store at Junction City, Oregon.

C. Atkinson has purchased E. J. McSherry's cigar store at Garfield.

What the association don't do, is a great traveler. It goes into the statement of every unscrupulous salesman, trade paper, obstructive grocer, etc. What the association does do, travels slowly, has to prove its identity and many members hesitate to give it credit.

YANKEE ENERGY.

Prominent Wholesaler Tells How He Climbed the Ladder of Wealth.

A prominent partner in a wholesale paper house in this city, being interrogated the other day as to how he began his successful climb up the ladder of wealth, said: "I was brought up in Maine—in a country town—and studied hard in an excellent school, thus laying a good foundation for the battle of life. At an early age I determined to go to Boston and take a clerkship in one of the large stores. I began my mercantile life at a store with a salary of four dollars a week.

"I worked very hard to learn the business. I didn't think much about the pay or the long hours. I only thought of mastering the details that would make me a competent salesman. After a while I mastered the situation. My salary was raised. And I then determined to go to New York.

Unceasing Persistency.

"Going into a city where the business methods are in some respect different from those of San Francisco, I decided to change my line of work and try paper business. I offered my services as a traveling salesman. The firm I applied to at first replied that it did not need any more help. I asked if the partners did not wish to increase their business, the manager decided to hire me; and I went out on the road with a Yankee persistency that finally prevailed in the selling of large bills of goods. I simply determined that, if a firm needed goods and must buy them of somebody, I would convince them that it would be to their advantage to buy them of me.

"The result of my unceasing persistency is that I am now partner in one of the biggest firms in the world, in its line and bull-dog persistency, with honesty and Yankee energy, was what accomplished it."

STANDS AT THE HEAD.

Have you noticed that there is very little dead stock on the live grocer's shelves? The day has passed when the salesman can get his business on a personal jolly. The grocer has to be shown and buys goods of merit and those that give a profit. That Wedding Breakfast Coffee has merit and enjoys the confidence of the grocer is demonstrated by the yearly increased output of that well known brand of coffee. For sixteen years it has steadily and strongly grown in demand until to-day it stands at the head of its class of popular priced coffee. Its merit being in its rare fragrance and rich flavor surpassing many higher priced coffees. Quality is the first requisite, in fact the first and last, as it produces the much wanted result—selling properties. The grocers judge articles by their sales that's business.

FACTS.

Many large manufacturers have made millions on the profits you should have received. They made a profit over and above the cost of marketing. You lost on trying to supply the demand for them. We will tell you some of them in our next issue. Send us 60c.

THE GROCER'S FAILING.

His goods are of the latest, and their quality the straightest, and his trade is quite as booming as any merchant in the land;

Very few can touch his prices of coffee, teas or spices, and his sugar it is guiltless of a single grain of sand;

He is spry enough and clever, and he makes a strong endeavor to anticipate his customers with agility and dash,

But his nature is too trusting, and he's on the point of busting, for he always gets the credit and too seldom gets the cash.

MANUFACTURERS' DUTY.

The manufacturer is the only party who has a right to enforce the maintenance of a retail price by law. Every manufacturer who expects a retailer to have a permanent interest in his goods should see that a proper profit goes with the sale of them. Many a retailer has bought large quantities of goods owing to strong advertising by a manufacturer, expecting to make a good profit on them, only to find himself confronting cut prices by some unscrupulous dealer who has taken advantage of the advertising done by the manufacturer, and is forced to unload at or near cost. We believe that under such conditions any retailer is justified in discontinuing the sale of such goods unless the manufacturer stops such practice on the part of the cutter.

SUGAR.

Jobbers are still selling at net cost price, although the active warfare anticipated on the arrival of the sugar of the Honolulu Plantation company has not materialized. Sugar is considerably lower here than in the eastern markets. It should be higher here, cost of raws being considered. The street is still guessing as to what the ultimate result will be.

COFFEE.

Lewin-Meyer Co. say:

"Two drops of 1-8 cent each on spot coffees in the New York market have put a damper on local business. Central American coffees, though in large supply, have been selling freely at full prices. The decline in New York has diminished the trading materially, as the large buyers are waiting to see what the ultimate outcome will be."

TEAS.

M. J. Brandenstein & Co. say:

"The market is very quiet locally and there have been no changes in price. The Japanese market is now closed. The 1904 crop fell short of that of 1903 by about 2,500,000 pounds. The prices at the end of the season were about 3 cents higher than the earlier prices.

"There is a large stock of Pingsuey teas in the Shanghai market. They are dangerous buys for American merchants, however, as they are nearly all below the government standard and would be likely to be excluded. Choice medium to high grade pin heads are exceptionally scarce. Prices for these are from 2 to 4 cents above the average. There are practically no Congous left in the Orient although stocks in America are probably ample for all needs."

RICE.

M. Phillips & Co. report:

"The market has at last taken a change and has advanced on Japans within the last week 3-16 to 1-4. Mills in the south have all advanced their prices to this extent and a further advance is looked for, as there was heavier buying for the month of January than in any previous month in the history of the rice industry. We have predicted since the first of December that there would be a substantial advance in the near future, as rice was selling below the cost of production, and we look for a further advance within the next thirty days on Japans.

"Prices on Fancy Honduras have gradually advanced and there has been an advance since the first of the season, that is, the first of October, 1904, an advance of over 1-2c, and we predict that on these grades the market will even go higher, as they are very scarce and fancy goods are hard to obtain.

"Medium Honduras and Screenings have advanced 1-8 and will go higher in sympathy with other grades.

"Imported Japan Rice—Small shipments have arrived here, but there is very little call for same as the Domestic Japan rice is as good, if not superior, and the trade has at last realized that it is nonsensical to pay from 1 cent to 1 1-4 cent a pounds higher for the imported article when the Domestic rice is equal in quality.

"China Rice—No. 2 has advanced to $4.35 and No. 1 has also advanced about 1-4c with a further advance looked for, owing to the high rate of exchange.

"Those who buy rice on today's market, of any description, will make good money on their investment."

DRIED FRUITS.

Dried peaches and dried apricots are decidedly scarce. In other respects the market is very quiet.

Raisins are only being bought from hand to mouth even when offered at a sacrifice. The unsettled condition of the growers arrangements' is largely liable for this condition, which is intensified by large offerings of goods that have been rain-damaged.

Prunes are in about the same condition as raisins.

CANNED GOODS.

All stocks of canned fruits are pretty well cleaned up. The pack of 1905 will find the market in a very favorable condition.

Solid pack tomatoes are good property. The association has withdrawn prices on solid pack 2 1-2 cents and its 2 1-2 solid pack tomatoes with peppers. Standard goods are plentiful.

Asparagus is still an interesting problem. The Hicknott fields are still under water and will probably produce nothing. The floods of this year consequent upon the heavy rains may decrease the possible 1905 pack. At any rate, asparagus is good property and there will not be enough to supply the demand.

Canned corn is in large supply and is weak.

Gallon peas are practically off the market. High grade peas are very good property.

CANNED SALMON.

The market is unchanged and dull.

The Alaska Packers' Association has decided to increase its capital stock from $5,000,000 to $7,500,000 and to create a bonded indebtedness of $2,000,000.

SPICES, ETC.

A correspondent of the Philadelphia "Grocery World" writes.

Pepper—Stocks of Singapore and Lampong pepper are certainly small. No crop news of value obtainable at this time. This also applies to tillichery and white pepper.

Cloves—Very much unsettled; fair demand: It is impossible to predict the outcome, but it is safe to say that the article has reached bottom, and higher prices will be asked.

Nutmegs—A firmer market in effect. The article is more active and, as recently predicted, higher prices should be realized. Foreign market is higher than here.

Caraway Seed—Market firmer and higher prices are in effect today. It is reasonable to expect still higher values.

Gum Camphor—Firm, with prices tending higher. It is likely that the market value will reach the high price in effect during the early months of 1904.

Saltpetre—Market firm, crude stock being scarce and held at high values.

BEANS AND PEAS.

No change worthy of mention, although an advance was expected long before now. There is plenty of stock on hand fully equal to the requirements. The demand is fair. It is somewhat difficult to quote the market, owing to the unsatisfactory condition of some of the grades. In the local market California Lime Beans is listed at $4.40, while the eastern market reports indicate that they are holding their own in an excellent manner.

CHEESE.

Wieland Bros. say:

"California flats and Young Americas are doing a trifle better just at present, but nevertheless we look for lower prices in the near future. Limburger is fully 1 cent higher in price, with no prospect of a decline before the end of May."

PROVISIONS.

The Cudahy Packing Company reports:

"Local market is firm and unchanged, but it is not likely to remain this way long, as a change is looked for which will better the conditions materially."

HAY.

Somers & Co. report:

"There is no activity whatever. Quite a bit is being double compressed for export trade. This fact prevents a still weaker market, as there is plenty of green feed and many who feared to dispose of their holdings are now

PROTECTING THE RETAILERS.

E. A. Stuart Tells Why Carnation Cream Has Succeeded.

"Next to the quality of the goods, I think that the efforts made by our company to protect the retail dealer in his profits has been the most prominent cause for the splendid success that has been achieved by Carnation Cream," said E. A. Stuart, president and general manager of the Pacific Coast Condensed Milk Co., this week.

Mr. Stuart has spent the last fortnight in California studying the conditions of trade here and expressed himself as being much pleased with the way Carnation Cream is moving.

"I find both the retail trade and the wholesale trade are very friendly towards Carnation Cream wherever it has been introduced," he said. "I have just returned from a trip through Southern California. Both the retail grocery trade and the wholesalers appreciate our efforts to make Carnation a profit-getter. Both branches of the trade are pushing our goods. Mr. Baxter, secretary of the Southen California Grocers' Association, assures me that the retail dealers realize that they are indebted to us for the efforts we have made in their behalf and the record of our sales shows that they know a good thing and appreciate the efforts of a friend.

"I was pleased to find that Mr. Baxter was working very hard among his members to have them exert their influence in behalf of manufacturers who protect the dealers in their profits.

"The past year has been a very prosperous one for us. We have fought for the retailers' margin in every market where we have introduced Carnation Cream. As a result, our goods have grown stronger with the trade in every part of the Pacific Coast.

"I am pleased to say that the retailers appreciate our efforts in their behalf. No pains have been spared at the factory to advance the quality of the goods. New machinery and long experience have enabled us to improve upon our first production materially and the retail dealer gets the advantage of the extra satisfaction of the consuming public.

"I am satisfied that our rebate arrangement has done much toward lessening the cutting on canned creams. If we had given the trade special deals or reduced price without requiring the purchaser of our cream to keep the retail price at 10c per tin, I think the price of canned cream would be very generally 3 for 25c. That they are not, is due, I think, almost entirely to the action taken by our firm in making our rebate conditional upon the maintenance of a proper retail selling price.

"We have always sought to do everything in our power to protect the retailers in their profits. We think this policy is the only proper one for the manufacturer to adopt. While we have succeeded to a large extent in bettering conditions, I hope to do even better in the future. The retail grocery trade can rest assured that they can count on our support for anything that can be done for their benefit if it lies within our power."

REDWOOD MERCHANTS ACT.

Write Legislators About Needed Laws and Plan Further Organization.

An important meeting of the local Board of Trade was held Wednesday evening of last week, says the "Democrat." Legislative measures of interest to the commercial world were discussed and the members decided to use their influence to have passed the anti-trading stamp measure and amendments to the codes extending book accounts to four years and making a wife's separate property liable for debts contracted for necessaries of life while living with her husband. The wishes of the board will be expressed to Senator Rambo and Assemblyman Jury, who, no doubt will support these measures.

The board decided to further continue its connection with the California Retail Grocers' and Merchants' Association and to have printed, monthly, in the Merchants' Reporter a list of delinquent debtors. The Palo Alto and San Mateo boards contemplate following suit and will co-operate with the local board in the exchange of information which will enable every merchant throughout this territory to be fully advised as to the standing of all doubtful customers. The Merchants' Report is issued by the State Association and goes to every member of the organization and its constituent bodies throughout the entire state.

The Redwood board has been allotted the territory from Menlo Park to Belmont and will soon be one of the strongest boards in the State, outside of the large municipalities.

JOBBERS PROTECT PRICES.

A Wholesale Grocer Advises Retailers to Demand and Enforce Consideration.

J. A. Van Hoose, president of the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association delivered an address to the retail grocers of New Orleans recently in which he said that the retail grocers of Indianapolis and Minneapolis have gotten together and forced the wholesalers of those cities to fix a uniform standard of prices, both wholesale and retail, on staple commodities. The dealers agree among themselves not to patronize any jobber who does not live up to the agreement, and the wholesaler who is guilty of a violation is comparatively blacklisted. He advised the local retailers to stand together and compel the wholesalers here to adopt a similar system, and for them to enter into an agreement with the retailers' association to sell their goods according to a fixed scale of prices.

"Uniform prices enable the retailer to know exactly what goods are worth," continued the distinguished wholesaler, "but if every jobber is offering different prices the dealer does not know what the goods are really worth. There are a large number who are opposed to fixed prices, but if they would only realize what it means for them they would not oppose the system any longer."

PIM OLAS PLEASE.

When you offer a customer a stuffed olive you want to know that it is an article that will please. Pim Olas always fulfill this want. All a grocer has to do when he has them in stock is to put them in the show window and on the counter and watch them sell themselves.

PRICE PROTECTION MOVES.

Seattle Grocers Receive Results From Their Movement for Profits.

Numerous important manufacturers have written the Seattle, Wash., retail grocers expressing their desire to co-operate with grocers to prevent the cutting of retail selling prices.

Henry Abeles, Northwestern representative of the Cudahy company, was present at a recent meeting of the association, upon invitation. He discussed with the association the matter of establishing and maintaining a price on his firm's soap.

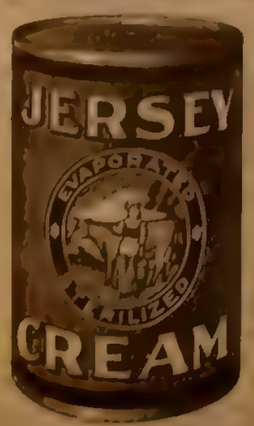
Three lines of action were suggested by Mr. Abeles and members present and practically agreed upon, in substance as follows:

(1) That the company withhold its rebates for periods of three and six months, respectively, in proportion to size of orders and rebates, and pay the same at end of these periods, only on the condition that the price has not been cut.

(2) That the purchaser be required to sign an agreement to deliver or sell back to the company, or such parties as it may name, such of its goods as are in stock, at the price paid at the time of purchase, provided, the price agreed upon is not maintained; and

(3) that where these measures are not effective and in view of the association procuring and furnishing satisfactory evidence, the company to prosecute the price cutters for damages to its business.

In consideration of this protection, the association is to give the products of said company the preference over other soaps not similarly protected.



Upon motion this matter was left in the hands of Mr. Abeles to frame up and submit to his company for its approval and then to be returned for approval by this association.

Mr. Abeles suggested that the position of the association be put in writing and mailed to him which suggestion was accepted and Secretary Cory instructed to do so.

How to Open a New Book.

If books were rightly treated when they are newly bound there would be less likelihood of their backs being broken afterward by rough handling. The covers should be opened one at a time and laid as far back as the table upon which the book is resting; then gradually all the leaves, a few at the back and a few at the front of the book, should be laid upon the covers. The book will then be in condition for ordinary wear, and the covers will not break away if not abused. When called suddenly away from a book which you are reading do not lay it face down on a table or throw a handkerchief between its leaves, but have a book marker handy.

His Father's Pride.

"Yes; but he has his reward. Just think how glad he must be to see how superior I am to him!"—San Francisco Examiner.

SEND YOUR BILLS TO SECRETARY

Any retail grocer on the Pacific Coast who has a bill against a party who has moved from his community can have same attended to by sending to J. F. Paulding, 456 Montgomery street. By sending such bills you gain two points. You stand a chance of having it collected, also a chance of warning a fellow grocer against a slow-pay customer.

WHO TO THANK.

The improved privileges that are enjoyed in many communities on the Coast are due to the heroic efforts and unstinted self-sacrifice and the splendid devotion of a few grocers who could ill afford to spare the time necessary to follow up matter forced in their charge.

Amusements

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

J. H. Stoddart's presentation of the "Bonnie Brier Bush" is one of the most thoroughly artistic and touching productions that have ever been presented to a San Francisco audience. The company is a strong one, the different parts being cast with excellent care. Reuben Fax, the posty, rouses many a laugh and the children of the play are little artists. The story is a beautiful one and it is notable that none of the women folks begin to adjust their wraps until after the fall of the last curtain.

Klaw & Erlanger's beautiful "Mother Goose" begins Monday with 350 people on the stage.

CALIFORNIA.

Empty seats have been the rule at this house where "A Little Outcast" has been presented by a third rate road company.

MAJESTIC THEATER.

A decided hit has been made by Landers Stevens as the "Mountebank" this week. The story of the play is one of real heart interest and the Majestic's players do full justice to the many opportunities given them for clever work.

ALCAZAR.

Crowded houses have been the rule this week at the Alcazar, where John Craig is playing the "Gay Lord Quex." He is ably supported by Miss Lawrence as the manicurist and Pinero's satire of the failings of English high life, while rather highly spiced for the young girls of the family, is thoroughly appreciated by San Francisco theater goers. Next week the funny farce "Are You a Mason" will be given first production by a stock company.

COLUMBIA.

Willie Collier is duplicating his old success in the "Dictator." The show is thoroughly staged in every respect, the company being carefully chosen.

CENTRAL.

In spite of the fact that the scenes of the "Prisoner of War" are laid in the center of the Japanese-Russian conflict the amount of blood shed is extremely limited. The melodrama is full of thrills, however, and introduces a number of remarkable and interesting scenic effects, including a battle of modern battleships in which the action of a submarine torpedo boat is shown. The wireless telegraphy is also brought into action and our Japanese neighbors receive due credit for their cleverness in war preparations. The Japanese colony has been well represented every night and were warm in their applause of Hershel Mayall, who won their admiration as a young Japanese officer.

TIVOLI.

Grand opera still crowds the Tivoli and our Italian citizens and the English speaking music lovers have shown their appreciation to the progressiveness of the management in employing artists of the first class by crowding the theater every night.

FISCHER'S.

A strong bill is drawing large crowds to this pretty O'Farrell street theater. The arrangement by which two performances are given each evening is appreciated by San Francisco theater goers, also the fact that at 9 o'clock they can see a good program for 10 or 20 cents.

CHUTES.

A decided hit is being made by Marie Sparrow, whose general appearance is hardly in keeping with her diminutive name.

The rest of the show is a strong one. This, with the many concessions and the splendid zoo unites in keeping up the popularity of this great pleasure ground.

OFFER SOMETHING BETTER.

Pointers on Building Up and Holding a Desirable Coffee Trade.

Some valuable ideas are offered to the retail grocery trade about the coffee business in a circular recently issued by Hill's Bros. It contains so much matter of interest that we print it in full. It is as follows:

It should be the aim of every grocer to build up and hold a coffee trade.

In a great many instances the grocer has been his own worst enemy; he has allowed the trade to drift away from him. It has either come down town or gone to the premium stores.

The premium stores only make a success by giving an ordinary article, charging from a third to a half more than it is worth and throwing in a present of crockery, tinware or some other jimcrack.

In twenty years of selling coffee in San Francisco our experience has been that the grocer who buys the best article he can get is the one who gradually gets the trade of the neighborhood. We can cite numerous instances of grocers who have started with ten or fifteen pounds of coffee per week and to have gradually built up a trade that now uses from ninety to one hundred and twenty-five pounds. We know whereof we speak, for we have supplied coffee to them from the start.

The grocer who buys a sack of cheap green coffee for ten or eleven cents per pound, has it roasted at four bits a sack, adds a little chickory to it and turns it out to his customers, flattering himself that his customer does not know the difference between the article he is giving him and a No. 1 coffee, is only fooling himself. The customer may buy once or twice of this kind of coffee, but not liking it, he drifts away. How many customers have you had in your experience who have tried coffee from you once and have never come back?

Our specialty is high grade coffee.

We have a large and well equipped plant, buy coffee in all the markets of the world, have all the modern, up-to-date machinery for handling roasted coffees, have a large and well drilled corps of experienced men who know their business, and we say and we can prove that we turn out the best coffee offered for sale in this city.

It stands to reason that a concern who devote their time to one article, must certainly excel in that line and be in a better position to give you value for your money than a concern whose interests are diversified and whose energy is scattered in different lines. We would be pleased to have you give our coffees a trial, and are confident that you will find our statements substantiated.

Take one or two of our high grade coffees, handle them for a month, watch the results closely, and you will find your trade increasing.

There is nothing as satisfactory to a grocer as a good coffe trade. Satisfy a customer in coffee and the other trade naturally follows.

REASON FOR PRICE CUTTING.

The man who sells well advertised goods at cut prices seldom does so for the purpose of increasing sale of same, but usually to draw trade to his store in order to sell something on which he makes a good margin of profit. He could not afford to do otherwise.

FROM THE FRONT.

The Ohio delegates, sixty-one strong, want Mr. Green for president. I find an almost unanimous sentiment in favor of Mr. Stulz among the delegates from the outside. It was remarkable to see the confidence that has been inspired in the eastern grocers by the quiet and business-like methods of our California leader.

It looks as if Niagara Falls would be the choice as the next convention city.

F. B. Connolly.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

The convention at Cincinnati was interesting and enthusiastic throughout and 300 delegates protested their loyalty to the organization again and again as the opportunities were offered.

The officers chosen were as follows:

President, John A. Green, Cleveland, Ohio.

Vice President, Lawrence F. Padberg, St. Louis, Mo.

Treasurer, Henry W. Schwab, Milwaukee, Wis.

Secretary, Fred Mason, St. Paul, Minn.

Director (three years), C. J. Kramer, Little Rock, Ark.

Niagara Falls was chosen for the convention in January, 1906.

President Farlinger delivered an able address. Among his suggestions were the following:

That ways and means be devised to raise sufficient sum to place the association on an independent financial basis.

That the organization help the manufacturers who have helped them by assisting in securing the passage of the National Pure Food Bill now pending in the Senate.

That the efforts of the association for the next year be directed entirely towards strengthening the local and state associations already organized and that the funds available for organization be divided pro rata among their various associations by the officers of the national.

That a uniform rating card be adopted and an interchangeable rating system be arranged for the benefit of the affiliating organizations.

Frank B. Connolly was made a member of the Committee on Credentials.

The entire country will be pleased with the selection of Niagara Falls for the convention of 1906, both because of the advantage which will accrue to the organization from having the convention in New York State, and because it will show the appreciation of the National Association for the splendid liberality of the Natural Food Co.

There were 2700 covers laid for the banquet. Secretary Fred Mason presided as toastmaster. There were nine tables the length of the hall, which is 225 by 137 feet.

A POWDERED STOVE POLISH.

Sixty thousand samples of X-Ray Stove Polish are being distributed through San Francisco by R. A. Holcomb & Co. This is a powdered stove polish that does not burn off and will not dry up and rust in the box. It is so far superior to the old stove polish that it has absolutely taken the market by storm wherever it is introduced and samples put into the hands of the housewife invariably result in future business.

Since there is no waste, a 5c package of X-Ray polish really costs less than two 5-cent tins of other pastes or liquid polishes.

Twenty thousand samples have already been distributed in San Francisco. Although only two weeks have been spent in its introduction, nearly 100 of the leading grocers of the city have the X-Ray Stove Polish in stock and appreciation of its quality has been so immediate that Mr. Holcomb has been forced to limit his sales to jobbers to barely sufficient to fill their actual needs until the arrival of another car, which is now en route.

The X-Ray Stove Polish is put up in two sizes. The 5-cent tins cost $1.50 per quarter gross and the 10-cent tins cost $2.50 per quarter gross.

As an inducement for the first order, a half dozen packages is given free with every quarter gross box of each size of X-Ray Stove Polish. It can readily be seen that the prices at which these goods are sold to the retailer leaves him a handsome margin of profit.

As soon as San Francisco has been sampled, the work will be extended to Oakland and other cities of the State.

Grocers Get Flour Profits.

Dealers in Bay Cities Selling Brands That They Handle to Advantage

MISLEADING STORIES EXPOSED

By J. F. Paulding, Secretary Pacific Coast Grocers' Association.

Reports received at the office show that the grocers of the bay cities are realizing more and more that if they are to secure a profit on their flour they must show their appreciation of the stand the Globe Grain & Milling Co. and the Standard Flour Co. have taken. We are also pleased to note that J. C. Westphal & Son of Oakland have listed the following brands:

"White Foam" and "Bay City" at $1.30 per sack.

The grocers of Alameda county should give every consideration to the Westphal people and give them the same support as they do to the other flours which are protected. Every sack of these flours they sell adds to their profits and brings nearer the day when they will get a profit on every sack of flour they handle.

Any grocer in Alameda county who handles flour at the present time without a profit, has only himself to blame, since the Globe Grain & Milling Co, Westphal & Son and Standard Flour Co., with their different brands of flour, enable them to satisfy the demands of every class of customers. By active help now, they make it an object for these mills to give them continued protection.

False and Misleading Stories.

There have been statements going round that there was personal feeling on my part in this matter. I desire to say that such is not the fact.

Speaking from a personal standpoint I wish to say that the managers of the Sperry, Port Costa, Stockton and American Milling Companies are as gentlemanly and pleasant as anyone would care to meet. I have no personal feeling in this matter. I would be very much pleased to have them give the grocers the profit to which I think they are entitled and thus enable me to advise the grocery trade to push the sale of their brands.

I would take as much pleasure in asking the grocers to push their goods as I now like in urging the grocers to push the brands that are being protected at the present time. By virtue of my office, I am compelled to request grocers to push the brands of flour on which the manufacturer has established the retail selling price and agrees to maintain it by cutting off cutters. My Board of Directors requires it and our by-laws require it and all the resolutions passed by the Pacific Coast Retail Grocers' Association and the affiliating organizations require it also.

I [illegible] herewith a copy of a card which was issued by the Sperry Milling Company of Los Angeles on January 6th. This is an exact duplicate of the original, which can be seen at this office at any time. It will be noted that they publish in this list the [illegible] as well as the retail [illegible] on their flour:

LATEST FROM SACRAMENTO.

(Special Telegram to the Advocate.)

Sacramento, Feb. 9.—Keane's Anti-Trading Stamp bill has been favorably reported by the committees of both houses. The trading stamp companies made a hard fight before the Assembly Committee and it took two hours of discussion to secure a recommendation that the bill pass.

Beardslee's bill to make the wife's separate property responsible for necessaries of life has passed the Assembly with only one unfavorable vote and is now in the Senate Committee.

Our last measure to have a payment renew an account and have the time of outlawing begin from the last item has been introduced by Mr. Muenter of Stockton in the Senate. It will be introduced in the Assembly today. J. F. PAULDING.

The merchants of the state should remember that such a legislative campaign as is being conducted by the California Retail Grocers' & Merchants' Association is quite expensive. We therefore suggest that any merchant who wants to help should send any amount he desires to Secretary Frank H Connolly, 456 Montgomery street, San Francisco, for the purpose of helping bear this expense. The money is giving out faster than it comes in and since this campaign is in behalf of the merchants, all should help the same.

That this meets the opinions of some of the Advocate's readers will be under [illegible] by a perusal of the following letter from E. Michelbacher of Riverside, which is one of many that have been received up to the present:

I herewith enclose you check for $2.00 to help in getting the bills through this session and hope it may prove the mascot and we get what we are after.

Down here we are getting a good soaking and if the good stuff keeps coming down we'll all wear diamonds and get "webfooted" but then we don't care as it is only about once in 15 years we get the pleasure of [illegible] diamonds outlook. Prospects are [illegible] for crops and business and hope "U ones" will share same with us.

Yours truly
E. MICHELBACHER

The Keane Anti-Trading Stamp, Anti-Coupon Bill has been passed to third reading in the Senate and is coming up in both Senate and Assembly this week.

The trading stamp people have a Frisco lawyer lobbying against the bill but we are working hard and expect to see it pass both houses by a good majority. If you have not written your representatives, do so.

Convention Lessons.

Vice-President Connolly Writes an Interesting Review of Outlook for the National.

Frank H Connolly vice-president of the "San Francisco Retail Grocers" and secretary of the "State Grocers' Association," returned last week from Cincinnati, where he had attended the Convention of the "National Grocers' Association" as delegate from San Francisco.

Mr. Connolly has in preparation a full report of the convention. He has sent to the Advocate a letter in which he expresses his views as to the outlook for the National.

Mr. Connolly thinks the National Association can be made of great use to the grocers of the entire country. He expresses himself as being disappointed at the results of the Cincinnati Convention or rather at the lack of results. This, he says, was due largely to the fact that there was no definite plan offered by the managers of the National for the discussion and arrangement of plans of national value and importance. The individual delegates coming together without previous [illegible] were not in position to present such plans nor would there have been time for the development of them had the program outlined been carried out.

Mr. Connolly is one of the thinking men in the grocery business. He is not satisfied with merely finding fault, but offers ideas as to what might be done to better conditions. We consider his letter a very valuable contribution to the literature of organization work among retail grocers.

It is as follows:

San Francisco, February 6, 1905.

Editor Advocate—I considered my report of [illegible] as a delegate to the "National Grocers Association" at [illegible] valuable one.

The value did not come so much [illegible] the one [illegible] at this convention as it did from showing me what enormous possibilities we have [illegible] of the character [illegible] the conventions of the National Retail Grocers Association of the United States.

The prime necessity for making a national convention of retail grocers [illegible] one great policy in which [illegible] be equally interested.

I understand that in the conventions [illegible] the meetings are intended [illegible] some measure that would result in the establishment of such a [illegible] policy. I am convinced that in none of the national conventions has this result been achieved. I must also [illegible] my regret that we arrived no nearer to conclusion at the convention in Cincinnati. The great motive for the convention at Cincinnati was, [illegible] I could see, the election of [illegible] set of officers. The details of [illegible] are of more interest to the delegates than anything else, and no question as to a national policy was brought up and discussed.

Hope for the Future.

I think that this can be changed at another convention.

There were numerous articles of value and general interest read by thoughtful men. None of them touched matters of vital national importance, however. All were of local and incidental value only.

I do not want to be misunderstood as saying that what has been accomplished in the past was not of considerable value.

The work of the National Association in influencing national legislation is of interest and value. The work of the National Association in discouraging the giving of premiums is also of interest and value. These things, however, are of only incidental interest to the grocers of the Union and should be only incidental in the great work of the National.

I think the men intrusted with the management of the "National Grocers' Association" can study with much value the history of the "National Druggists' Association." That association through many years sought to "find itself," as the Grocers' Association has been seeking to find itself. During this period the per capita tax of the members of the "National Druggists' Association" was 25 cents per year per member, which was paid without any great amount of enthusiasm by a small proportion of the druggists of the country.

The "National Druggists' Association" found that a combination of the retail druggists of the United States would represent a sufficient strength as distributors of the proprietary articles to make the manufacturers of such willing to fix a fair retail selling price therefor and refusing to sell such goods to firms that might cut their price.

This movement was of value and interest to most of the manufacturers as well as to every retail druggist of the country.

Retailers Became Interested.

As soon as the management of the National Association began to develop this policy, which would help every druggist in the land they were enabled to increase their dues. As a result, the retail druggists of every part of the Union now pay, and pay gladly, $4 per year each to the "National Druggists' Association," and the organization is self-supporting. What is more, each member of the "National Druggists' Association" finds that his $4 per year is a good investment since it serves to restrain the cutters of the big cities and makes it easier for the druggists of the smaller communities to get a full price on those staples which cannot be cut in the larger cities.

The "National Druggists' Association," as part of its work, devotes considerable attention to national legislation and other matters of general interest to the drug trade. These are only part of the "by profits" of the organization.

As far as I can see, this is the only one great national policy open for a great national organization of retail grocers. The relations of jobbers and retailers must differ in different sections. Mutual Fire Insurance is a local issue varying in different states. Legislative necessities are of temporary and changing interest. The suppression of premium schemes is not of sufficient material value to warrant the maintenance of a great and expensive machine like the "National Grocers" Association.

I think the National Association is not now performing the work that would make it of the greatest possible value both to the retails grocers and the manufacturers of the country, who have contributed so liberally towards its support.

Suggestions for Betterment.

I wish it understood that I call attention to the weaknesses of our "National Grocers' Association" only because I feel that we can take advantage of our experiences of the past to make our organization of the fullest value.

I would suggest to the management of the "National Grocers' Association" the following methods of insuring value to those delegates who may attend the 9th annual convention at Niagara Falls in 1906:

The national secretary could outline fully those matters which he may deem of vital national importance. He could send a letter to each state president and each national officer asking their opinion as to the comparative values of the policies suggested.

There should be a distinct understanding that certain portions of each day of the convention should be devoted to the discussion of plans as to how to make effective the policy that the majority might deem most essential.

While there should be papers and general entertainment, those papers and the entertainment should be merely incidental to the great work of the convention, which should be the establishment of a practical working plan for the National Association and the designing of a system by which the great influence that can be exerted by our National Association should be used for the betterment of the affiliating members and the manufacturers of the United States.

National Secretary's Opportunity.

As a matter of fact, the national secretary could begin at once, through correspondence with the various state presidents, to seek information as to what the association managers in different parts of the Union consider essential for the National to take up. In these communications he should submit his ideas as to what he thinks the National might do and seek a concensus of opinion from as many states as possible in order to submit them for the judgment of the Executive Committee.

In this way, I feel certain that the "National Retail Grocers' Association of the United States" can be made of enormous value to the grocers of every part of our great country. I wish to add, too, that while I feel the "National Grocers' Association" can be made of enormous value I also consider that should the program of 1905 be repeated in 1906 and the time of the delegates be spent in junketing and politics, that it would not pay the grocers of the Pacific Coast to send delegates across the continent.

MEMBERS NOT DOING AS THEY AGREED.

Soon after the organization of the Pacific Coast Retail Grocers' Association, a petition was circulated in several cities on the Coast. The signers of this petition agreed to push the sale of goods on which the manufacturer established and maintained a retail price.

Hundreds of grocers signed this petition. And it would seem that where prominent grocers who have been in business for years, and have had to confront cut prices, would do as their signatures would imply, yet it is a galling fact that there are several prominent grocers in Oakland, San Francisco and Los Angeles who signed this agreement who today have not a can of Schilling's Baking Powder on their shelves. Every brand sold is one which the manufacturer has taken no steps whatever to protect. Even though this is a remarkable fact, it is true and is almost enough to weaken the most ardent association worker, let alone a firm like A. Schilling & Co., who have always had the best interest of their trade at heart. One dealer who had signed the petition even went so far as to say: "Oh, Schilling [illegible] that to create favor." Of course they do. They would have been foolish to have taken such a step unless they thought they would create favor among the grocers. We surely could not ask them to protect their price if it was going to create disfavor. These merchants perhaps could not discontinue the sale of the present brand all at once and satisfy their customers, but the least they could do would be to put in stock some of Schilling goods in order to show their appreciation of Schilling's generous effort to protect them, as well as to show they intend living up to what they agreed to. This is what makes the work of our association hard. It is very unjust for a retail grocer to petition a manufacturer to do a certain thing and then he does not live up to it. We hope we will have less cause to complain of this in the future.

PROFIT BY OPPORTUNITIES.

Advantages That Average Dealers Might Have in Winning and Holding Trade.

Too often the average retail grocer forgets the fact that his customers are his neighbors and friends. Yet this fact makes up a very large portion of his stock in trade.

Because the neighborhood grocer is able to meet and know his customers, he is able to secure their confidence not only in his integrity but in the honesty of his goods.

Every dealer owes it to himself to see that he makes the best of the opportunities that arise from this fact.

It is according to the standing the grocer establishes with these neighbors of his, who are his possible customers, that he succeeds or fails.

If he has their good will and their confidence, he will have their trade and it will continue in spite of the blandishments and special offers of big stores many blocks removed.

If he trifles with this confidence by selling them goods of inferior quality because there is a little more profit to him, and if the goods he offers are not such that he can safely "money back" them, he is injuring his hold upon these customers.

This is too important a matter to allow of delay. Every dealer should look over his stock now. If he has anything which he cannot recommend without hesitation, he should put it in the background and advance the goods of whose quality he is sure and of the stability of whose prices he has the manufacturer's guarantee.

These two reasons combine to make "Schilling's Best" of enormous value to the grocery trade of the Pacific coast.

The retail dealer is able to "money back" the goods and in this way secures the confidence of his trade as to their quality.

He is protected by A. Schilling & Co. in the retail selling price and this guarantees that the customer will be satisfied with the price, since there will be no cutter advertising the same goods as a "special" for a little less money.

OAKLAND GROCERS MEET.

Flour Profits, the National Delegate and the Collection Bureau Cause an Interesting Meeting.

Secretary Reed of the Alameda County Grocers' Association reported at the meeting on Monday evening that J. A. Westphal & Sons had listed "Bay City" and "White Foam" flours at $1.30 (leaving a margin of 15c per sack for the retailer) and would not sell to cutters. He was instructed to inform the state secretary and have the brands added to the state protected list.

Mr. Reed also reported that there was a strong feeling among the Alameda county grocers in support of the movement to convince the other San Francisco mill that they should give the grocers the same protection being accorded them by the Globe Grain & Milling Co. and Standard Flour Co. In his rounds among the members, he found that nearly all of them were pushing the flour on which they got a fair profit and were selling as little as possible of the flours of the mills who were not trying to control cutters.

Duncan Gets Legislative Funds.

Harry Duncan was the only one of the committee appointed to secure legislative funds who was prepared to report. Mr. Nor, of Eiben & Nor, and himself had collected $89 from his district, which is anything but the best in the city.

He reported that the mercahnts of his part of the town were glad to contribute towards the movement which was given them so much for so little.

J. F. Paulding acting secretary of the State Grocers' Association, made an interesting report of progress. In the course of his remarks he said that the grocers of California, Oregon and Washington should hold to strict account for the cutting of their goods, manufacturers who sold direct to retailers since these firms had it in their power to control the price of their goods if they so desired, as did A. Schilling & Co.

He explained that it would be harder to control the goods of those manufacturers who distributed them through the jobber. He pointed out that one of the gravest problems before the grocers was as to how they could prevent the wholesaler from stepping in between the retailer and the manufacturer and preventing the manufacturer from protecting the retail grocer in his profits.

Mr. Paulding quoted the experience of the Sapollo people, showing that while the fight was a long one yet the manufacturer who so desired would be able to force the wholesale grocers into line.

Mr. Warnke made a very interesting repot of the national convention at Cincinnati, which was listened to with close attention. He gave a resume of the proceedings of the convention and also of the resolutions that were passed.

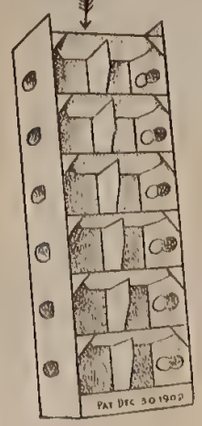
Mr. Warnke reported that in Atlanta, Ga. the grocers had had the same trouble with the mills that we are now having in the bay cities. The fight of the retailers was taken up by their local paper and it was largely through their efforts that success was achieved. As in San Francisco, the mills promptly took their advertisements away from the local trade paper but when the mills finally realized they had made a mistake, they were glad to replace their advertisements, since they had to admit that the action of the paper was really a help to them.

The mills had become so convinced that the movement was in their favor that today they are paying to the Association a rebate of 5c per barrel on the flour sold to members. A local soap company is contributing 5c per box on soap sold to members. The sums so raised made the Association financially independent and enabled the management to give the members splendid results.

Mr. Fox, of Hall, Schaertzer & Robertson, spoke briefly but pointedly in regard to the services their establishment would be glad to give the retail grocers of Alameda county. Secretary Reed favored the retention of this firm as collectors. On motion of Harry Duncan, a committee of three was appointed to examine into the details of the proposition made by Hall, Schaertzer & Robertson and report back at the next meeting.

PAYS FOR ITSELF.

A Good Refrigerator an Absolute Necessity in a California Grocery Store.



More than 150 of the leading grocers of San Francisco have put in a McCray Refrigerator. These refrigerators supply a cold, dry circulation which does away with any danger of sweating.

In the dry atmosphere of the Pacific coast such a refrigerator will save so much wastage in weight of cheese, butter, lard, hams and bacon that the refrigerator soon pays for itself.

The plate glass fronts on the refrigerators make them very attractive store ornaments and enable the dealer to display delicacies that would soon become stale and unsalable if left exposed to the air.

The general agents for the Pacific coast of the McCray Refrigerators are the Beck-Wakefield Co. 122 Market street. These refrigerators are sold on easy monthly payments. Dealers who have not supplied themselves should write for descriptive catalogues lists of dealers who have already purchased, etc. We would ask that those of our readers who write will mention the Advocate since by so doing they will help us greatly.

A CHANCE TO SAVE.

Careful Grocers Can Secure Quantity Prices on Vinegar and Save Freight Money.

Their advertising money is to be spent with the retail grocers by the Pacific Vinegar & Pickle Works.

In order to interest the dealer in their vinegar, the quality, price and value of which is absolutely guaranteed in every respect, the Pacific Vinegar & Pickle Works is making the liberal offer by which they can secure quantity prices on their vinegar and yet buy as they may need it. Details of their plan are given on page 2 of the cover and should interest every careful retail grocer.

The guarantee of quality given by the Pacific Vinegar & Pickle Works is most sweeping. It is seldom that any vinegar works can assure their customers that their goods will stand the test of any pure food law in the Union.

Their guarantee of price is unique. They leave the question of the price to the honor of the retail grocer. Their guarantee is that if the dealer does not find the goods absolutely the best value for the money he has ever received (quality considered) that they will accept any price he may fix upon the goods as his idea of what the value really is.

In order to induce as many retail merchants as possible to take advantage of this offer, without delay, the Pacific Vinegar & Pickle Works agrees to prepay the freight on the first shipment the dealer may order during the month of February.

The Advocate takes pleasure in assuring its readers of the complete responsibility of the Pacific Vinegar & Pickle Works and assures them that the offer on page 2 is a bona fide special offer and made in good faith. Dealers who can use 5 barrels or more of vinegar can correspond with the Pacific Vinegar & Pickle Works to their great advantage. We would ask our readers to mention the Advocate when writing.

WANTED—By an active salesman, a hard worker, position in country general merchandise store. Familiar with all branches. California experience, good reference. Don't drink, don't pray. Attends to business and saws wood. Let me work for you a month and I will stay with you years. Pay me what you find I am worth. I want no more. Address Clerk, care Advocate.

LOS ANGELES GETS BUSY.

J. K. Newberry Points the Way for the Grocers of Southern California.

Although the night was stormy, 65 grocers attended the special meeting called by the Los Angeles Retail Grocers' Association last week to consider legislative matters and the progress being made by Mr. Paulding in his great work for the rehabilitation of the prices of leading staples.

Strong resolutions were passed condemning the Wright bills, No. 250 and 276. A petition protesting against these bills will be forwarded to Sacramento with the signatures of practically all the grocers of Los Angeles.

Mr. Newberry Talks Pointedly.

In discussing the work being done by Mr. Paulding, J. R. Newberry said:

"I read the other day that the president of the bankers' association said at the last meeting of that body that the trouble with the banking business in America was 'unintelligent competition.' If it is true of bankers it certainly is true of grocers.

"In Los Angeles, there were more failures in the grocery line proportionately than in any other city in the world and unintelligent competition was the reason.

"I have done as much to disrupt prices in Southern California as any other one man, but I have learned, and we have all learned, that there is room for us all to work intelligently.

"Mr. Fazenda got up the idea of securing fixed prices from the manufacturer. Slowly this idea was rounded out and made effective and I and other merchants were brought to see that it was feasible and to the mutual interest. Our association has been a success, and as I said above we are watched and patterned after by the other associations of the state.

All Should Help Lift.

"Now, gentlemen, there are four men who lean while one lifts.

"It is our duty to lift."

"We have been successful and we should give our assistance that others may succeed on the Pacific coast.

"Our Pacific Coast Association has appointed me a member of the advisory board and has instructed that each member apoint four others to assist him. I have appointed Mr. Posten of Pomona; Mr. Stevens of Carr & Stevens, Los Angeles; Mr. Bradford of Stockwell & Bradford, also of Los Angeles, and Mr. Hinkle, of Anaheim. They are doing all in their power both financially and by giving up their valuable time toward the forwarding of this work.

"And, gentlemen, we want your assistance also.

Worthy of Their Help.

"The Pacific Coast Association may not be of any great value to us today but it surely will be some day. It deserves our help. We should do all in our power to strengthen it for the time will surely come when we can say to our northern brothers, 'We are in trouble and we need your support.'

"Tonight the Pacific Coast Association needs financial support for carrying on its campaign for right legislation. This legislation will effect every merchant in the state and this call merits your giving."

In response to this appeal those present subscribed liberally and sufficient money was pledged to assure a fund of $500 to be placed in Mr. Paulding's hands for the furtherance of this work.

When a retail grocer is, for any reason compelled to sell any manufacturer's goods below what it costs him to deliver them to his customers, he has the choice of two things: First, selling some other manufacturer's goods correspondingly higher, which is an injustice to other manufacturers, or he can bear the loss himself in a general way, which is an injustice to himself.

AGAINST THE TRUST.

Local Tobacco Dealers Devise Ways and Means to Meet Their Enemy.

A largely attended meeting of the Independent tobacco dealers was held at Eagles' Hall, 731 Market street, last Thursday evening.

Charles Mattheas of 1430 Market created some excitement by rising and requesting that all emissaries of the trust be requested to leave the meeting.

As no one made a move, Mr. Mattheas accused Edward Gillen, a retailer, of not arising. When matters calmed through the intervention of wise counsel, the meeting proceeded to transact business.

It was decided that cards be printed with the words "Independent Store," the same to be displayed in a conspicuous place by Independent tobacco dealers.

The announcement made by President Parry that he had been instrumental in preventing the trust from securing several stores in the city was received with great satisfaction.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED.

Harry E. Long and Miss Georgia Bogue to be Married in the Spring.

One of San Francisco's popular young men, Harry E. Long, has announced his engagement to Miss Georgia Bogue of Stockton. Harry is the son of J. M. Long of the well-known firm of the Long Syrup Refining Company. The date for the wedding has not been given out as yet, but it is quite likely the marriage will take place in the near future. Harry, who is connected with his father's firm, has a host of friends owing to the fact that he is possessed of a genial and happy disposition.

DENY THE ALLEGATION.

Goldberg, Bowen & Company have filed an answer to the suit brought by Dr. Susan J. Fenton to recover $13,366. The plaintiff had her collarbone broken in a collision with the firm's delivery wagon. The defendant denies the accusation that the accident was due to their negligence or its employe's. It is alleged the accident was caused by the careless manner in which the doctor was driving her horse when the accident occurred.

ESCONDIDO, THE PROGRESSIVE

Escondido is one of the most ambitious of the smaller towns of the south. If its papers are to be believed, it has certain vices of the big cities it could do without. There are two leading stores, those of Steiner & Co. and the Stevenson Bros. Co. Steiner & Co., in the "Times" of February 2, advertises:

"Special Savings Sale."

"We sell all the people, all the line, al the time."

"Remember—we give Premiums and our original features in this line are a resistless temptation to others, but they cannot equal our offerings and are but proving our claims to the best methods."

In an introduction to prices advertised on hams, lard and cottolene, they say:

"These offerings are for consumers only and not for other stores to buy here."

In the same issue, Stevenson Bros., under the catch line "The Store That Sells For Less," advertises 10-cent packages of Schilling's Best Soda at 5 cents. Unfortunately, they chose Cottolene for their "Saturday and Monday only" cuts, and advertise large pails at $1.05 and medium pails at 45c, while Steiner advertised the same goods at $1.00 and 40c.

The prices on the specials at both stores net a loss for the sales made. It is hard to see where these two big firms, which naturally control most of the trade, anyway, and both of which have expensive, modern equipment, are to secure their compensation.

Mr. C. A. Bell, secretary of the Portland Association, reports renewed interest in the association since receiving copies of our last report.

We have received information that the cracker companies are going to hold a meeting soon to arrange a consumers' price on their product.

Attracting Trade

TAKE SOME INTEREST.

See That Your Windows Are Neat--The Trust Does.

There are dealers who claim to be opposed to advertising on account of the expense and who assert that they trust to the quality and prices of their goods to make trade for them.

It will be found as a rule, however, that these dealers who take no interest in others forms of advertising, are the very ones who neglect the comparatively inexpensive but highly effective, means of advertising through the medium of window displays.

The dealer who does not advertise in other ways seldom cares how his show windows look, whether filled with out of season goods or covered with dust and he generally employs clerks who are as thoroughly indifferent as he is himself.

A dealer need not advertise all of the time, remarks "Tobacco," but there is no excuse on earth, except laziness why he should not keep his show windows filled with seasonable goods and timely window bulletins to catch the attention of the passerby.

This article at the present time is very appropriate, and there are dealers whom it fits. An excellent lesson is placed now before dealers by the United Cigars Co. The Advocate has time and time again called attention to the fact that clerks and proprietors are both careless regarding their window displays. Such a window as put up by the Trust draws a vast amount of attention, and it now behooves local cigar and tobacco men to be up and doing and meet the Trust stores with equal prettier window displays. They should even go further and place before the general public a window show far better than that presented by their competitors, the Trust. By so doing they will soon ascertain that customers will gradually ignore the Trust and patronize the dealer who succeeds in getting up an artistic and original design with inducements that will draw patrons into their place of business. In consequence their profits will be larger and their sales greater.

A bright, cheerful store has a good effect on the entire store force. They work better, and the customer feels more amiable in that kind of a store than in the gloomy sort.

TO AID PORTO RICO.

Governor Winthrop, of Porto Rico, is at present in Washington, D. C., and is doing everything in his power to aid the island. One of his favorite schemes is the restoration of the coffee industry to its former state of prosperity. In furtherance of this plan, he has secured promise of the War and Navy Departments that in the awarding of the contracts for the furnishing of coffee to the enlisted forces of the army and navy, the preference in the selection will be given to the Porto Rican coffee provided the bids are the same. As these contracts amount to a considerable sum, Porto Rican coffee growers are jubilant over the prospects attached thereto. The Spice Mill.

It is not our desire or intention to antagonize manufacturers, wholesalers or non-association members, but rather to merit their assistance and co-operation. We consider the work to be undertaken of interest to all and should be accepted accordingly.

It will be noted by referring to the drawing in this publication that we have arranged for an executive committee in the various communities on the Coast. These committees have already been arranged in California and some of the localities in Washington and Oregon.

PERSONAL MENTION.

L. Baron Senoski, manager of the Baron Shoe Company, who has been on a visit to Byron Springs, has returned and is registered at the Grand Hotel. He will leave Sunday for Portland.

NOTES.

Experience is a good teacher, providing we profit by it.

Association means creating new conditions and having them attended to.

No association means demoralized prices, indiscriminate credits and long accounts.

WITH WORDS AND DEEDS.

In his annual report to the Chicago Grocers' Association, its president, Sol Westerfeld, who was retiring after two terms of active service, said:

"The month of May will never be forgotten by those who were fortunate enough to attend the national convention at San Francisco."

When the California delegates reach Chicago Mr. Westerfeld and his associates showed that these were no mere idle words and now the California delegates are saying:

"The month of February will never be forgotten by those who were fortunate enough to be the guests of the Chicago grocers on their way to the Cincinnati convention."

COLORADO'S PROUD RECORD.

There were 88 delegates at the recent state convention of Colorado. In speaking of the results of the past 12 months, the "Tribune" says:

"It took a defunct institution and has made it one of the most successful associations in the United States.

"With a handful of loyal members to start with, it has organized an association in every town and hamlet in the state.

"It has developed an insurance department that is a monument of honor to its directors and a source of great personal pride to every stockholder.

"It has established a sugar card covering every store within the broad confines of Colorado, and this sugar card is netting 10 per cent. profit to every merchant on every dollars worth of sugar that he sells, and 10 per cent. profit on money paid the retail grocer for sugar will amount to $222,000.

"We say, without fear of successful contradiction, that this $222,000 profit on sugar has kept the sign hanging over many a store in Colorado that, had it not been for this profit, would today be dragged down and the former owner of it be marked upon the books of the jobbers and manufacturers of Colorado as a 'Bankrupt.'"

TRADING STAMP DUPLICITY.

Double Dealing Brought to Light Through Legal Action in Philadelphia.

Sperry & Hutchinson Co. have brought suit against 16 Philadelphia grocers to restrain them from buying green trading stamps through brokers or others.

The 16 retail grocers have employed an attoney to defend them. Through this attorney numerous retail merchants have been forced to testify as to what stamps cost. The fact was developed that the Trading Stamp Co. has no regard even for its own patrons. They would supply large dealers with stamps at $1.50 per thousand and then make other smaller dealers in the same neighbohood pay from $4.50 to $6.00 per thousand.

The 16 unfortunate grocers claim that they were forced to buy stamps in self-defense. Some of them had been refused trading stamps by Sperry & Hutchinson and found they were losing trade because immediate competitors were distributing stamps to their customers. It seems odd that retail merchants should have suffered so long from a concern like the Trading Stamp Co., which seems to devote itself to abuse of its own customers.

PETALUMA, BEWARE!

The Petaluma "Argus" says:

"Joseph L. Jerg, representing the Union Coffee Company of San Francisco, was here on Monday arranging for placing a couple of agents in the local field and if the business justifies will probably open a local branch for the well-known house in the near future."

This firm is made up of a number of coffee peddlers. The Petaluma grocers should see to it that their representatives are licensed as heavily as the law allows.

NEW STOVE POLISH.

A Powder That Lacks Bad Qualities and Has Every Desirable Feature.

X-ray Stove Polish is the latest remarkable success in the grocery line. The sale of this article is phenomenal considering the short time it has been on this market.

The agents report that their distribution of samples among the consuming trade has already produced the most flattering returns, and housewives realizing the superior merits of this powerful stove polish, are buying it freely. This fact, as a matter of course, stimulates the retail grocer's interest.

S. P. Buckley, who is well and favorably known by the retail grocery trade, has a constant smile of satisfaction on his face, occasioned by his successful canvass of the retail trade on X-Ray Stove Polish. It is the exception when he does not sell a retail grocer these goods. He takes particular pains to show the superiority of his goods both in quality, in profit for the dealer and its quick selling merits.

Retailers make no mistake when they order a stock of X-Ray Stove Polish. It fills a long felt want, being entirely different from any other stove polish on the market. It cannot burn off like other polishes. There is no waste. It does not dry up.

We learn from eastern grocery papers that in the City of New York more of this polish is sold and used than any other brand. The local agents are confident of a like condition soon taking place in San Francisco.

Local stocks are limited and those who do not order at once may have to await the arrival of the second carload that is now en route.

NATIONAL RESOLUTIONS.

Among the resolutions passed at the recent national convention were the following:

Providing for a standing committee of three to urge the passage of the national law governing weights and measures.

Making state secretaries and treasurers delegates each year to the convention by reason of the office which they hold.

Recommending that manufacturers be encouraged to sell to jobbers direct and not to retailers.

Thanking the American Cereal and other companies for their efforts to eliminate gift schemes and calling upon all other cereal companies to do the same.

In opposition to all premium and gift schemes and commending the trade press for combatting this evil by publicity.

Disapproving the premium scheme of the American Tobacco Co. and requesting its discontinuance and asking the support of the wholesale grocers' association.

Recommending that street peddling be prohibited.

Recommending that net weight of goods in packages be plainly marked on the outside of each package.

Condemning the sale of goods by manufacturers to consumers by club, endless chain and premium methods.

Cigars and Tobacco

Tillmann & Bendel report business as improving, especially in the sales of Sanchez & Haya Clear Havanas. This firm is also doing a large business in drop shipments of plug tobacco. An arrangement has been made whereby the Sansome-street establishment will handle Cremo and Recruit cigars along with their other brands. The sale of Cremos has commenced, but it will be fully thirty days before the Recruit cigars are in stock and ready for disposal to buyers.

The R. H. Patterson Tobacco Company of Richmond, Va., has placed in this market two new brands of tobacco (Independent) which are worthy of recognition by the trade. One known as Success, a 5-cent sliced plug done up in neat paper box packages 1 2-3 oz, and the other a high-grade natural leaf 3 to the pound. These new brands are controlled by the J. A. Drinkhouse Company. The fact that both are manufactured by the Virginia factory is sufficient to warrant their quality and to predict ready and quick sales with the dealers and also appreciation by the consumers.

Ed Allenberg, the energetic, popular salesman, is now with H. Bowles & Co., and working hard in the interest of this firm placing orders for the "Kadee" cigarettes. Eddie is disposing of this brand with wonderful rapidity, and this is no surprise, for whatever brand he starts out to sell always meets with large return orders for his employers.

J. Milne is now representing the F. N. Martin Tobacco of Louisville, Ky. He works in through the country and also carries their lines in this city. Since taking up his work with this company Mr. Milne has sent into a number of new orders to his credit, and is the right man in the right place. By securing his services the Louisville firm has made a ten-strike.

W. H. Patterson & Co., of North Yakima, will start a branch cigar store at Prosser.

Frater & Minkler have purchased Foeller & O'Neill's branch cigar store at Portland.

C. S. Scott has purchased W. A. Moore's cigar store, Portland.

G. Carrington, 20 Pine St., who represents the Old North State line of tobacco, manufactured by the Richardson Co., N. C., has returned from a visit to the factory.

A. M. Bryce has purchased R. Reed's cigar store, Seattle.

M. A. Gunst & Co. have put their Leland Stanford cigar on the local market again. This cigar is carried in six sizes, running from $80 to $185. There is also a small size to be sold at ten for a quarter.

Collin Bros. are starting a cigar store at Puyallup.

Inaugurated Special Campaign.

The American Tobacco Co. has inaugurated a special campaign on Cremo Export cigars which will include the entire United States. The policy with regard to jobbers has been somewhat changed, a larger discount being allowed them than under the old selling plan.

The Cremo Export cigar is packed in a Humidor, says "Tobacco," holding 6,000 cigars in boxes containing 100 cigars each. The Humidor is made in the best manner and handsomely finished and will, the company says, keep good cigars good.

Cremo Export cigars are made only in Londres shape. An order for 6,000 will bring in addition one of these Humidors, and the bill will read for 5 500 at $35 per 1,000.

W. D. Franklin has started a trip West and South to push the sale of these cigars, introducing them where they are not now known and looking after duplicate orders where they are already selling.

REPRESENTS THE MORMONS.

The "Butchers' and Grocers' Guide" is an eight-page exchange in its third number from Salt Lake City. The paper is strongly edited and should be well supported by the retail merchants of Utah, who need such a paper to keep them in touch with the progress of trade.

Clerk's Corner

HOW TO WIN.

Method and System Factors in Success —Study Them Well.

Salesmanship is the foundation of the success of every clerk, no matter what may be his line. He may be good at display, good at ad writing, and good at other features of store work, but it all tends to one point, ability to sell goods.

What makes a good salesman? This is a question so important that schools are being established to aid the successful salesman in answering it. The school of salesmanship is not only a good idea, it is practical and will undoubtedly aid many young men in securing better positions and salaries.

Big Factors in Business.

Method and system are big factors in any business success. The big corporation must have both. The retail store must have them if its success is to be permanent. The merchant who plans systematically is surer of success at the end of a given period than the man who does not.

This put into other language means that the proper study of details of a business and the shaping of them to one end is the surest road to success.

As the merchant studies his business so the clerk should study his work. As salesmanship is the big problem before him, he should study its various features in order to solve it well.

Must Have Knowledge.

To be a good salesman a man should have a good knowledge of his line. The new school of salesmanship will teach that as one of the fundamentals. A knowledge of himself, his weak points especially, and a determination to correct them is also valuable. A knowledge of the person to whom he is talking sale and how to gain that in the shortest possible time is one phase of the problem.

Selling goods represents a battle between minds. It is a constant matching of one's mental powers against those of another. Here again is a most important feature, the psychology of salesmanship, as some are pleased to term it.

All this goes into the melting pot to be transformed into the successful salesman. When the transformation has taken place the following is the result, says the "Retail Grocers' Advocate of New York:

A salesman who makes a study of his line before he begins to talk it in any way. He studies the strong points and acquaints himself with the objections he is likely to meet.

A salesman who asks himself honestly where he is weak and how he can strengthen himself for the contest. He is taught to ask himself these questions in connection with everything he does. In the meantime he is acquiring more solid confidence in himself.

A salesman able to make a rapid study of his customer as he or she comes to the counter. This includes a study of human nature in general. Knowing how to handle a customer is half the battle. The salesman who is able to discover during the conversation the hobbies of the customer and work on them has the battle almost won.

OUR DAN IS BUSY.

Dan O'Callaghan always was a hustler and in his new job as an insurance and real estate broker, he is making as marked a success as he did during the nearly 20 years when he was a member of the produce and commission house of O'Callaghan, Nelson & Co. Mr. O'Callaghan has a finely appointed office at 22 Montgomery street, near Post, where he is prepared to meet his friends and look after the renting of their houses and collecting their rents as well as writing their insurance. Mr. O'Callaghan is representative of the Liverpool & London & Globe Insurance Co. and also agent for the Standard Marine Insurance Co. of Liverpool.

Dan O'Callaghan is known to practically every retail grocer in San Francisco and to the entire "street." Wherever he is known he is liked and he has earned his popularity by always being glad and willing to lend a helping hand wherever it would do good. Mr. O'Callaghan is now reaping the reward of his kindly good fellowship in the past and is being deluged with business by his friends, for whom he was glad to do favors without any expectation of a return.

SUGAR MARKET.

There is no change in the local condition. Jobbers are selling at cost—$5.75—and the three firms handling Honolulu sugar are not cutting. The steamship "Alameda' arrived on February 7 with 15,018 bags of sugar in her cargo. M. Ehrman, one of the large stockholders of the Honolulu Plantation Company, is quoted by a daily paper as saying: "The Western Sugar Refinery is losing about $300,000 a month by not advancing sugar prices to the New York scale. That is an inside calculation, because sugar in New York has advanced about 1c a pound and there has been no change in local prices. Usually prices on this coast are higher than in the east. The loss to the trust will amount to something like $3,000,000 a year on the Pacific coast consumption.'

New York Market—Willet & Gray, February 2, say:

"The market is dull, but no change was made in price, which are still quoted basis of 6c net cash for granulated. A quiet market may be expected for a week or two and prices are likely to follow the course of the market for raw sugar.

COFFEE MARKET.

There has been numerous changes in the New York market—all speculation—but none of enough importance to affect actual business except to create a feeling of insecurity as to the stability of the market.

New York Market—Willett & Gray, February 2, say:

"There has been no change in the actual position, excepting to improve it by reason of the further liquidations on the part of outside speculators. Brazil receipts, especially at Santos, kept pretty full until the last day or two, and if some planters or holders did sell at the lower currency prices caused by the higher exchange rates, the coffee has been freely bought by other interests. European advices continue to show that the interior trade there is very bare of stocks, having kept out of the market for so long a time. With steady markets the inference is they will realize the real facts of the position and buy freely, which indeed they must do ere long. The same remarks hold good as regards the interior trade of this country, and already there are good signs of the demand commencing and a great deal of coffee can quickly disappear from the seaports when the country begins to satisfy its wants."

C. E. Bickford says:

"The continued scarcity of low grades still enables a premium for them out of proportion to the nearest competitive coffees and has induced considerable re-selling between second hands, etc., whenever profits were visible."

TEA MARKET.

The market is quiet but firm. Local jobbers carry full stock and there is no indication of a change before the new crop is ready.

RICE MARKET.

M. Phillips & Co. report:

"The market continues in good swing sellers finding ready buyers at present prices. Low prices have greatly increased the consumption and retailers who heretofore would buy one or two sacks of rice, now buy from five to ten sacks. From reports by the mills in the South, stocks are being reduced rapidly and if business continues in the same ratio as in January, 1905, the old crop will be entirely cleaned up by the 1st of August. A great deal of rice is being exported to Cuba, Porto Rico, Germany and other points, which is relieving the market to a considerable extent.

"There has been considerable Sandwich Island rice received, the last steamer bringing over 1,500 sacks and this rice will cut quite a figure in this market from now on, as there is quite a surplus in the Hawaiian Islands and we look for large shipments by each steamer."

M. J. Brandenstein & Co. report:

"The following advices on Japan rice dated Kobe, December 16th, have been received:

"We advised the estimate made by the Agricultural Department as being 50,750,000 kokus. A later investigation showed that the actual output will not exceed 46,000,000 kokus. This caused considerable consternation, and the market immediately bounded up.

"The Diet, now sitting, propose to impose a duty of 50 cen per koku on imported rice, which is causing much dissatisfaction in the country and has led to some large purchases of new crop rice in Rangoon. This factor tends to strengthen the market for the domestic article. The export to Europe so far amounts to a solitary shipment of 1,000 tons of raw rice. As prices are still stiffening the prospects of selling to Europe are extremely remote."

CANNED FRUITS.

Supplies of canned peaches in first hands are practically exhausted. Stocks are badly broken. There is very little movement expected till inquiries for the Alaskan trade come in. The fixing of future prices will also increase inquiries for spot stock.

CANNED TOMATOES.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 28, 1905.—The principal demand lately has been for 3-lb. tomatoes, which are attracting the attention of the trade, owing to their very low price. The market is generally regarded on bottom for these goods. Notwithstanding the low price on corn, there is not very much demand for it, as buyers supplied their wants earlier in the season, and their stocks are not low enough to warrant further purchases just yet, especially with the market as weak as it is on this item.

John R. Adams & Co.

CANNED CORN.

WEST PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 28, 1905.—The corn acreage in Maine, without doubt, will be the same as last season. Maine has reached her limit in the packing of corn. There is no new territory to be worked, and prices will doubtless remain firm from now on. Last season's packers were well sold up in ten days after price was made, and we anticipate the same result this season.

Fernald, Keene & True Co.

DRIED FRUIT.

A feature of increasing importance is the extreme scarcity of apricots. There is nothing left in the Ventura district, while at Vacaville and Suisun there is little if any stock obtainable. The eastern trade is carrying very light stocks, and a period of large consumption is approaching. There is a steady demand from Europe, which dealers find difficulty in filling owing to light supplies in first hands. Peaches also are in unusually small supply for the season, and are held very firmly. The demand is on the jobbing order and mainly for the lower grades.

The "Grocery World' of Philadelphia says:

"The price of peaches is very high. Holders prophesy that choice peaches will go to 10 cents on the coast, and there seems to be nothing in sight to stop them. The market opened at 5 cents, which is about an average price. The crop of peaches last year was about 50 per cent. short, and stocks all over the country are very low. It looks now as if the market would be entirely bare before the new season opened.

"The apricot market is extremely bare also, and the supply is very low. A standard grade of apricots sells now in a large way for 9 cents. The price earlier in the season was about 8 cents. Apricots sell more slowly than peaches, and the chance is that there will be enough to go around. It is expected, however, that the entire available supply will go into consumption."

RAISINS.

Lee Gray, of the Fresno Home Packing Co., is quoted by the "New York Journal of Commerce" as saying:

"In an experience of fifteen years on the coast I have never seen things in a healthier condition, both as regards the supply and prices. I am inclined to think that every pound of carry-over stock suitable for shipping will be out of the way before the new crops come in. There are not to exceed 10,000 tons of all kinds and of these not more than 6,000 tons are of standard grades. Contrast this with the coast stock at this time last year, which was practically 28,000 tons, and it is not difficult to realize the strength of the situation. This becomes the more apparent when it is understood that at least 66 per cent. of the sound stock is in the hands of packers. Moreover, the 10,000 tons remaining, of which 4,000 tons are rain-damaged and will, I believe, eventually revert to the wineries includes seedless, sultanas and Thompson's, as well as muscatels.

Of the latter as near as can be ascertained there are not more than enough to make 325 cars of seeded raisins, and that quantity represents all that the trade of the United States can depend upon after its present stocks are exhausted to supply its requirements until the 1905 crop becomes available."

The New York "Journal of Commerce" of February 4 says:

"The tone of the spot market is easy, but there has been no quotable decline in prices, fancy being nominally held at 6 1-4c to 6 1-2c and choice at 5 1-2c to 5 3-4c as to brand and seller. Advices from the coast continue to reflect a firm feeling on the part of holders there, with some buying for prompt shipment by the Middle West, but so far as can be learned no orders are going out from this market."

PRUNES.

J. J. Shaver of Los Gatos writes:

'I find that there are only about 20 to 30 per cent. as many prunes on the coast as at the same time last year and of the past five years. We can begin to see a clean-up ahead of us in this line of goods. When we consider the light stock here and the light stock east, and adding to this the fact that it will be seven months before we can get any new prunes on the market, it begins to look as if prices should take an upward turn. Packers are only buying as orders come in. This cannot continue long. Then the packers who have stock will have their inning. Only about four or five have any stock on hand. There are few in the growers' hands, but they are held at above the present market. Prunes, at present prices, mean a loss to the producer, so we may expect to see some kicking before the new crop is harvested. We look for a good crop of all deciduous fruits, but not a big crop."

Hills Bros.' Circular, New York, says:

"FIGS—Layers have been moving freely during the week and the market shows an advance of fully ½ cent per lb. on all grades. Stocks in jobbers' hands are trifling. The position is, therefore, a strong one and a further advance is to be expected in the near future.

"DATES—The market on Persians remains unchanged. The demand continues steady and in all probability present prices will be the lowest of the season.

"ALMONDS—Tarrangonas have been in excellent demand during the week, and with spot supplies moderate, the market closes firm at 12½c. The French soft shell are higher at 11c. As supplies of this grade are exceedingly small, a higher level would not be unexpected.

FINNIN HADDIES.

Wieland Bros. report:

"Owing to stormy weather on the Atlantic coast very small quantities were caught recently, but we look for an improvement soon.'

It is hard to understand how the Spery Flour Company should be willing to publish a card of this kind in Southern California and yet, when the manager is approached by the grocers of San Francisco and Oakland on the same subject that he should say it was a "fad."

A Margin of 25 Cents.

The Sperry Milling Company, it will be noticed, are publishing a card which says "Sperry & Angelus flours must not be sold for less than $1.55." This makes $6.20 per bbl., or a profit of 25c per sack, to the retail grocer.

With the usual discount which is given the grocers there as well as here, they make a profit of $1.25 per bbl. to the grocers of Southern California. Yet, when the grocers of San Francisco and Oakland asked for a profit of less than half that much the managers of the company said it is a "fad" and would not last.

We ask every fair-minded grocer who is dealing with the Sperry Milling Co. if their arguments are consistent and if the retail grocers of the cities of San Francisco and Oakland should give any consideration whatever to the various statements that are being made by the salesmen of the mills who are not maintaining prices?

Some prominent grocers and some prominent association workers have made the statement that the action of Globe Mills was merely an advertising scheme on their part, notwithstanding the fact that the Globe Mills have always protected their prices in every place their goods are sold ever since they engaged in this business. They have several mills in California and they do not discriminate in the matter of maintaining price, but every one of their mills protects the retail price in every locality in which they sell goods.

No other mill in California can say this. I regret to learn that many of the grocers believe the misleading statements of the competitors of the Globe Mills to their own detriment.

The sooner the grocers realize this and wake up to the fact that it is to their interest to handle only those brands that are protected, the sooner they will receive a profit on their flour.

What a Hand May Mean.

In all my experiences and thoughts I am conscious of a hand. Whatever touches me, whatever thrills me, is as a hand that touches me in the dark, and that touch is my reality. You might as well say that a sight which makes you glad or a blow which brings the stinging tears to your eyes is unreal as to say that those impressions are unreal which I have accumulated by means of touch. The delicate tremble of a butterfly's wings in my hand, the soft petals of violets curling in the cool folds of their leaves or lifting sweetly out of the meadow grass, the clear, firm outline of face and limb, the smooth arch of a horse's neck and the velvety touch of his nose—all these and a thousand resultant combinations, which take shape in my mind, constitute my world.—Helen Keller in Century.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

"Mother Goose" is the hit of the week at the Grand. This is the biggest show that has come to San Francisco for a long time. The cast is uniform and strong and it has a perfect army of beautiful and well-trained chorus girls. The scenery is really remarkable. This show is well worth what it costs and will unquestionably play to crowded houses during its season in San Francisco.

MAJESTIC THEATER.

"Mizpah" is being produced at the Majestic. The production is remarkable not only for its literary excellence but the care with which it is staged and costumed. It is a beautiful love story and is one of the kind of plays that tend to elevate the stage and please the people who are fortunate enough to see it.

TIVOLI.

Grand opera in Italian still attracts music lovers to the Tivoli. The company is of such excellence that this grand opera season is proving historical.

ALCAZAR.

There is fun and laughter from the time the curtain goes up at this theater, where they are producing "Are You A Mason?" There is almost no pause between the funny situations and the ladies as well as the men of the company shine in the roles given them. In compliance with very general requests "Old Heidelberg" will be repeated next week.

COLUMBIA THEATRE.

Wm. Collier is concluding his engagement in "The Dictator" at this theatre. Lawrence D'Orsay is coming in the "Earl of Pawtucket."

CALIFORNIA THEATER.

The series of cheap shows has been broken for a week at this theatre. Paul Gilmore is presenting the "Mummy and the Humming Bird."

CENTRAL THEATRE.

Submarine boat, the blowing up of a locomotive in a tunnel and a Marconi Wireless Telegraphic plant help to add interest to a "Fight for Millions" at the Central. The melodrama is full of interesting situations which are exploited to the fullest of their possibilities by the Central's excellent company. Good houses have rewarded the attraction and next week they will put on 'The Night Before Christmas."

CHUTES.

They have a diver at the Chutes who drops one hundred feet into a tank of shallow water every afternoon. The free theatre with its splendid attractions, the Zoo and many other attractions make this resort the great open-air pleasure ground of San Francisco.

FISCHER'S.

The continuous performance at this theatre results in crowded houses. The prices of 10 and 20c together with the excellent bills prove very attractive. The feature of having the last performance begin at 9 o'clock enables many to attend who would not even warrant any going if the curtain rose at 8 o'clock.

A VICTIM OF POLITICS.

National Convention's Choice of Officers Decided by Wire Pulling at the Expense of "Our Joe."

The "Inland, Grocer" of Cleveland and Chicago in its account of the National Convention gives the following paragraph:

"Joseph A. Stulz of San Francisco, vice-president of the national association, was greeted with great applause when he arose to respond to the address of welcome. He read an address which was a fine literary effort. He spoke especially of the strenuous campaign which had been opened on the Pacific coast to better conditions. These enjoyed his active support, and had attained a gratifying success. Mr. Stulz is one of the class of retail grocers who make friends at sight and he would have made friends of his auditors had he not said more than a dozen words. His evident desire to use his office and his influence to advance the interests of everyone in the trade placed him at once in touch with every delegate, and everyone desired to know him better after his conclusion."

We learn from various sources that the reception accorded Mr. Stulz by the delegates was more enthusiastic and warmer than that given any other grocer at the convention. Mr. Stulz was universally recognized as a man who would be able to dignify and uphold the position of president of the "National Grocers' Association" and until the evening of the second day of the convention he would have been the unanimous choice of the delegates.

The Ohio delegates, because the convention was held in Cincinnati, held the balance of power with 60 accredited delegates. On the second day they took advantage of their position as hosts to trade upon the desires of the different delegations.

Some Chicago grocers had a candidate for the position of secretary. This enabled the Ohio politicians to trade with the Minnesota delegation, who wanted to be sure of Fred Mason's re-election.

The Missouri delegation had a candidate for vice-president and they were willing to support Mr. Green for president in return for the Ohio votes for their vice-presidential possibility.

By these trades, Mr. Green was able to buy the votes of the Minnesota and Missouri delegates as president and Ohio gave their 61 votes for Mr. Mason for secretary and Mr. Padburg for vice-president.

The Advocate feels that had Mr. Stulz been made president, the National organization would have been benefitted very largely thereby, since he is a man fertile in expedients and a veteran in association work.

Mr. Ashley, who nominated Mr. Green for president, paid a glowing tribute to the worth and splendid popularity of Mr. Stulz. His only objection was that California was so far west that he thought Mr. Stulz could not give the office the attention it needed.

This same argument was brought against San Francisco as a convention city for 1904, yet the records will show that there were more delegates at the San Francisco convention than there were at the Cincinnati convention and the convention was not padded out with non-attending California delegates, either.

Our Ohio friends apparently forgot not only their obligations as hosts, but also the lesson that they were taught in 1904 as to California's way of doing things with ease that the easterners feel are impossible.

It has come to our knowledge that there is an attempt to introduce on the market a WASHING AMMONIA make from BONES AND ANIMAL REFUSE. We trust that the trade will take time to investigate the character of this STUFF which, if sold to the consumer, will only tend to discourage the use of Ammonia as a household article.

FUNDS RUNNING SHORT.

ard A. Broughton of Pomona. This measure is having considerable opposition this session and it is questionable whether it will be favorably reported on by the Committee of Corporations or not.

Extending the Life of Accounts.

The bill for extending the life of accounts was defeated at the hands of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate and withdrawn from that body by its author, Mr. Muenter, of Stockton. The reason for the defeat of this bill was that it carried a provision that actions for damages would live to the same length as open book accounts as in the Statutes at present. This caused practically every big corporation in the state to be against the measure.

At the suggestion of several members of the Judiciary Committee, our Association has decided to ask for an amended by which a payment on account will renew a bill and the Statute of Limitations will run from the date of the last item instead of outlawing as bought as at the present time. A bill has been drawn along these lines and introduced in both the Senate and Assembly. We believe that we will secure the passage of this measure before adjournment.

While this is not all we had hoped to secure, it is a great improvement over what we have at present.

Wife's Separate Property.

We have secured the passage of a bill in the Assembly that will prevent a husband's defrauding his grocer by transferring his property to his wife. The bill provides that the wifes property shall be responsible for bills for for the necessaries of life with the exception of what she had when they married, and what may be left her by will or through the death of a relative.

Bills to be Watched.

The merchants of the state should keep close watch over several bills now pending in the legislature and use their influence with their Senators or Assemblymen to see they do not pass.

Senate Bills 250 and 276, introduced by Wright, of San Jose, if passed would take away the privilege of collecting bills by attachments almost entirely.

Assemblyman Coghlan's Bill No. 806, if passed would undo a great portion of the work that was accomplished at the legislation of last session, since it asks the repeal of the law which allows merchants to attach public employes who do not pay their bills. This law, it will be remembered, was secured at the last session of the legislature at a great deal of expense and trouble. If Coghlan's bill 806 should pass conditions would be the same as they were two years ago. We hope the merchants of the state will write their Senators and Assemblymen protesting against the passage of this measure.

Assembly Bill 369.

All the merchants in the state who handle patent medicines of any character should write their Assemblymen and Senators protesting against the passage of this bill. It prohibits merchants from selling a bottle of bitters or a box of quinine pills, or any other prepared article unless he be a registered druggist.

The retail merchants of California should keep a very close watch on the columns of the Advocate during the session of the legislature. Through the kindness of Mr. Powers, we will be enabled to give you a brief outline of the conditions of the legislative matters that is of interest to the merchants each week.

The bill making the husband and wife mutually responsible for the necessaries of life has passed the Assembly by a vote of 44 to 1. Mr. Dorsey of Bakersfield was the only member voting against it. We have assurances that this bill will pass the Senate by a good majority.

AN ALCAZAR SUCCESS.

"Old Heidelberg" is one of those rare plays of sweet and dainty sentiment and gentle humor that make universal appeal to playgoers regardless of race, sex or social distinction. It is a play that goes straight to the heart.

The songs of the students are delightful and there are adroit contrasts between the glad abandon of college life and the stern solemnity of court etiquette.

John Craig's "Prince Karl Heinrich" is a really great performance and Miss Lawrence is as sweet and appealing a "Kathie" as the American stage has seen.

THE MAJESTIC'S OFFERING.

The Majestic theater for next week offers Elmer Booth, the funny man, as the baby in "My Precious Baby," a condensation of about all the humor that is possible to get into one production. There is sure to be fun going every moment.

The success of the special matinee of Ibsen's "Ghosts" has induced the management to repeat its production at a performance on the afternoon of Wednesday, February 15th, with all the members of the former cast including: Adele Block, specially retained in the role of Mrs. Alving; George Stuart Christie as Oswald, Frank MacVicars in the role of Pastor Manders, which he originally created in London; John D. O'Hara as Engstrom, the most unique characterization of that part ever rendered, and Katherine Gilman as Regina

San Francisco Grocers Pass Resolutions Favoring Mills Which Stand By Them.

(By J. F. Paulding.)

At the regular monthly meeting of the San Francisco Retail Grocers Association, held Wednesday, February 15, a resolution was passed indorsing those mills which stand by the retail grocers.

The grocers of Alameda County have three mills which are maintaining a retail price. They are the Globe Mills, the Stndard Flour Co. and the Bay City Mills.

The San Francisco grocers have two mills, The Globe Mills and the Standard Flour Co. to whom they can look

Owing to threats of interference with the Keane Trading Stamp and Anti-Premium bill in the Assembly, a committee, consisting of Frank B. Connolly, Joseph A. Stulz, Ludwig Warnke and J. F. Paulding, went to Sacramento on Monday morning.

APPEAL AGAINST EXISTING UNFAIR LEGISLATION.

NECESSITY FOR GIVING CALIFORNIA RETAIL MERCHANTS THE SAME MEASURE OF PROTECTION ACCORDED MERCHANTS IN THE EAST.

Muenter's Senate bill No. 713 and Houser's Assembly bill No. 920 provides that the Statute of Limitations begins to operate from the date of the last item of the account and that a payment on the account shall be considered as the last item thereon.

As the law stands to-day, a portion of an open account may be outlawed even though the customer may be dealing with the creditor at the time. This works a very great injustice, since it practically lessens the time in which an account lives far below two years, which, in itself, is a hardship to the retail merchants.

New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and practically all the States whose large cities are recognized as the chief commercial centers of this country, have laws similar to this which we are asking. This fact testifies that the best financial brains of the country feel that such a measure is desirable and for the best interests of the general public.

This measure would work no hardship upon the honest debtor. The honest man who is temporarily out of work or for some other reason cannot pay at the time for the food he requires for himself and his family will be glad to have the merchants feel safer in extending credit to him. At the same time it will furnish the retail merchant a certain amount of protection against those dishonest debtors who are eagerly seeking to avail themselves of every technicality which may enable them to evade the payment of their just debts.

This measure would affect the dealer in necessaries of life more than any other class of trade. The furniture man, the wagon man, the piano dealer and the jeweler, who sell on credit, all have systems by which the title of the goods remains with them until the goods are paid for. These men are able also to refuse credit to any except those whose position is such that there is every probability of their being able to pay.

The dealer in the necessaries of life, on the contrary, is practically obliged to grant credit that may be asked, since the parties coming to him without funds must have food and the grocer is the one who has to supply it since there is no other source from which it can be obtained. These people ask credit because they are not in a position at the time to pay. Most of them have no property. The grocer must, therefore, trust to their honesty and to the fact that in the future, under favorable circumstances, they may get what is due them.

In other lines of business dealers can refuse credit. Grocers and butchers and other dealers frequently find that it is absolutely necessary to give credit. Men who receive their salaries at the end of the month or at the end of the week find it necessary to be trusted until that time. They cannot wait until then to buy the goods as they could if they were buying shoes or clothing. They must have them when they are needed and, therefore, a large portion of the trade of the grocers and butchers must be done on a credit basis.

The present law with regard to the Statute of Limitations works a great injustice on the merchant class of the State. The measure we ask would afford a certain relief without affecting any change in the present statute.

For twenty years the merchants have come to Sacramento at every session asking relief; this fact shows the great necessity for the same.

THE National Convention.

Frank B. Connolly's Account of the Great Grocery Gathering at Cincinnati.

We take pleasure in presenting herewith the splendid report of the National report of the National Grocers' Convention which was read by Mr. Frank B. Connolly at the last meeting of the "S. F. Retail Grocers," which organization he represented as a delegate:

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

Leaving San Francisco Wednesday, January 18, at six p. m., Mr. Stulz, vice-president of the National Grocers' Association, Mr Warnke, of Alameda County Grocers' Association, Mr. Wear, of the Toledo Scale Co., and myself reached Chicago Sunday morning at 7:30. After breakfast C. R. Lott, past president of the National Association, arrived upon the scene, also Treasurer Newland of Topeka, Kas. After a little stroll around the city we took lunch with Mr Lott at the Albion Cafe on the ninth floor of the Pullman Building, overlooking Lake Michigan, which was frozen over.

Returning to our hotel, waiting for us was Messrs. Sol Westerfeld, Sullivan, Liddell and Tebbetts of the Chicago Grocers' Association, and two grocers from Superior, Wis. They accompanied us to Lincoln Park to watch the tobogganing, skating and sleigh racing. Returning we were the guests of the Chicago grocers at a dinner and also a theater party at the old Iroquois Theatre, where five hundred people were burned to death last year.

We left Chicago at 10 o'clock Monday morning on the grocers' special, on board of which were the delegates from Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Colorado, California and Washington.

We arrived at Cincinnati at 9:30, where the Cincinnati grocers met us with a military band and lots of cheers. They formed a parade and we marched about two miles to our hotels, carrying our grips. Tuesday morning the convention was opened by an address of welcome by President Oehlers of the Cincinnati Grocers' Association, who introduced the Rev. C. W. Blodgett, who gave the invocation. Mr Oehlers next introduced Julius Fleischman, Cincinnati's popular mayor, who has shown himself to be a great friend of the retail grocers, donating $1,000 to the funds of the organization. He extended the freedom of the city and was followed by Col. W. H. Mellish, who, on behalf of the Chamber of Commerce of Cincinnati, humorously welcomed us to his city.

Next was the response of C. R. Lott, followed by Mr Joseph A. Stulz of San Francisco.

President A. W. Farlinger then delivered his annual address. He recommended that the National Grocers' Association devise ways and means of putting the National Association on a self-sustaining financial basis, that organizers be placed in each State, that a uniform rating system be adopted, that State legislation against trading stamps and coupon schemes be recommended; that mutual fire insurance be adopted in States allowing it; that a national law for weights and measures be adopted, that the convention indorse the Cooper-Quarles bill in regard to railroad tariff rates.

California was honored by the appointment of one of its delegates myself, on the committee of credentials. Mr. Pearson of Stockton was on the resolution committee by virtue of his office.

In conclusion President Farlinger complimented the association for having an able and efficient secretary like Mr. Fred Mason.

Secretary Mason's Report.

Secretary Mason then read his annual report. He told of his organization work throughout the year, paid a fitting tribute to the trade press for the help it gave and recommended that the per capita tax be raised if possible to put the association on an independent basis.

Interesting Special Addresses.

Dr. H. W. Wiley, chief chemist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, followed. He spoke eloquently in relation to the proposed national pure food law.

Mr. T. P. Sullivan of Chicago read an address on "Peddlers and Transient Merchants." "The Grocers' Influence," by Henry J. Scharberg of Kalamazoo, Mich.; "Scientific Salesmanship," by A. F. Sheldon, Chicago.

Tuesday evening we were entertained at a smoker and Dutch lunch, a thoroughly Bohemian affair. All kinds of German cheese, sausage, etc., Frankfurters and sauerkraut and beer were supplied in abundance. A stereopticon exhibition was given by the National Cash Register Co. The hall was a little too small for the crowd, but we enjoyed it nevertheless.

The Second Day's Session.

Wednesday a. m., January 24, we listened to an address by Edwin A. Krauthoff on "Debtor and Creditor"; "Parcel Post and Mail Order Business," by C. L. Griggs, St. Louis; "National Pure Food Law," Horace Auheney, Pure Food Commissioner of Ohio.

An able paper was then read by Fred Lorenz, former treasurer of the national association, of Minneapolis.

We next listened to an address by J. A. Van Hoose, president of the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association, of Alabama. Mr. Van Hoose, who, by the way, is an ex-minister of the gospel, was the finest speaker at the convention and was listened to with great interest by all the delegates present. His speech dealt with wholesalers selling to consumers, leaving out the retailers, and the manufacturers selling direct to the retailers, leaving out the jobber. He also said that the wholesalers' and retailers' organizations should be financed by the manufacturer rebating five cents a case to associations on all well known brands of goods.

Wednesday evening a theater party of delegates were entertained at the Grand Opera House by Klaw and Erlanger's immense production of "Ben Hur." The orchestra seats were all reserved for the delegates.

Third Day of the Convention.

Thursday morning we listened to suggestions from trade press representatives and an address on premiums, trading stamps and gift schemes by H. W. Schwab, director of the National Association.

Then came the final report of the committee on credentials, of which I was a member, showing 182 accredited delegates, representing some forty-five associations throughout the United States.

At 11 o'clock Thursday the election took place, showing the officers elected, namely: John A. Green, Ohio, president; Lorenzo F. Padbury, Missouri, vice president; Fred Mason, Minnesota, secretary; H. W. Schwab, Wisconsin, treasurer; C. J. Kramer, Arkansas, director; the other two directors were "hold-overs."

Association Managers Want Stulz.

When we arrived in Chicago Sunday morning there was no name mentioned for the presidency for the National except Joseph A. Stulz of California, who was the choice of the officers of the National Association without exception. Going down on the special train Monday the leaders of the different delegations spoke to me and assured me (as I seemed to be taking a personal interest in Mr. Stulz's cause, for Mr. Stulz, being a modest man, did not care to make any campaign for himself) that he was the only logical candidate and they all were in favor of him.

When we got to Ohio, Mr. Green was put forward for vice president and seemed glad to take the second place with Mr. Stulz for president.

But the night before the election, Mr. Green came to me and told me that as Illinois had a candidate for vice president in Mr. T. P. Sullivan and Missouri had a candidate in Mr. Padburg, that the leaders of the Ohio delegation wanted him to run for president along with Padburg of Missouri for vice president.

I found out that Ohio, which had 61 votes, and Missouri, with 20 votes, had formed a combination to elect Green as president, Padburg as vice president. They then got one other large delegation into line by agreeing to run someone against Fred Mason for secretary.

Mr. Sullivan of Chicago told me, as also did Mr. Westerfeld and Mr. Lott, that Mr. Sullivan was offered the directorship if Illinois (23 votes) joined the combination, but Mr. Sullivan said he would stay by Mr. Stulz and "go down with the ship."

Mr. Sullivan nominated Mr. Stulz. Mr. Correa of Colorado and Mr. Fischer of Nebraska, along with Mr. Gray of New York, seconded Mr. Stulz's nomination. Mr. Ashley of Ohio nominated Mr. Green, and in doing so paid a tribute to Mr. Stulz, expressing his admiration for him, but claiming that time and expense of bringing the president from California to the Eastern State conventions would be too great.

The vote stood: Green, 132; Stulz, 46. Several delegations that wanted Mr. Stulz as president, voting for Mr. Green after they saw his election was assured.

After the election the convention adjourned for lunch.

In the afternoon the convention was called to order by the new president, Mr. Green, to receive the report of the ways and means committee and to act upon the resolutions.

Adopt Strong Resolutions.

The following resolutions were adopted separately:

Recommending the appointment of a committee to urge the establishment of a national system of uniform weights and measures.

To make presidents and secretaries of State associations accredited delegates to the national convention.

To discourage manufacturers from selling to retailers direct, to the detriment of legitimate jobbers.

To express positive opposition to all premium schemes as applied to grocery products.

Calling on the American Tobacco Company and all other tobacco manufacturers to quit their tag and coupon schemes.

Protesting against all part cash premium schemes as just adopted by the American Tobacco Company.

Calling on officers to urge legislation against peddlers.

Confirming views of President Farlinger on matter of making packages with net weight.

To thank President Roosevelt for his interest in commerce and trade.

Directing the national officers to continue to wage war against all premium schemes.

Directing the national secretary to take up with cracker manufacturers their wrong and unust practice of charging for cardboard in their packages.

Instructing the legislative committee to push legislation against premium and gift schemes.

In opposition to rebates by manufacturers of grocery products.

Commending the Cooper-Quarles bill.

Recommending a national regulation to compel all government employes to pay their debts.

The usual vote of thanks to the Cincinnati Association for courtesies.

Liked May-Time Convention.

A resolution to hold the convention in May hereafter was offered. This was left to the executive committee.

An excursion given by Proctor & Gamble, to visit their soap works at Ivorydale, took place this afternoon and was quite an enjoyable affair. Twelve carloads of grocers and friends took advantage of the trip.

The soap company had a military band for dancing on the third floor of one of their many buildings and their young lady employes served a buffet lunch to the delegates.

In the evening a monster banquet took place. It was the largest affair of its kind I ever attended. There were ten tables, stretching the entire length of Armory Hall, which is about the size of our Mechanics' Pavilion. At each table were seats for two hundred and fifty people. A military band of forty pieces discoursed music. Fred Mason was toastmaster, but the affair was so large and the din so great that the speakers could not be heard and, finally, the program was abandoned.

It was a grand affair and reflected great credit upon the entertainment committee.

See National Cash Register Company.

Friday morning we had arranged a party to visit the National Cash Register Company at Dayton. In that party were three of the Minnesota delegation, Mr. Westerfeld, Lott and Liddell of Chicago, Mr. Stulz, Warnke, Mr. Pearson and wife and myself.

We were met at Dayton by Mr. Carter and Mr. Wollensberger of the Dayton Grocers' Association, who escorted us to the National Cash Register Company, where we spent a very pleasant afternoon, inspecting their factory and grounds. We visited two of the grocery stores in Dayton and an immense market, which was the neatest and prettiest thing we had ever seen, covering an entire block.

We returned to Hamilton at 8 o'clock in the evening, where we caught the grocers' special to Chicago, arriving there at 7:30 Saturday morning. Saturday we spent in visiting the large department stores on State street, and the stores belonging to our Chicago friends, who have butcher shops connected with their grocery department.

Chicago Entertains 'Frisco.

Sunday morning our hosts, the Chicago grocers, met us at our hotel at 10 o'clock and took us to see the Chicago library, a magnificent building, and to the top of the Masonic Temple (twenty-four stories high), from which we were shown all the points of interest.

We then took the elevated road to Mr. Sullivan's home, where we were his guests at dinner.

In the afternoon we visited the old World's Fair grounds, which is now Jackson Park, and in the evening we visited the Grand Opera House and heard the story of "Georgie, the Fireman."

Monday, myself and Mr. Sullivan visited the stock yards.

Monday evening we left Chicago for San Francisco.

National of Great Benefit.

The national convention appealed to me as possessing an enormous possibility for good to the retail grocers of this country. This was shown in their ability to induce the cereal companies to give up premium schemes. The instructive papers were also of value. The gathering together of a large body of retail merchants where they can devise ways and means for the general betterment of the trade conditions by presenting a solid front is of unquestionable value.

There is no one who would dare do anything that would antagonize us wrongfully.

A legislative committee of three was appointed, with our Mr. Stulz as chairman, to work at Washington for the passage of bills recommended. This position Mr. Stulz felt obliged to decline.

I learned that the State association grocers of both Minnesota and Colorado are receiving a contribution of two cents a sack for all the sugar used in those States by their members. They divide this money equally between the State association and the locals. In this way they have their treasuries full to overflowing and are able to properly carry on work they may take up. Both these States sent their full quota to the convention. If we could make an arrangement of this kind to finance our California associations I think that they would grow much faster.

State Association Important.

More interest should be taken in our State association by our locals.

Whenever any progressive measure is presented we should immediately take hold of it and put our energy toward making it an ultimate success.

We should suggest things both to the State and national associations that we consider a benefit to the grocery trade at large.

I learned that the grocers of Georgia are receiving ten cents a box rebate on every case of soap sold in that State by a certain soap factory. This goes toward paying the running expenses of the associations.

I hope that my trip will prove of value to this organization, as I have several suggestions and recommendations to present at our next meeting.

I will also be pleased to present a paper on how Ivory soap is made, as shown us at Ivorydale, and how the National cash registers are made, and how Libby, McNeill's canned meats are prepared. I consider that this will probably be of interest to our members who handle these articles.

In conclusion, I will say that we were royally treated, both at Chicago, by the Chicago grocers, and at Cincinnati, by the Cincinnati association. The feeling existing at this convention toward exerting the grocers' influence was very marked. I look forward to a great deal of work being accomplished this year along these lines.

I want to thank this association for the confidence they placed in me by sending me to the national convention as their delegate and I hope to make it profitable for them by my work in the future.

WE MADE A MISTAKE.

The "Trade" of Spokane calls our attention to the fact that an error was made in our issue of February 3rd when we told of a meeting of the grocers at which Henry Abeles, representative of the Cudahy Packing Co., discussed the matter of maintaining uniform prices on the products of his firm. This meting was held at Spokane and not Seattle, as was stated in our article, for which we were indebted to the columns of the "Trade."

FIXTURES ARE IMPORTANT

Store fixtures are very much more important than most retailers seem to realize. Old, battered, rusty, dusty, musty looking fixtures never make a particularly pleasing impression on persons visiting the store for the first time. Things that look bright and shiny and clean invariably impress customers with the idea that everything in the establishment is kept the same way.

We present herewith the picture of a bar recently built by the Pacific Store and Fixture Co., 3253-3259 Sixteenth street, who are the largest firm of their kind on the Pacific Coast. They can supply merchants with anything they may need in the line of fixtures at the best possible figures.

A STORE NECESSITY.

Money Weight Scales Found in Every Up-to-Date Store Throughout the Country.

In this year of our Lord 1905, it is almost as hard to find a store not equipped with a Money Weight Scale as it is to find one without a telephone.

Grocers, today, realize the value of correct weight and saving themselves time. This is done for them by a Money Weight Scale that is what its name indicates.

Such a scale is that offered by Pierce & Co., of 14 Turk street. These scales vary in price and are offered on such easy terms that the savings from them will practically pay for one in a store that does any considerable amount of business.

We would refer our readers to the announcement on page 10b, which gives some of the advantages a grocer derives from having such a scale in his store.

HANDLING CALIFORNIA SARDINES.

P. E. Lenfestey will represent the California Fish Co. of Los Angeles and San Pedro in this market. This company packs California sardines and mackerel in pure olive oil. They have the steadiest run of fish on the Coast at San Pedro and are able to secure the very finest oil for their purposes. The offerings of this company should prove very attractive to our grocery trade.

to your customers. In the first place, they will like the Shredded Whole Wheat products and find that they represent the ideal food with the maximum amount of nutrition; and the second place, you will be doing yourself a good turn as well as your customers. It always pays to recommend a good thing—particularly when there is a satisfactory profit in it for you.

The Shredded Whole Wheat products pay you a good profit, and keep on paying it constantly, as they are not a fad, but a staple — people who once try them, keep on trying them.

There's no food on the market which is better advertised. This means that the demand is permanent as well as strong.

It will be good business for you to speak a good word for Shredded Whole Wheat to those unacquainted with its merits.

BRINGS BUSINESS.

Quality in Condiments Attracts Customers for Dealers and Manufacturers.

Retail grocers know that one of the best advertisements for their stores is handling vinegar and condiments the quality of which will induce customers to come again.

It is for this reason that so many of the readers of the ADVOCATE have taken advantage of the information that has been carried each week on page 2 of our cover concerning the "California Home" brand of vinegar of the Pacific Vinegar and Pickle Works.

This firm turns out cider, wine and malt vinegars that are not only guaranteed to be absolutely pure but are guaranteed to be even above the standards required by the Pure Food laws of any State in the Union. In addition to this, they guarantee that the price will be satisfactory to the dealer, going to the length of agreeing to let him pay for the goods at his own price should he not find that, on their arrival, the goods are the best quality for the money he has ever received.

The management of the Pacific Vinegar and Pickle Works report to us that daily orders are reaching them in response to their offer printed in the ADVOCATE, by which they agree to prepay the freight on all shipments of vinegar ordered during the month of February. This is merely the result of making the trade a desirable proposition on desirable goods.

The feature of their offer by which they agree to allow the quantity price to the merchant who can handle from 5 to 10 barrels during the year and let him take and pay for the goods as he wants them is a very valuable concession to dealers who can handle quantities but are too wise to tie up money in such a way that it will require some time for them to get it back.

It is to be noted that all the risk in the deal proposed by the Pacific Vinegar and Pickle Works is taken by that firm.

PURE FOOD LAW DELAYED.

The legislative committee of the National Grocers' Association reports to Secretary Mason that the matter of food legislation will not be taken up by Congress this year. A committee, consisting of A. W. Farlinger, Atlanta; P. B. Otterbeck, Washington, D. C., and Finley Acker of Philadelphia, were received by the President on February 9. They had a long conversation with him and were assured of his interest in the pure food bill and his desire to see such a measure become a law. Mr. Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture; Dr. Wiley, chief of the Bureau of Chemistry, and a great many Senators were interviewed by the committee, who report that the impression they gathered was that favorable action would be taken on the pure food bill when it should come up.

DIVIDE THE WORK.

The delegates of the Minneapolis Grocers' Association to the National Convention at Cincinnati divided the work of making their reports in a very ingenuous manner. Secretary Williams was given the duty of reporting as to the deliberations of the convention which would be of value and interest to his association. G. H. Filbert reported concerning the entertainment tendered the delegates, and J. T. Williams reported the details of the trip of the delegates to and from the convention.

This proved highly interesting and enabled each delegate to cover his portion of the report more thoroughly than it would have been given otherwise.

WANT A GRAND PRIZE.

Condensed Milk Folks Say World's Fair Award Is Wrong.

Suit was brought this week in St. Louis against the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Company in the United States Circuit Court by the Borden Condensed Milk Company, asking that an award of a silver medal given to the company be changed to a grand prize, and that the exposition officials be forced to turn over all records and papers of the juries of awards to the National Commission for examination.

It is alleged in the petition for an injunction that the awards were fraudulent. It is further maintained that the National Commission had no right to delegate the supervision of all awards to the Superior jury.

Reference in the bill is made to the act of Congress governing the relationship of the Exposition Company and the National Commission, in which it is stated that the National Commission shall decide all disputes arising over awards.

The National Commission's action in delegating the final decision on awards to the Superior Jury is called illegal.

The specific case on which the injunction is asked took place in the Palace of Agriculture. The Borden Company avers that the awards on its brand of malted milk and that of an opposition company were made in different groups, and there was no competition whatever between the exhibits.

It is claimed that the commercial value of the awards is destroyed and the standing of the Borden Company's products is injured.

HELP BUILD TRADE

A Firm That Spends Money in a Way to Advantage Dealers

"You have more competitors every year and less competition," is what a dealer wrote to the Welch Grape Juice Co. recently. That seems to sum up the situation in as few words as possible.

It is really remarkable to follow the growth of this cohpany from 1896 when Dr. Welch put up a few bottles for sacramental use in his own church, to the more than 250,000 gallons sold in 1904, and the more than 300,000 gallons pressed last fall for 1905 business.

Within the past ten or twelfe years the business has made its great strides and during this time there have been innumerable competitors, who have entered the field, most of them to last only a short time.

The reasons for the success of the Welch company may be briefly put in two words—"merit" and "advertising."

The world's fair at St. Louis last year proved a great advertisement for Welch's grape juice. The two corners of the Pike were secured and with five other prominent locations on the grounds the people could not overlook this product, and 20,000 gallons were dispensed in three ounce glasses. The juice was served pure and in a manner fitted to advertise Welch's grape juice for the dealer at home.

There is surely no better way to advertise Welch's grape juice than to have it tasted and tested.

No grape juice was awarded the gold medal by the final jury. A number of grape juices, including Welch's, were given a silver medal, yet the display and prominence given Welch's juice on the grounds rightly gives to it advertising compared with which a medal is of little value.

An aggressive advertising campaign started in the January magazines; mediums with a total circulation of over 5,000,000 are being used to enlarge the demand for Welchs' grape juice, and when it is figured that only high class mediums are used and only a good class of people can use grape juice, it will be seen that the field is well covered.

There are many other ways in which Welch's grape juice is well advertised to the public. One of them is through a store at Atlantic City. The company has had a store for two years on the boardwalk in a good location, but this year a still better location has been secured.

The merit of Welch's grape juice and the advertising given it cannot help but bring the dealer a good grape juice trade if he takes advantage of the opportunities they afford. Attractive display matter is supplied to all dealers who will use it.

This company has ordered 2,000,000 labels for immediate delivery, indicating an excellent outlook for this year's trade.

TWO KINDS OF PROFIT.

Merchants Should Make Their Stores Earn Money and Something More Than Money.

There are two kinds of profit.

One is the dollars and cents kind. The other is reputation.

Many men who have not the last would give practically all their money earning capacity to secure it.

The wise dealer earns the two at the same time.

The retail grocer who does not figure on the reputation end of his business all the time, cannot continue successfully.

By selling cheaply, a man can attract a certain amount of trade to his store. This is especially true if he has a reputation of giving good goods. If he has no reputation he is able to draw people to his store by advertising cheap prices until people find out that he does not give good goods. This is where the merchant who does not seek to earn reputation as well as money fails.

The dealer who sells goods of which he is proud and through which his reputation is strengthened, not only makes the profit on the immediate sale but also on the sales that follow when the customer comes back for more. This is one of the instances where reputation becomes an actually money earner.

When the dealer can "money back" his goods he knows that his trade will be satisfied and that his reputation is safe. It is knowledge of this fact that has made A. Schilling & Company give the "money back" guarantee with their "Schilling's Best" goods. These goods are sold to the dealer at a fair price, which enables A. Schilling & Co. to guarantee their quality. The dealer is able to guarantee the quality to his customers and at the same time get a fair price and still feel secure that he is not being underbid by some competitor.

The further policy of A. Schilling & Co., of not selling to a dealer who sells below certain prices, insures a fair profit to the dealer who may handle these goods. Thus, he is assured of earning the two kinds of profit—money and reputation.

RUSSIANS WANT TRISCUIT.

Czar's Army May Be Fed On This Well Known Shredded Wheat.

A ray of hope has at last penetrated the black clouds which have for so long hung heavily over the Russian forces, and it is possible that it is to mark the turning point of the war now raging in the Far East. The ray of hope is found in the fact that the largest contractor for the Russian army has asked for quotations on Triscuit, one of the well known Shredded Wheat products of the Natural Food Company of this city, says the Niagara Falls "Journal."

This is the news that comes from London and it will doubtless result in a revival of the discussion as to what is the best food for an army in the field.

The news is of especial interest to the people of Niagara Falls, not only because it concerns one of the city's largest industries, but because of the manner in which the attention of the contractor was called to this product.

It appears that a representative of the firm visited the exhibition plant of the Natural Food Company in Tottenham Court road, London, where he saw the process of shredding wheat and making it into Biscuit and Triscuit. He was at once impressed with the fact that Triscuit would make an ideal food for the soldier because it presents all the muscle-making, tissue-building elements of the Whole Wheat in small bulk and in such form that they may be easily assimilated. He accordingly asked for quotations on Triscuit c. i. f. Vladivostock, via San Francisco. The Natural Food Company has already made large shipments of their products to Japan. Perhaps this it what the plucky little Jap has been eating. Certain it is that he lives largely on cereal foods and fish, and if the Russian begins eating Triscuit, there may yet be a "scrap" in the Far East worth reading about.

San Franciscans can see a similar exhibition plant at No. 1446 Market street, where The Natural Food Company have a miniature factory in operation.

Attracting Trade

PRODUCE RESULTS.

Displays Should Contain a Certain Amount of Attractiveness.

The object of the show window display is to produce results—chiefly to sell goods on display and indirectly to advertise the store, says Chicago Dry Goods Reporter.

Every trimmer does not keep this important point in mind when at work. A larger part are most apt to treat the show window displays in a manner that would indicate its use for beauty's sake only; that is, their efforts are bent towards making the display a showing of gaudy effects.

Every display must contain a certain amount to attractiveness to offset the goods shown, but the fault of many trimmers lies in the direction of overloading the display with flashy effects and neglecting the most important feature of a successful trade pulling window display—clean cut execution and good arrangement of the goods on sale.

Clean Cut Execution.

The advancement made in the art of window dressing in the larger centers at least has resulted in bringing clean cut execution and good arrangement of merchandise more prominently to the front than elaborateness, which in former years seemed to be the object of nearly all window displays. The aggressive merchants gradually realized the power of a modern show window as a sales and advertising medium and naturally resulted in making the displays of a type that would create a true merchandise interest. The window trimmers, realizing that for the success of the selling end merchandise properly shown is the most important feature of the display, bent every effort towards this end. The result is, as is seen today in window displays of nearly every modern store, less elaborate surroundings and clean cut execution.

Do Not Mar Effect.

There is perhaps no other business in the world that calls so persistently for change and novelty as that of the retail merchant.

Some people question why the large department stores of the city change their displays so frequently. There is only one explanation to this—it pays. A sense of newness, something different in order to obtain the best results must constantly appeal to the shoppers who are looking for new goods.

Perhaps there is nothing that will mar the effect of a display sooner than an oversupply of goods to be shown. While at certain seasons of the year and for special bargain trims the window display calls for stocky effects, the general run of trims should be made up of a smaller quantity of goods well arranged. Too many decorators are most apt to think that an effective display is made up in quantity to give the observer an impression of large stocks rather than to show the true value of the goods on display.

Have Good Background.

It must be understood that the background and surroundings of a display must be elaborate to that extent that it will not overbalance the attractiveness in the arrangement and execution of the goods displayed.

The goods shown must be so displayed in an original and simple way so that the passerby will stop and study the real merits of the goods.

When you start a window display do not make your plans so elaborate that you cannot successfully carry them out to the limit. It is far more effective to have a few goods shown in a unique and simple way than to have the display a work of partial execution and an unsuccessful attempt of some elaborate idea.

EASY TO OPEN.

A great improvement in maple syrup cans is that of the "Old Manse" Maple Syrup, which is put up by Manniere-Yoe Syrup Co. Their package is a screw top which, while it prevents leakage, is easily opened. The projecting edge of the can is large enough to permit its being grasped and turned with the hand. It requires only that a case knife or other flat edged instrument be run around the ledge and this gives sufficient leverage to turn the cap quite easily. This is a great improvement over the old-fashioned screw top. In these caps, a washer is used inside the top to prevent leakage and the top is then screwed on so tight that it is hard to open the can with ordinary kitchen appliances, especially since there is nothing to get hold of. Another disadvantage has been that the syrup often gets through the washer and deposits sugar on the inside of the screw top, thus making it more difficult to remove.

"Old Manse" is a pure maple syrup of the finest flavor. Pennell-Suydam Co. are distributors for the Pacific coast.

A VALUABLE ECONOMIZER.

A visit to a store, factory or warehouse where a plant of Bowser Self-measuring Oil Outfits has been installed will well repay anyone, for a plant of this kind presents a combination of neatness, accuracy, safety and economy. Those who have seen its workings and by investigation learned of its advantages, are loud in their praises of these outfits. By means of them orders for oil can at all times be quickly and neatly filled, without traveling to back rooms, down cellars or to other buildings.

As time, labor and, consequently, money savers, the Bowser Self-measuring Oil Outfits stand alone. The advertisement of this firm appears elsewhere on these pages.

SELLING PROFITABLE FLOURS.

Alameda County Passes Resolutions Making Jos. A. Stulz an Hononary Member.

Grocers' Advocate—The Alameda County Retail Grocers' and Merchants' Association held a very interesting meeting last Monday evening, February 20, 1905.

The principal topic discussed was the flour question. All the members expressed themselves as particularly pleased over the strength the movement for a uniform price on flour was gaining. Reports from all parts of the county show that the grocers are endeavoring to give preference to the Globe, Standard and Bay City Mills flour.

A reportthat has been persistently circulated by the emissaries of the flour mills is that the Sperry and Port Costa Flour Mills had not been asked in the right way to list their standard brands. This was emphatically denied by Messrs. J. B. Hopkins and L. Warnke, who told how a committee from both the Alameda County and San Francisco associations had met the representatives of the Sperry, Port Costa and Stockton milling companies on September 6, 1904, and had earnestly requested that the mills set a uniform price on their standard brands, such as would give a fair margin to the retail grocer. They told how the grocers had waited patiently from September 6, 1904, to January 4, 1905, for the answer of the mills and how disappointed the grocers were that their request was not only denied, but ridiculed and misrepresented.

The grocers are now more determined than ever to show the mills how large a factor they can be in the distribution of their products and are substituting, wherever possible, flour on which they are assured protection and a profit.

One of the representatives of the flour mills told the secretary that the mills sold the flour by their advertising and that the grocer cut no figure in its sale. The grocers of Alameda County are ably refuting this, much to the chagrin of the men that make these statements.

The statement that the Capitol Mills had not been asked to list their meals was also discussed by the grocers. It was considered that the Capitol Mills had had the same opportunity as the Del Monte Milling Co.

The Alameda County grocers are well satisfied to go on selling the products of those mills who are anxious to see them get protection and a profit. They are particularly gratified to see the Bay City Milling Co. fall in line by listing their flour.

In a communication from the Del Monte Milling Co. the following statement was made in regard to Cream Flake Oats, now on the list:

"The price of $3.60 per case delivered in Oakland, less 15 cents for the case if returned in good order, makes the goods cost the dealer $1.15 per doz. This, in the first place, is as low as goods of such quality can be sold for and allow anything like a reasonable profit to the manufacturer. In the next place the price of $1.15 per dozen requires the dealer to sell the packages at 15 cents each or two for 25 cents, and in doing so he makes a profit of $1.05 per case of three dozen, while if the oats cost him but one dollar per dozen the price at which some of your members seem to think they ought to get the oats, the retail price would be cut down to 10 cents per package and it would leave but 60 cents per case profit to the retailer.

"We are entirely in accord with the objects of your association, in obtaining for the retailer a good profit on his goods, and for this reason we are anxious to work along the same lines and to assist in every way we can and we shall be pleased at any time to be informed of what we can do to assist you."

Before the meeting adjourned, Mr. H. Duncan informed the association of the slanderous caricature that had been made of one of the best friends the retail grocer had ever had, Mr. Joseph A. Stulz. He said that the grocer should set an emphatic stamp of disapproval on all who vilified or supported the vilifiers, of one of their most earnest and devoted members. He presented the following resolution which was passed unanimously:

Whereas, Joseph A. Stulz has been identified with the work of the Retail Grocers' Association of this State; and

Whereas, He has been honored by the presidency of the California Retail Grocers' Association and vice presidency of the National Retail Grocers' Association; and

Whereas, He has been an earnest and faithful worker in behalf of the retail grocers, therefore, be it

Resolved, That he be elected an honorary member of the Alameda County Retail Grocers' and Merchants' Association.

Mr. Warnke made his report on the state of affairs at Sacramento and announced the passage of the anti-trading stamp bill, through both houses of the Legislature.

JAMES. G. REED,
Secretary Retail Grocers' and Merchants' Association.

AVERSE TO PREMIUMS.

A Texas exchange prints the following interesting and logical letter from J. A. Folger & Co. of this city:

"One thing that impresses us particularly with your publication is the fight being made against premium goods. It certainly seems to us that every package of goods should be sold on its own merits and not by the use of coupons, premiums, etc. For several years nearly all the advertisements which have appeared of our Golden Gate coffee have contained the slogan, 'Sold on merit; no prizes, no premiums, no coupons'; or, varying this, 'Nothing goes with Golden Gate coffee but satisfaction; no prizes, no coupons, no crockery.'"

Our exchange says: "We are pleased to feel that the Retail Grocers' Association of Texas has taken up the fight which heretofore we have carried on almost singlehanded."

SPOKANE GETS RESULTS.

At a recent meeting of the Spokane Retail Grocers' Association, a communication from the Pacific Coast Condensed Milk Company, manufacturers of "Carnation Cream," was read. The writer expressed his regret that there is any price cutting on their product in Spokane and indicated that the company would do all in its power to see that its contracts are lived up to and the price maintained. With regard to the contracts enforced by this company, the writer stated that they are in force as long as the merchants signing them are in business.

He cited a little trouble that the company recently had in Seattle. A large retail firm commenced cutting Carnation Cream and, not being able to persuade them to stop, the Carnation people placed the case in the hands of their attorney and brought suit against the cutter, taking judgment. The retail firm settled the same and promised to maintain prices hereafter.

The writer of the letter said they have had one or two other stubborn cases, but as soon as they learned the facts in connection with the above mentioned case they at once agreed to maintain prices. In conclusion he explained that the Carnation people are putting another contract on the market giving a further rebate, increasing the profit to the retailer and making it still more disadvantageous on his part to violate the terms of the contract.

Further replies to the petitions sent out to manufacturers some time ago were read. In this connection, the "New West Trade" says:

"The manufacturers are beginning to realize that in order to interest the retailer, he must be protected in a fair profit on their products and most manufacturers are showing a laudable inclination to co-operate with the retail dealers in this movement."

DECLARES AGAINST PREMIUMS.

The Malta Vita Pure Food Co. has advised Secretary Fred Mason of the National Retail Grocers' Association, that it has discontinued giving premiums with its products. All retailers will appreciate this action toward destroying a prominent trade evil.

WELCH'S GRAPE JUICE

Guaranteed Absolutely Pure

It is not too early to decide as to Grape Juice for 1905. There are all sorts of grape juices at all sorts of prices. But remember that the people who can afford to drink grape juice are the best class—they are the particular class. The physician who prescribes grape juice is particular. You cannot afford to experiment if you want to increase your grape juice trade. From dealers not handling Welch's, the story our agents hear more often than any other, is, "as soon as I get rid of this other grape juice I will buy Welch's."

An aggressive advertising campaign started with the January magazines. The list includes Ladies' Home Journal, Delineator, McClure's, Saturday Evening Post, Scribner's, Century, Outlook, Review of Reviews, Good Housekeeping, What to Eat, etc., and the leading medical journals. It is merit backed by persistent advertising that sells Welch's Grape Juice for you and Welch's is the only grape juice advertised to any extent.

The Welch Grape Juice Co. have just placed an order for 2,000,000 labels for immediate delivery. This gives an idea of the wonderful increase in the demand for Welch's Grape Juice.

Welch's Grape Juice Received Highest Award at Louisiana Purchase Exposition

WELCH'S GRAPE JUICE

Guaranteed Absolutely Pure

There is a wonderful increase in the demand for Welch's Grape Juice. Even at this season it enjoys a good sale and the coming year will see it more popular than ever.

Twenty thousand gallons Welch's Grape Juice were sold at the World's Fair, St. Louis, in 3-ounce glasses. We had seven prominent stands; we served it pure and it was most effective advertising. We made hundreds of thousands of new customers for Welch's.

Two hundred and fifty thousand gallons of Welch's Grape Juice were sold in 1904. We have over 300,000 gallons of new juice for 1905.

No other grape juice retains the delicious flavor and food properties of the Concord Grape as does Welch's.

WIDE AWAKE MERCHANTS.

Long Beach, in Southern California, has numerous progressive and wide awake retail grocers. The "Tribune," in a special issue of Feb. 6, devotes considerable space to describing the stores and methods of the various merchants of the town. Among the grocers who receive editorial attention are:

E. F. Fellows, of whom the paper says: "Mr. Fellows employs none but able assistants to wait on the trade, and all the modern methods are employed. He is progressive and enterprising, and is a capable business man."

Wright & Williams, who receive this credit: "Their storerooms, which are large, light and airy, are stocked with a full and complete line of staple and fancy groceries, teas and coffees. . . . The place is known all over the city for its neatness, and this counts not a little in the line of eatables."

W. F. Pascoe's store receives the following comment: "This up-to-date grocery store is under the personal supervision of Mr. Pascoe, and one glance at the heavily laden floors and shelves will show you the work of a master hand."

Of J. H. Baker, proprietor of the "C. O. D. Grocery," the paper says: "During his business career in this city he has won a high reputation for sound representations and high class goods, and is a well esteemed business man and citizen."

F. E. Walker & Co., who bought out the grocery of M. E. Swift about two weeks ago, receive the following notice: "They are thorough and competent business men. This is shown in the past record that these gentlemen have enjoyed, being in business in Worcester, Mass., many years."

Of A. H. Jones, Son & Co., the paper says: "This house has been established in our city for the past six years, and enjoys a very flattering trade, the business premises being fitted up with every convenience to facilitate the filling of orders promptly and satisfactorily."

Barnes & Brown, proprietors of the "Blue Front Grocery," are described as follows: "These gentlemen have been in business here some time. They have become so prominntly and favorably known for carrying the best goods at low prices, that their custom is drawn from all sections of the country, and they employ several men to assist them."

Atwater & Carl's store receives a very nice notice and of the grocers themselves the paper says: "They are progressive and enterprising and during the time they have been established here have made many valuable acquaintances both in a business and social way."

TO ADVERTISE CANNED SALMON.

According to the New York "Commercial," the canners of salmon propose to unite in a campaign of publicity. Henry Foitman, president of the Alaska Producers' Association, has advised that the packers pay into the association funds 1 cent for every case of salmon consumed in the United States. This would produce about $20,000 each year.

At present, the average consumption of salmon is only a little more than one pound per year for each person in the United States. It is thought that by properly advertising salmon, the consumption could be increased so that it would be looked upon as a standard staple instead of a rather rare delicacy.

FRANK B. PETERSON & CO., SAN FRANCISCO

UP TO THE GOVERNOR.

cers was invoked and the threatened interference was prevented. As a result the measure passed the Assembly with only one dissenting vote, Assemblyman Coghlan of San Francisco speaking eloquently in its favor.

The man who voted against the measure was Cleaveland of Santa Cruz. It is worthy of note that the grocers of Santa Cruz allowed their association to lapse. It is safe to say that if their organization were active, Mr. Cleaveland would not have voted against this measure in the interests of the merchants of the State.

Two Important Measures.

Every reader of the Advocate should write his Senator urging him to favor the passage of the law to prevent the husband from transferring his property to his wife in order to defraud his creditors. This measure has passed the Assembly and is known as S. B. No. 56. It provides that the wife's property shall be responsible for bills for the necessaries of life, but exempts property she may have owned when she was married or that may come to her by will or succession. It will be readily understood that the only property that will be responsible under this law is that property which the husband and wife have earned together of which the husband may have secured and turned over to his wife in order to cheat his creditors.

A measure that will afford immense relief to all classes of merchants is the bill that will change the Statute of Limitations so that an open account begins to outlaw from the date of the last item and not from the date of the first item as at present. This measure would also make a payment on a bill renew the same. We present in this issue reasons why this measure should become a law.

The bill has not as yet been acted upon by the Judiciary Committee of either the Senate or Assembly. We would advise that our readers write the members of those committees urging them to give a favorable report on this measure, which, while it helps the retail merchants, will not conflict in any way with other interests.

The Senate Judiciary Committee is made up as follows:

Lukens (chairman), Selvage, Shortridge, Ward, Wolfe, Savage, Pendleton, Hahn, Muenter, Carter, Bauer, Simpson, Broughton, Irish, Anderson, Wright, Keane, Mattos, Curtin and Emmons.

The Assembly Judiciary Committee is made up of the following members:

Duryea (chairman), Houser, Beardslee, Walsh, McCartney, Dorsey, Waste, King, Treadwell, Burke, Gans, Busick, Cleveland, Espey, Creighton, Manwell, Thompson, McGowan, O'Brien, Weyand Pryor, Devlin and Drew.

Grocers should write to their representatives AT ONCE, as this session of the Legislature comes to an end on March 4, and unless something is done NOW, they will have to suffer at least two years more from the present unfair legislation.

SUGAR EQUALITY PLAN.

The Indiana Wholesale Grocers' Association has issued a new price list on sugars, placing quotations on the equality basis again. This plan has been used by Indiana wholesale grocers before, but for more than one year was abandoned.

ANOTHER ROCHDALE DISSOLVES.

More than two-thirds of the members of the Mountain View Rochdale Co. have filed a request of the directors to appoint a liquidator to close up their affairs. The reason assigned is inability to secure sufficient funds to conduct the business.

CONFIDENCE IN GOODS.

There is Nothing More Essential to Success.

There is nothing more essential to success than confidence. A manufacturer without confidence in his own product cannot enthuse his salesmen in the lines he is sent out to sell.

The traveler without confidence in his goods is invariably a failure as a salesman, and the dealer who loses confidence in any of his brands invariably accumulates what is known in the trade as a "shelf-warmer."

There are dealers who can sell anything solely because they are gifted with a superabundance of confidence. Few are so constituted, however, and the only way they can get confidence in anything is by knowledge and experience.

The point for most dealers to note is that they should have a close and thorough knowledge of every branch of their business and of every line of goods they handle.

They should know the particular merits and smoking characteristics of every cigar, cigarette and brand of tobacco in their stock, the origin and process of manufacture of every line of pipes and fancy goods and all the other detail knowledge that will enable them to talk with thorough confidence to each customer.

W. T. Marshall has established himself in the cigar brokerage business at 402 Front street. His intention is to handle a domestic line of cigars which will surely meet with the approval of the general public, who are partial to a cigar which when placed upon the market will meet with a good demand. The cigars which are classed in his stock are well-known brands to jobbers in the East, who can speak for their reliability. Mr. Marshall has a thorough knowledge of the undertaking in which he is embarking, and as he is a young gentleman who has the capability of making friends and retaining them, there is no reason why he should not make a success in San Francisco. His father, E. D. Marshall, needs no introduction to the jobbers, as he is well known here, having been connected with the business for about 20 years, and is now representing the firm of Theabold & Oppenheimer, of Philadelphia.

Mr. Stark, of the L. Stark Co., of New York, will arrive in this city during the month of March.

W. H. Jones has advertised his cigar business at The Dalles for sale.

J. D. Whitaker is starting a cigar store at Independence, Ore.

Col. Alvaro Garcia, the senior member of the firm of Garcia, Vega & Carcaba, of New York, has returned from a month's trip to the Pacific coast.

Henry Arnke is fitting up a neat and artistic cigar store at Second and Jessie streets.

Jos. Ives is opening up a cigar store at Bellingham.

W. H. Spencer has succeeded C. B. Gardner & Co., cigars and confectionery, at Meyers Falls.

A. L. Fitzgerald has succeeded Fitzgerald & Yuilter, cigar factory, at Hoquiam.

The Marx-Newman Cigar Co., at Spokane, will start branches at Riverside and Bernard.

The Campbell Tobacco Co., of Greenville, Tenn., has sent out circulars to the local dealers in an endeavor to place their tobacco in this market.

"TOBACCO."

The anniversary number of this enterprising, newsy and up-to-date journal is one of typographical excellence, besides its columns consist of leading matter highly entertaining and beneficial to the trade. "Tobacco" is one of the most acceptable trade papers that reaches our desk.

A CHAMPION CHEESE CUTTER.

A cheese cutter that costs only $25 on easy terms and is guaranteed to do better and quicker work than any $50 machine on the market is offered on page 8 by W. A. Hawley, the Pacific coast agent. This is the "Dunn" machine, which cuts any weight cheese at any price per pound and is so simple that a child can operate it. Mr. Hawley explains the merits of his cheese cutter by stating that his factory has a greater capacity than any other similar factory and, by making more cutters than any other factory they are able to reduce the expense accordingly.

ANOTHER ROCHDALE CLOSES.

The Rochdale Store at Santa Barbara was very successful for a brief period. Its manager was a thorough grocer who won success for the company. He soon engaged in business for himself and the store then began to lose money and the company has now decided to go out of business.

YOU CAN RECOMMEND THEM.

In this issue of The Advocate special attention is called to the advertisement of the Seville Packing Co., on page 4. It makes an announcement that it can supply the grocers with Spanish Queen and Manzanilla olives in different sizes; also Pim-Olas and Baby Pim-Olas, the most delicious of all relishes The Seville Packing Co. has many imitators of their stuffed olives, but none of them give the satisfaction to the consumer nor sell as well by any means hence it behooves the grocer to stock up well with this article now, as this is the time of the year in which the demand is greater than usual.

Nicelle Olive Oil, another product of the Seville Packing Co., has been pronounced by the United States Bureau of Chemistry at Washington, D. C., to be the highest grade oil in the market.

While on exhibition at the Paris Exposition in 1900 it was given the award over all other oils. Nicelle Olive Oil is made and bottled in Nice, France, from selected, sound and mature olives.

Spohn-Patrick Company, Pacific Coast agents, will willingly give any information necessary by calling at their place of business, 18-22 Front street.

PUNISH SHORT WEIGHT GROCER.

Charles D. Leedy, a prominent grocer of Harrisburg, Pa., was arrested a short time ago and tried for giving short weight measure. Fifteen residents of Harrisburg testified against him. They all had a different story to tell. One found a half pound of cheese an ounce short in weight. Another found a shortage of four ounces in a pound of raisins. Another testified to a shortage of ¾ of a pound in a ham that was sold to him as weighing 7½ pounds. Another told of the shortage of 1¼ ounces in 2 pounds of sugar.

Mr. Leedy offered no evidence in his own behalf and was held at $500 bail.

LICENSE LAW FAILS.

The lower courts of Colorado have declared the Anti-Trading Stamp ordinance, recently passed in Denver, as unconstitutional. This ordinance practically legislated the Trading Stamp companies out of existence by a prohibitive license. The matter has not yet been decided by the highest courts.

A bill imposing a tax of $1,000 is now before the Legislature of Colorado. The "Trade" of Spokane says: "Thus far, laws framed along that line have stood the tests of the courts and the stamp promoters have been unable to overthrow them."

Clerk's Corner

SHAPE YOUR OWN COURSE.

The Future of the Clerk Depends Upon His Mastering Details.

"Many boys who expect to make the grocery business their life-work," says R. L. Means in an article on energy as the builder of a clerk's future, "have the belief that to be successful it is necessary to gt a start with a big firm, and to have a pull. Of course, a pull is a factor in any business at the beginning, but it is totally unnecessary and useless to the beginner who is calculating on the ultimate accomplishment. The place to begin has nothing to do with the end, as the effort of the individual will shape its own course, and may lead from a small corner grocery to a responsible position in a big downtown concern.

Hard Work Necessary.

"In the grocery business a man must put forth his utmost effort at all times if he is to be a success. He must learn all of the 'tricks of the trade' and apply them as he goes. The man who can master the details with the greatest rapidity will be the one who receives the first advance, and to reach the top he will only find it necessary to keep the pace. To do this it requires only hard work and ordinary intelligence. Application is the main requirement. It is the man who works with a will that meets success—the man who works for the love of the work—that is the type that eventually places his hand upon the top round.

Corner Grocery Type.

"The corner grocery type is subject to the same conditions as the big exclusive store type. He may, and usually does, fall into the rut of habit, and remains throughout his life on the same corner. He, however, has the same chances that are open in the exclusive store. He has the chance for expansion, and expansion is the result of well directed energy. The man in this class meets the greatest breadth of work in that he is the 'whole thing.' He is buyer, seller, deliverer, bookkeeper, and usually sweeper out. This is an advantage only in that it reduces the monotony to some extent, but the general knowledge gained is not sufficient to give him superiority over the exclusive store clerk.

The Delivery Man.

"Amongst all grocery clerks the one who does only delivering is the one who has the easiest time. He is exposed to the weather, but he soon becomes used to that. He has lifting to do, but the back develops rapidly and there is no lifting in delivering that does not become easy after a few weeks' experience. The way in which clerks show their energy is by doing more than their share, more than is allotted to them, but the deliverer cannot do this, for he can only deliver what is put on his wagon. He can easily come out behind, but never ahead In that way he is handicapped—a chance is taken away from him.

"In whatever light the grocery clerk may be considered, he has a chance to rise. All that is required is energy."

TRAVELERS TO DANCE.

An entertainment and dance is to be given by the San Francisco Commercial Travelers' Association on Wednesday evening, March 1st, 1905, at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street. It will be an invitational affair and, as is usual with the entertainments of the S. F. C. T. A., will be high class in every particular.

The trade is still at sea. The drop noted last week followed a slight decline in raws. There has been advances in raws since then that more than makes up for this decline.

COFFEE MARKET.

Lewin-Meyer Co. Report:
There has been considerable local activity since our last report. Holders have been making concessions and there has been considerable business in the Northwest and in Southern California.
European markets have declined 2 marks (equivalent to ½c per pound) for actual coffee. This brings it to a parity with the New York market. New York spots have not changed. The speculative market is up few points.

RICE MARKET.

M. Phillips & Co. report:
"The rice market remains quiet. Prices are held firm at recent advance and as soon as the spring trade opens we look for a big business. The low price of rice has increased the consumption.
"China rice and imported Japan rice remain the same as last quoted."

CANNED GOODS.

Canned Fruits—Are quiet, but gallon apples are firm, with stocks small. California apricots and peaches are also in very light supply.

Canned Pineapple—Paul Taylor Brown Co., N. Y., Feb. 13, report: "Per cable from Singapore the market has made a slight advance. Mail from London reports business decidedly improving, with considerable interest being shown by buyer. The present cold weather is more or less retarding business and it is a very good sign when the Singapore market advances in spite of this fact."

Canned Asparagus for 1905—The California Fruit Canners' Association has issued the following price list on asparagus f. o. b. common shipping points, seller's option, subject to change without notice, 2½-square cans, two dozen to case, per case: Mammoth white, peeled, $4.25; do white, $3.25; do green, peeled, $3.85; do green, $3; large white, peeled, $3.50; do white, $2.65; large green, $2.50; do peeled, $3.25; medium white, $2.25; do green, $2.15; small white, $2.15; do green, $2.05. 1-lb. square cans, two dozen to case, weight 38 lbs., 1-lb. square white tips, $2.30; do green tips, $2.20. 1-lb. tall (salmon cans), four dozen to case, weight 70 lbs., 1-lb. tall salmon-can asparagus, $1.35. No. 3 square can, two dozen to case, weight 94 lbs., 75c per dozen advance over prices of regular 2½-square. (This can is similar in size and weight to can used by New Jersey and Long Island packers). No. 3 round can, two dozen to case, weight 70 lbs., soup tips, $1.60. Gallons, one dozen to case, weight 100 lbs., gallon soup tips, $4.50.

Canned Tomatoes—Thos. J. Meehan & Co. write from Baltimore: "There is much talk about a reaction toward higher prices coming shortly. At present the anticipated movement is not in sight. The hope is based upon the steady buying which has continued up to date, uninterruptedly. Frankly, there must be a large increase in the demand to equal the offerings, and until this occurs the prices cannot improve."

Thos. G. Cranwell & Co., Baltimore, Md., report, Feb. 9—
"Those packers who have been offering tomatoes at 60 and 61 cents per dozen, peninsula, have apparently very nearly reached the end of their stock. This week we have found it more difficult to find any desirable trades under 62½ cents per dozen. We do not know whether they are entirely cleaned up, but at the moment we do not know of any good standards at this figure. This would indicate some little improvement in the market."

Canned Corn—The many very poor seconds being offered as "standard" still depresses the price of canned corn, although choice is good property.

New York—There has been a quick absorption of Maine corn at 95c f. o. b. Portland, Me., which is 2½c to 5c per dozen below the opening prices of last year and 5c to 7½c below the opening price in 1903. So rapidly were the goods taken that one of the largest packers sold out in two days. Most of the Maine packers have sold on contract all they desire of their estimated pack in 1905, giving no guarantee as to percentage of delivery. The trade has taken hold with avidity, which fact is in marked contrast to the sales of corn put up in other States. On the spot, no Maine offering; market nominal, $1.10@1.15; New York State spot No. 2, 80@85c; for future delivery, 75@80c. delivered.

DRIED FRUITS.

Holders of prunes expect them to move much better in the next few months owing to the comparatively high prices and scarcity of peaches and apricots and the growing firmness of evaporated apples. Prices on raisins and prunes are at the absolutely "low water" mark. Since stocks on the Coast are lower than they have been in years, while stocks carried by jobbers and commission men in the East are light, it would look as if prices would have to be better before the new crop comes in. New York advices report that the German market is taking up about 100 cars of prunes a month.

Chicago advices report: "Prunes, raisins, peaches and apricots are very much firmer, peaches being very scarce. Evaporated apples are in demand and prices are being advanced. Currants are firm. Peels are slow. Dates and figs are among the "also rans." Sultanas are receiving much attention from bakers. Blackberries are scarce and higher."

Currants—New York, Feb. 11, Hills Bros. Co. report:
"With the arrival of the vessels now en route, the market will be fully supplied, but it is not to be expected that any lower figures will be seen, as spot quotations are very low and about on a parity with the Greek market. Advices from that quarter show an unchanged situation, with prices firm, and a general expectation of higher figures as the season advances."

CANNED SALMON.

John Kallsen of Bellingham is quoted as saying:
"The expected big run on the Sound and in the Fraser this season will have the effect, in view of the present overstocked condition of the canned salmon market, of making it necessary for many of the Alaska canneries to remain closed this season." Another cannery man says only eleven Alaska canneries will be operated this season and that the market is now overstocked and prospects for packers there are poor. It is rumored that none of the P. P. & N. Co. or A. P. Association canneries in Alaska will run this year.—Seattle Trade Register.

The announcement of the failure to reopen many of the plants devoted to the packing of Alaska pink salmon, coupled with extraordinary demands from abroad, have caused a firmer feeling in the cheaper grades of fish, which, it is confidently stated, will eventually lead to higher prices.

Fighting Close Season—The small salmon canneries are fighting the proposed law to have a closed season in 1906 and 1908 to correspond with a similar enactment just made for Canadian waters. While it is held that the closed season is necessary to save the salmon industry and bring about a fair parity between supply and demand, the small concerns protest that it will mean bankruptcy for them. If the Washington authorities fail to adopt the closed season, it is hardly probable that the Canadian Government will continue the experiment.

IRISH MACKEREL.

"There is no change, although New York importers and exporters in Ireland are asking $2 to $3 per bbl. more for their holdings. As stocks, especially in New York, are large, the holders may have a different view as to prices after the Lenten season.

CHEESE.

Martin's cheese is firm at present quotations.

PROVISIONS.

The Armour Packing Co. report:

"The market is steady after the advances of the 21st, when lard, ham and dry salt bacon advanced ½c."

This market has been at bottom prices for some little time, and after a conference it was decided to place this market on a parity with Chicago market. As a result an advance was decided upon all along the line.

CANNED OYSTERS.

Cold weather on the Atlantic Coast has made cove oysters firmer.

SPICES, ETC.

Baltimore, Feb. 8, McCormick & Co. report:

Pepper—The market is likely to be very active. Stocks small here and also in Europe. If reported shortages are correct, all grades of pepper will positively go higher.

Nutmegs—There is no doubt that the scarcity in the East will tend to advance prices here. The market is exceedingly low and higher prices should prevail.

Caraway Seed—Market continues very firm, owing to high prices cabled from abroad. It is not likely that the low prices which have been in effect during the past year will prevail in the future, as all interested parties predict a much higher market value.

Gum Camphor—Market exceedingly firm, but unchanged, during the past week. It is predicted, however, that higher prices will prevail.

MAPLE SYRUP.

Pennell-Suydam Co., Coast distributors of "Old Manse" Maple Syrup, report:

"Owing to the steady and continued advance of Maple Sugar during the last two years (amounting now to over 30 per cent), is has become imperative on the part of the manufacturer of Old Manse Canadian Maple Syrup to advance their list price one dollar per dozen for gallons and other sizes in proportion. It is a well known fact that the production of Maple Sugar is limited, while the consumption of Maple Syrup goes on increasing year after year very materially. This condition of things naturally calls for permanent higher prices on this product in the future than has prevailed in the past. We are talking now of the absolutely pure high grade Maple Syrup. The fluctuations in the value of Maple flavored Syrup would only be affected by the prices of cane, syrup and glucose."

SARDINE WAR.

The New York "Journal of Commerce," in speaking of the prospective competitive war between the independent packing interests and the so-called trust, says:

"From remarks recently made by representatives of the competing interests, it is inferred that the cutting of prices which has been in progress for some time past, particularly in the South and Southwest, is likely to be carried to an extreme point during the next few weeks."

HARRY NELSON IN TOWN.

H. N. Nelson, manager of the Seattle branch of the Spohn Patrick Co., has been in town the past week looking over the field and getting in touch with local conditions. Mr Nelson has also been securing an addition to his list of available stories for the instruction of his numerous friends and customers in the Northwest.

E. A. Thamer, manager of the Portland branch of the same house, is also in town.

These gentlemen will return to their houses shortly, as they know the grocers of the Northwest are so much interested in the various specialties of the Spohn-Patrick Co. that they would feel it a hardship to miss for any length of time their valuable calls from these two clever young business men.

Monocles In the English Army.

About a century ago a British army order was issued forbidding officers to wear eyeglasses or spectacles. But a shortsighted officer belonging to a crack cavalry regiment had no mind to resign his commission or stumble blindly, and he invented the single eyeglass. When called to account by the authorities he claimed that the monocle, being of the singular number, did not contravene the order against spectacles and glasses in the plural. Red tape accepted this literal rendering of the law, and, becoming popular in the British army, the monocle was adopted by civilian beaus.

Amusements

ALCAZAR THEATRE.

The production of the "Merchant of Venice" at the Alcazar is well worth an evening to lovers of Shakespearean drama. John Craig's "Shylock" is a very human portrayal. He makes of the old Jew a faithful, kindly father whose failings are the instinctive results of defending himself against the social inequalities under which his race then suffered in Italy. The "Portia" of Lillian Lawrence is also a thoroughly artistic performance. The rest of the company are well cast. Another Clyde Fitch comedy is billed for next week. This is "Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines,' a clever play written for Ethel Barrymore.

MAJESTIC.

"Mizpah" is in its last nights. Those who have not seen this dramatic presentation of one of the most interesting of the Old Testament stories should make a point to visit the Majestic by Sunday night, when it will be given its last performance. On Monday evening ,the Mansfield version of "In Old Heidelberg" is to be staged. The production will be on a very elaborate order. This is possible because of the splendid accommodations of the Majestic stage. One of the features of the production will be the rendition of university glees and chorals by the double quartet of students.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

San Francisco is turning out en masse in appreciation of the splendors of "Mother Goose." The best advertising of this production is being done by those who have gone to see it and advise their friends to take in the show, too. It is full of laughs from one curtain to the other and at the last act the audience seems averse to going out even though the hour is well past 11. Cawthorne introduces some of his concertina specialties this week. There is only one week more.

CENTRAL.

"A Ride For Life" is the cause of much tumultous applause and many curtain calls. The scenic effects are marvels of realism. One scene in which the hero escapes through a blizzard on a monster locomotive is especially effective. The cast is thoroughly satisfactory. Next week "Why Women Sin" will be presented.

CALIFORNIA.

The daily papers unite in declaring the "Tommers" at the California to be the worst ever. They have two Topsys and a lot of colored variety actors, but with this exception the show is very, very bad.

FISCHERS.

This little theatre is drawing crowds by the excellence and variety of its vaudeville program. There are two performances each evening.

CHUTES.

It would seem as if there were no end to the novelties that are presented by this great pleasure grounds. It is worth the price of admission to see the great circle-swing with its myriad of incandescent lights whirling people around in the airship boats. Bigney, the diver, who drops almost 100 feet into a small tank of water, is probably the most daring of his class. The program in the free theatre is remarkably good.

OWEN KELLY FASTS.

Eccentric Philadelphia Wholesale Grocer Acts in a Peculiar Manner.

Last week the Los Angeles papers told of the arrest of Owen Kelly, the wealthy Philadelphia grocer, who has been missing so long. On his arrest, Kelly admitted his identity and that he had embezzled more than $20,000. No warrant exists charging him with embezzlement.

Philadelphia dispatches state that the police department will not send for Kelly, but one of his friends will come out for him instead. Kelly's family had offered a reward of $1,000 for his location and it is stated that any shortages he may be responsible for will be covered by his friends.

Dispatches from Los Angeles state that Kelly refuses to take food. The police department fear that he is demented and intends to commit suicide in this manner.

"ADVOCATE" HELPS ADVERTISER.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 16, 1905.

A. H. Powers, San Francisco, Cal.,

Dear Sir: Enclosed you will find postal card, which is an indication of what an advertisement in the Retail Grocers' Advocate brings forth. It is one of many. As we have advertised exclusively in your paper up to date, it simply goes to show that we have had returns for the money paid you.

I shall send you, in a short time, a cut of the weigher we placed in Mr. Newberry's new store, and by the way, that store of Newberry's is worthy of a ten-page "write up," and the "Bond Weigher" we placed in it, consisting of 8 bins, one of which has a capacity of nearly 5,000 pounds of sugar, is simply an indication of the marvelous way in which Newberry has designed to handle his retail grocery business on the best and most economical lines imaginable.

The W. H. Postan Co. of Pomona has installed a "Bond Weigher."

Russell Bros. of San Bernardino have done the same thing.

C. W. Woodberry of Pasadena has likewise seen the light and is neglecting his other business while watching the operation of his new machine.

The Herlihy Co. of Pasadena are likewise putting up their sugar through a "Bond Weigher."

Adams & Hellinghausem have installed a "Bond Weigher.'

Goldberg, Bowen Co. of San Francisco have made the discovery that they cannot do without our machine.

The Farmers' Union of San Jose have never seen their way clear to deprive themselves of the use of the "Weigher" we demonstrated before the Grocers' Convention almost a year ago.

The list price of "Bond Weighers" has been set as follows:

The Portable Outfit, $150.

The Single Bin Outfit, $125.

The Two Bin Outfit, $175.

And on these prices we are for the present and for the purpose of introducing them on the coast, making a discount of 25 per cent. and selling the weighers on easy terms.

Truly yours,

BOND SCALE CO., per H. H. M.

ASSOCIATION NOTES.

St. Paul.—Secretary J. J. Ryan, in his annual report, states that $3,986.47 was collected for members by the Association and that the grocers collected as much more through blanks furnished them. The amounts collected are turned over to the grocers at meetings only. This has increased attendance 25 per cent. Through the cooperation of the St. Paul jobbers and city salesmen, the grocers have maintained a profit on oil, soap, sugar, flour, butter, coffee, etc. In addition to this the jobbers appropriated at least $1,600 for tickets, advertising, etc., in 1904. Mr. Ryan says 'The primary object of all grocers' associations is to get a reasonable profit on goods sold and reduce expenses and losses to a minimum."

Sacramento, Calif.—The daily papers carry an advertisement signed by 60 retail grocers in which they say: "We hereby agree not to give trading stamps' cash checks, cash register discounts, premiums or rebates of any kind after January 31st, 1905."

Helena, Mont.—The grocers of Montana held their annual State Convention January 17th and 18th.

Placerville, Calif.—The retail merchants of El Dorado county have formed an association with headquarters in this city to co-operate with the State Retail Grocers' and Merchants' Association. Nearly all the prominent retailers of the county have joined the association.

St. Louis, Mo.—The members of the St. Louis Grocers' Association are going to give themselves a "$1 dinner." They have invited all the retail grocers of the city and some of the wholesalers to be present. The committee expects to seat 500 grocers at the banquet.

FLOUR PROFITS.

at the present time as their protectors and friends.

It is up to the grocers themselves whether they are to have a flour profit or not and also as to whether they are to have the friendly protection of ALL the mills.

If the grocers continue to handle the flour of those mills who take no interest in helping them secure a profit they will not have the protection of those mills, since the position they take is that the San Francisco grocers do not want them to help the trade get a profit.

The writer knows that the trade in San Francisco does NOT want to be continually confronting a $1.20 price on flour. It is up to the grocers to let the mills know it by handling those flours that give them a profit whenever they can.

The merchants of Haywards, Centerville and that vicinity are paying $4.80 for flour, paying freight from San Francisco and selling at $5 per barrel.

There is only one relief from this condition. They must handle the product of those three mills who agree to assist them in securing a profit.

The grocers of the entire State are interested in this opportunity of securing flour profits and when enough of them insist that those mills with whom they deal shall establish a retail price that will pay for the handling, they will receive that protection.

A prominent grocer recently remarked that he did not believe the retailer would be dictated to by the manufacturer. At the same time this grocer was one of a large number who were trying to have the Legislature dictate to him and tell him he could not give out trading stamps.

Every grocer is being dictated to, more or less, all the time.

If your neighbor cuts a price and you have to meet the cut, it is that dealer who is trying to get his competitor's trade, who dictates to you the price at which you MUST sell.

If your neighbor gives premiums and thus compels you to do likewise, he is dictating to you that much.

If your neighbor keeps open late and forces you to do likewise, against your wish, he is dictating your policy.

All these dictations are to your detriment.

If a manufacturer establishes a price which allows you a profit, it is surely a very pleasant and desirable dictation and should be encouraged accordingly.

The retailers have been clamoring for protection from cut prices for many years. As soon as any attempt is made in their behalf, a few will always set up a cry that it is an advertisement for certain individuals, etc.

We are thankful to say that they are not numerous. Their cries reach far, however. Even a little whisper from some grocer, that he is not in favor of a retail selling price, becomes almost a roar by the time it has been told a few times by several men who want to use it for their own selfish purposes.

The salesmen who are seeking arguments adverse to such a movement are glad to hear such remarks. They are carried from one to another and finally reach the unfriendly trade press where they are distorted and misrepresented still further.

The retailers of San Francisco who want profits have now an opportunity such as has never been offered them before. If they wish to control their own business and not continue to submit to having their selling prices fixed by rivals (some of whom pay 40 cents on the dollar) and secure conditions that will pay them to remain in business.

If, on the other hand, they use their influence against it they may break down the only practical opportunity that has as yet been offered them of securing a condition that will make the grocery business profitable.

THE RICE CROP OF JAPAN.

The Japan "Weekly Mail" announces that an extraordinary rice crop is expected in Japan this year.

The Tokio newspapers publish the following official statement, which gives the estimate of the 1904 crop, made after September 1, compared with the production of the four preceding years, and the average production of the past seven years, omitting the best and the worst:

	Bushels.
1900	212,268,211
1901	240,154,988
1902	189,056,480
1903	237,905,720
1904	259,837,696
Average	216,520,155

The three provinces of Nagasaki, Fukuoka and Kumamato report a slight falling off in production, but this is more than offset by the increase in the other provinces, the total production, as indicated by this forecast, being 20 per cent above the average and exceeding the crop of 1903 by 21,931,976 bushels.

APPEAL ON TRADING STAMPS.

The trading stamp law of Denver is before the Supreme Court of that State. A merchant named Frueauff was fined $100 in the Police Court for violating the city ordinance relative to gift schemes. The Superior Court overruled the decision. The Denver grocers have now taken the case to the Supreme Court to learn which court was right as to the constitutionality of their law.

Points to Watch

FISH.

Norway mackerel, ones and twos, are very firmly held.

MAPLE SYRUP.

The fact that many States are enforcing their pure food laws require that manufacturers use real maple sap in their syrup. This has so increased the demand that prices are firming decidedly.

CANNED ASPARAGUS.

Canners made only 40 per cent deliveries of large white asparagus last year. Twice as many orders have been booked this year, although the canners do not expect any larger pack.

CANNED TOMATOES.

The association has withdrawn prices on solid pack, on which they advanced their prices last week. Eastern reports are of increased demand for goods of high quality.

FLOUR.

It pays the grocer to handle a flour that gives him a profit and cannot be sold cheaper by some one else. He can sell the other brands, too, but the wise dealer makes a leader of the goods of whose prices he is sure.

NEW LIQUOR HOUSE.

P. Claudius & Co. is the sign over the store at 300-306 Front street, so long occupied by Coghill & Kohn, wholesale grocers. The new firm will do a general wholesale liquor business. Mr. Claudius has many friends among the grocers, to whom he sold the goods of the Crown Distilleries.

SHORT COUNT PICKLES.

A grocer of St. Joseph, Mo., writes the "Interstate Grocer" that in a barrel of sweet pickles billed at 1500, there was a shortage of 270 pickles. A loss to them on a half barrel of $1.25. The letter concludes:

Moral: You should always count your pickles before paying for them.

CHARLES BRANDENSTEIN WEDS.

The trade will hear with interest of the marriage of Charles Brandenstein, the youngest son of M. J. Brandenstein, who was married this week to Miss Mack, whose father is at the head of one of the largest drug houses of the Coast. Mr. Brandenstein is one of the few rich men's sons who have inherited the brains and ability that gives to wealth a four-fold value. He is one of the most popular young merchants on the street and will carry with him the best wishes and kindliest congratulations of all who have the pleasure of knowing him.

The young couple will make an extended European tour.

OVER 700 GET PROFITS

Opportunity to Make Money on Flour Has at Last Arrived.

By J. F. Paulding.

The grocers of San Francisco, Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley have at last been accorded the protection that has been in effect in other communities, for the past two years.

The first mill to come to the rescue of the grocers was the Globe Grain and Milling Co., who, in October, issued a card guaranteeing at least 15c per sack profit on every sack of flour sold by their customers.

The next was the Standard Flour Co., whose product is manufactured by the Phoenix Mills of Sacramento. They listed their flour in January and guaranteed a profit of at least 15c per sack.

In February, the Bay City Mills of Oakland listed two brands of flour, guaranteeing a profit of at least 15c per sack.

The First Opportunity Offered.

This is the first opportunity the grocers of the bay cities have had of making a profit on flour.

To say the grocers would not accept this chance of making money on one of their largest staples, would be questioning their intelligence.

Over 700 grocers are now pushing the sale of:

"A 1,"
"Banquet,"
"Silver Star,"
"Summit Snow,"
"Bay City" and
"White Foam."

The additional profits secured on flour since October can be attributed to the work of the California Retail Grocers and Merchants' Association. They have worked diligently in behalf of their members in the bay cities and the grocers are beginning to appreciate the work which has assured them

TRADING STAMPS DOOMED

Governor Pardee Signs Bill That Frees Merchants From Slavery.

Governor Pardee signed Keane's Anti-Trading Stamp bill on Tuesday, March 7th. This law now goes into effect in May 6th.

The retail grocers of the State must be prepared to keep the control of the situation in their own hands. They are fighting with wily and powerful antagonists—the trading stamp companies—who not only have enormous wealth, but a great deal of experience in the matter of fighting anti-trading stamp laws. They are formidable opponents and will leave no stone unturned to accomplish their end.

The merchants of the State must be prepared to take the initiative in this matter. As soon as the law becomes operative, they must be ready to put it into effect.

They should arrest all the large firms handling trading stamps as soon as the law will allow. They should keep on arresting these firms two or three times every day as long as they keep on giving trading stamps. They will then have no trouble with the small dealers.

The law must be obeyed until it is proven to be unconstitutional. It will not be enough to establish a test case. The merchants must keep on arresting those parties who violate the law and they will be able to save themselves from this curse which now costs them so dearly.

By prompt action in this way they can secure the abolishment of trading stamps by the smaller dealers and if they insist on the enforcement of the law vigorously they will also secure its abolishment by the large dealers.

Stamp Companies "Welchers."

Every dealer in the State should explain to his customers that the trading stamp companies in Massachusetts and other Eastern States where trad-

GETTING PROFITS ON FLOUR

Methods Proposed by the State Grocers' Association for Preventing Unnecessary Cutting on Flour.

The course of action suggested for preventing unnecessary cutting on flour is as follows:

First—Demand of the mills that they shall, without exception, insist that Every Grocer, big and little alike, shall ask at least 15 cents a sack more than the list price for their standard brands of flour. This would be $1.35 on standard flours today, and cut off the supplies of any dealer that sells for less.

Second—That the retail grocers, whenever they can, recommend and sell to their trade those brands of flour on which they get a profit and that are protected by the mills, and that they know are not being sold for less money by a competitor.

Third—That they carry the brands of flour that their trade demands and meet competition. But only sell the flour on which they do not get a fair profit when they cannot sell the flour which pays a profit and which they know is not being sold for less than their price by any one else.

Fourth—That they tell drummers of the other mills what they are doing and urge them to have their houses protect the grocers, too.

We feel that there is everything to gain by this policy and nothing to lose.

The mills and their men do not hesitate to say that the grocers of San Francisco are different from the grocers of other cities. They say they can afford to "stand in" with the grocers across the bay, but that it is not necessary for them to treat the grocers of San Francisco with the same consideration.

We think that there are enough thinking, active business men in the grocery business to convince them that they have made a mistake.

Are you willing to help?

Or are you one of the "different kind" the mills talk to the Oakland grocers about that they do not have to treat friendly?

ORGANIZATION TRIUMPHS

Splendid Recognition of the Influence and Value of State Grocers' Association.

By J. F. Paulding.

No better proof of the value of organized effort was ever given than the results of our fight for the passage of the law to prevent the husband from defrauding his creditors for the necessaries of life by transferring his property to his wife.

Our measure was defeated in the Assembly, lacking three votes of having enough to pass. We had the bill amended in order to exempt from its provisions the property the wife might have had prior to her marriage and that property that might be willed to her or come to her through the death of a relative. In other words, we sought merely to protect the dealer in the necessaries of life from dishonesty on the part of the debtors who, by juggling with his property, would seek to evade paying for food his family had eaten and the clothes they had worn.

Before the measure came up for reconsideration, every Assemblyman who had voted against the bill had received from one to fifty letters and telegrams from his constituents telling him why they expected him to vote for the measure. It was then passed with only one dissenting vote.

Affiliating Members Help.

When this measure came up in the Senate it received 11 votes favorable and there were 11 votes against it. This would have denied its passage had not Senator Mueller, the father of the bill, moved for its reconsideration. Before the bill came up for final passage, each of the 11 Senators who had voted against the bill had heard from their constituents through the mail and by telegram and they realized that the merchants knew what they wanted and knew that what they asked for was only fair and proper. When the bill came up for final passage it was passed without a dissent.

Another measure in which the value of organized effort was shown was that the bill to exchange the law regarding the statute of limitations that an open account would be made to begin to outlaw from the date of the last item and a payment would renew the account.

This measure will be of enormous value to the retail merchants of the State.

It was introduced at the suggestion of various members of the Legislature who refused to support a measure to extend the statute of limitations on open accounts to four years.

Merchants Carry Weight.

The morning that this measure came up for vote in the Assembly, every member of the Lower House received a communication from the State Association explaining the law and its value to retail merchants as a class and explaining why the State Association urged its passage. Twenty minutes after the members had received these letters, the bill came up for passage and there was only one dissenting vote.

While this was going on in the Lower House the Senate Judiciary Committee had the same law under consideration and decided to report unfavorably upon it and advise that it should not pass. They then went up to the Senate Chamber where they received letters from the State Association also. They shortly afterwards received from the Assembly the same

ANTI-TRADING STAMP LAW.

Full Text of the Measure That Attorneys Say Will Free California Merchants.

We give herewith the full text of the anti-trading stamp law which has been favorably acted on by both Senate and Assembly, thanks to the effective work of the State Grocers' Association and its affiliating members.

This law is based upon the principal that the giving of trading stamps or coupons to be redeemed in merchandise, unidentified at the time, is in reality a gambling device and as such is against public policy and public morals. The attorneys of the State Grocers' Association hold that the laws of California allow the Legislature to enact necessary laws to regulate such businesses as the giving of trading stamps, etc., and ever to absolutely prohibit them since they are based upon a "get something for nothing" offer that is against public policy and corruptive of public morals and therefore subject to be governed and regulated by the state under its police power.

The law will go into effect 60 days after it is signed by the Governor. It will then be up to the merchants of the State to carry it without delay to the Supreme Court for is judgmtent.

The bill is as follows:

Section 1. Whoever sells or exchange any property or offers or attempts so to do upon a representation, advertisement, notice or inducement that anything unidentified by or unselected by the purchaser at or before the time of the sale or exchange, or upon a representation, advertisement, notice or inducement that anything whose precise nature is not so known to the purchaser at the time of the sale or exchange as to be completely identified beyond the necessity of any further or other selection, or upon a representation, notice, advertisement or inducement that any property whose selection will depend upon chance or hazard in any manner whatsoever, is or is to be delivered, or received, or in any way connected with, or is a part of, the transaction as a prize, premium or premium gift; or whoever sells or exchanges any property, or offers or attempts so to do, upon a representation, advertisement, notice or inducement that a stamp, trading stamp, coupon or other device which entitles the purchaser to demand or receive either from the vendor or from any other person, company, association or corporation any other property unselected by, or identified by, the purchaser at or before the time of the said sale or exchange, or which entitles the purchaser to demand or receive, either from the vendor or from any other person, corporation, association or company, anything whose precise nature is not so known to the purchaser at the time of the said sale or exchange as to be completely identified beyond the necessity of any further or other selection or which entitles the purchaser to receive, or demand, either from the vendor or from any other person, corporation, association or company any property whose selection will depend upon chance or hazard in any manner whatsoever, is to be delivered, or received, is in any way connected with, or is a part of the transaction, as a prize, premium or premium-gift; or whoever sells or exchanges any trading stamp, coupon or other like devise upon a contract to enable the purchaser to sell or exchange property, or attempt so to do, upon any representation, advertisement, notice or inducement of any kind hereinbefore mentioned; or whoever delivers any goods, wares or merchandise upon the presentation of any such stamp, coupon or other like device so given or caused to be given, shall, for each offense be guilty of a misdemeanor and be punishable by a fine of not less than twenty dollars, or more than five hundred dollars, or imprisonment in a County Jail for not less than ten days, nor more than six months, or by both; provided, however, that the provisions of this Act shall not apply or extend in any manner to the redemption of any such stamp, trading stamp, coupon or other like device that may have been issued as a premium, prize or premium-gift prior to the time this Act takes effect; and provided further that the provisions of this Act shall not apply or extend to any sale or exchange of articles in bulk, heap or mass, or a part or portion thereof, which sale or exchange is not made, effected or induced by or upon any representation, advertisement, notice or inducement of any kind hereinbefore specified.

A COMPLETE SALES FORCE.

Spohn-Patrick Company Make Valuable Additions to Their System.

The Spohn-Patrick Company have recently been making a few changes. There has been very little alteration in the personnel of their immediate salesforce, although that has been strengthened in several instances.

The changes were made necessary by the retirement from the firm of Andrew R. Patrick, who has been one of the partners for the past five years.

The principal changes in the staff have occurred in the Los Angeles and Denver branches of the house.

Negotiations have just been completed by which J. Tod Cook has become the manager in Los Angeles, the firm being known there as the Spohn-Cook company. Mr. Cook has been identified with the grocery world of Southern California for sixteen years. He has been with the Stetson-Preston Co., wholesale grocers, for a long time, resigning a highly responsible position in order to assume charge of the Spohn-Patrick acounts in Southern California.

Frank Heifferich has been entrusted with the management of the Denver, Colo., branch. Mr. Heifferich has been in the employ of the Spohn-Patrick Company for years, having been W. H. Moore's assistant for some time. He is very popular in grocery circles and is well posted on the needs of the trade.

Harry N. Nelson is manager of the Seattle branch. He has developed a splendid business in Washington, North Idaho, Montana and British Columbia. Mr. Nelson, at one time, covered the entire Northwest territory. The business increased to such an extent, however, that he was forced to entrust the Oregon business to an assistant.

E. A. Thawer was chosen to watch the firm's interest in Oregon. He has his headquarters in Portland, and from this central office he has been able to awaken the interest of the entire grocery trade of Oregon in the lines he carries.

T. W. Whiteley is one of the firm's old retainers. He has the management of the Salt Lake branch and has cultivated a fine line of business in Utah, Wyoming and Idaho.

The San Francisco trade is handled very largely by Al Rennie. Mr. Rennie has worked himself up by cleverness and a devotion to his business until now he possesses the high regard and warm friendship of practically every grocer of consequence in the Bay Cities.

The jobbing trade in San Francisco is being handled by Mr. Spohn and J. F. Medeau. Mr. Medeau has worked with the wholesale grocers of all classes of trade for many years and has been able, through his railroad connections, to extend favors to most of them. He is well liked among the wholesalers who are glad of being able to now extend favors to him.

John H. Spohn, senior partner of the firm, remains at the helm. Associated with him as vice-president and co-manager is F. M. Hathaway, who has been well known for years in the coast oil world of San Francisco and Oakland. The same efficient office staff has been retained.

Spohn-Patrick Company have a splendid line of accounts. They have scored in the matter of introducing and distributing grocery specialties both on the Pacific Coast and through the Orient that could be won only by a complete and well supervised system as they have established.

OAKLAND'S LIVELY MEETING.

Oakland, Cal., March 8, 1905.

Grocers' Advocate: The Alameda County Grocers were presided over by Vice-President H. Duncan, Monday evening, March 6, 1905. The members were pleased to find one of their usually silent members so well adapted as a presiding officer.

The price list of the Del Monte Milling Co.'s meals was discussed, and the secretary requested to ask that the meals be listed on a more profitable basis. The minimum margin of profit asked was 25 per cent.

The grocers expressed themselves as well pleased with the action of J. C. Westphal & Sons, listing their "Bay City" and "White Foam" brands of flour. In a conversation with W. Westphal he said: "We are well pleased with the plan of protecting the grocer and we would much rather give the grocer in profit money spent in advertising our products."

The showing made by the grocers of the Bay Cities with the Globe Milling Co.'s flour speaks well for the plan that gives protection and a profit to the grocer. That a new flour can be put on the market at an increase of 10c over the standard brands, is strong proof of the power that lies in the hands of the grocer if he elects to use it. If our grocers persist along these lines it is a question of only a very short time when our fight for better trade conditions is won.

We are doing our work with earnestness and vigor. We are encouraged by the reports of what has been done and what is being done in other places, but we are anxious about the results in San Francisco. Many of our grocers have asked the question and I would like to have some of our San Francisco grocers address the Advocate on what they are doing in the matter of handling protected goods. Yours truly,

James G. Reed,

Secretary Retail Grocers' and Merchants' Association.

RIGHT AND WRONG POLICIES.

While it may show lack of wisdom to bemoan the importation of Eastern or foreign goods that cannot be produced here as cheaply nor of as good quality, there is no excuse for showing favor to the imported article when the California product meets the quality and price.

The California Fish Company's cannery at San Pedro is packing as fine a fish as grows in the sea, in as fine an oil as grows on the tree. "Sunset" Mackerel, "C. P." and "La Croix" Sardines meet any competition, and every California grocer should sell them.

OVER 700 GET PROFITS.

of additional profits which they have been entitled to for many years long since and have not been receiving.

Are They Your Friends?

The following brands of flour are being sold at from $1.20 to $1.25:

Port Costa.
Sperry.
Golden Gate.
Drifted Snow.
Crown.

The manufacturers of these brands are trying very hard to persuade the grocers that they are their friends, and have been for many years.

If they are the grocers' friends, why do they not give them the same protection accorded the trade by the other mills?

How have they proven their friendship for the retailer?

Is selling flour to cutters with a special discount and letting those cutters sell at the price the bulk of the trade has to pay a friendly act?

They have been doing this for 20 years and have not stopped it now. Yet they say they are the real friends of the grocers.

We leave the answer to your judgment, Mr. Grocer.

RECOMMENDATION

You should be more than willing to recommend

Shredded Whole Wheat Biscuit

to your customers. In the first place, they will like the Shredded Whole Wheat products and find that they represent the ideal food with the maximum amount of nutrition; and the second place, you will be doing yourself a good turn as well as your customers. It always pays to recommend a good thing—particularly when there is a satisfactory profit in it for you.

The Shredded Whole Wheat products pay you a good profit, and keep on paying it constantly, as they are not a fad, but a staple — people who once try them, keep on trying them.

There's no food on the market which is better advertised. This means that the demand is permanent as well as strong.

It will be good business for you to speak a good word for Shredded Whole Wheat to those unacquainted with its merits.

THE NATURAL FOOD COMPANY
Niagara Falls, N. Y.

AGREES WITH CONNOLLY.

Vetern Organization Worker Urges California's Secretary to Further Activity.

Elisha Winters, editor of the K. C. "Journal of Commerce" and one of the vetern organization workers of the country, has written to State Secretary Frank B. Connolly commending the stand taken by Mr. Connolly that the National Association must have some great paramount issue of really national importance.

Mr. Connolly held that the one issue of equal value to the dealers in every part of the country was that which had brought about the wonderful growth and power of the National Druggists' Association, namely, having retail associations give active support to those manufacturers who should see fit to fix a fair retail selling price on their goods and refuse to allow those goods to be handled by firms who might cut the established prices.

In speaking of this matter Mr. Winters says:

"Dear Sir:—I have just read in the San Francisco Retail Grocers' Advocate your public criticism of the action of our recent national convention.

"I take the liberty of assuring you, Mr. Connolly, that in an experience extending over 20 years, you are the first grocer to my recollection, who has ever attended one of our conventions who has been able to see and point out the fatal lack, the missing link, as it were, of our organization and suggest a remedy.

"For the past five years similar objections were raised in a tentative way. The answer has always been 'Wait until the National Association is thoroughly organized.'

"We have been waiting for five years.

"We cannot afford to wait any longer.

"The one year that will elapse before our next convention is not too short a time to discuss this very important question you have raised. We want a definite proposition—a paramount issue—with a concentrated purpose to carry it out.

"As you clearly state in your article, the druggists have such a definite aim. You will remember that in my few remarks before the recent convention, I suggested that the confectionery and other organizations have definite aims. A national body without a definite aim, in my opinion, has no cause for existence.

"I shall have your article read and discussed at our next public meeting.

"I would like to unite our forces with yours and add other recognized leaders in organization work who would be interested in securing the results that I agree with you are necessary if the National is to live and grow in power and value.

"I think if your idea were crystalized into a definite proposition and mailed to the 184 accredited delegates who attended our recent National Convention, it would receive the support of an overwhelming majority of them at Niagara Falls in 1905.

"What do you think of the proposition?

"Trusting to have the pleasure of hearing from you at your earliest convenience, I remain. Elisha Winters."

DISHONEST AND DANGEROUS.

While very few retail grocers read the "Grocer and Country Merchant," yet in its free distribution it reaches many wholesalers and manufacturers who cannot realize that it does not represent the sentiments of at least a portion of the retail grocery trade.

The editor of this paper is a British subject named Menzies. He does not hesitate to attack every American institution from which he cannot secure a profit.

He was a warm defender of the trading stamp for many months. Quite recently he flopped over to the side of the retail merchants because he has a number of tobacconists among his real subscribers and they were trying to wipe out the trading stamp evil.

For ten years he did not hesitate to publish any dishonest libel against the grocers of San Francisco. During the past few months his columns have been filled with slavish adulation of a few men among the directors of the San Francisco organization. His motive was very evident since they were men who were opposed to the State Grocers' Association, every movement of which he opposes—a fact that shows how few grocery readers he has.

In his last issue, he speaks of the high-minded, progressive merchants who are at the head of the State Grocers' Association.

"Those ignorant and presuming (or otherwise, criminal) leaders of the trade that we designate as the State Push."

In the issue prior to that he denounces as ridiculous the efforts to rehabilitate prices, to secure favorable legislation, etc. Speaking of the work of the State Association he by some accident tells the truth. He says:

"All of these * * * have been promoted on the Coast by the 'Retail Grocers' Advocate,' * * * whose chief ally in this work has always been Joseph A. Stulz. This partnership has been at work now for eight or nine years. * * * Recently they have been joined by a young man called Connolly."

MAKES SNIDER CATSUP.

Mr. Jefferson Livingston, manager and one of the largest stockholders of the T. A. Snider Preserve Co., has been spending the past week in San Francisco after a sojourn in Southern California.

Mr. Livingston has been helping make Snider's Catsup ever since the business was started 21 years ago. The success of the company is due very largely to his splendid capacity as a manager and his executive ability in controlling a large sales force. It is through the effective co-operation of the home office with its many representatives that Snider's Catsup has reached the splendid position it occupies. Today, not only in California, but in every state of the Union, it is the largest seller of its kind on the market.

This is Mr. Livingston's first visit to San Francisco since 1896. He has been much struck by the wonderful movement of the city and especially the changes in the mercantile and manufacturing districts.

CAN'T PUBLISH MILK AWARDS.

U. S. Court Grants Petition of Borden Company.

An injunction restraining the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Company from publishing the awards on condensed milk was granted Tuesday in the United States Circuit Court by District Judge Pollock on the petition of the Borden Condensed Milk Company.

The injunction was granted on the ground that there was no competition in the condensed milk exhibits owing to an irregularity in the classification and award juries.

The petition also asks that all the papers and records held by the Exposition Company relating to protests against awards by exhibitors be turned over to the National Commission for settlement.

It is expected that the decision of the case will largely affect other protests now in the hands of the National Commission, and which will be brought into court.

Attracting Trade

Attractive Advertising Paper.

A New Jersey store mails every little while a store paper which they call the "Kitchen Furnisher." In this are advertised different kitchen utensils, all the advertisements being fully illustrated. Mixed with the advertisements are recipes for cooking various dishes and considerable general matter about the store offerings.

Free Goods One Day in Month.

A merchant is advertising what he calls a "Great Free Day" in the following words: "A certain day of this month has been selected and the date deposited with the Home Savings Bank in a sealed envelope. On the first day of next month the bank will announce the day and all persons holding sales checks for that day who bring them to us will get the cash returned."

Get Dishes Free With $50 Purchase.

A merchant sent out cards on one side of which was the store name and an arangement of figures. On the other side was an offer to give a set of dishes when total purchases amounting to $50 had been made. A payment of $1.95 was asked to cover freight charges, packing, etc. When the full amount was purchased the card was presented for the set of dishes. As stated on the card, for every sale of 10 cents or more a corresponding amount was punched from the figures on the other side of the card.

Sweeper Free.

An Illinois store, in advertising a 10-day bargain sale, announced that, with every dollar spent, in addition to the special prices, it would give a chance to secure a carpet sweeper free. The drawing for the carpet sweeper was announced to take place at 7 p. m. the last day of the sale.

A Novel Prize Contest.

The Famous department store at Clarence, Mo., hit on an original advertising scheme for a one-day sale this month. The store announced that it would present a barrel of flour to the man bringing in the greatest lot of women on one load. The women did not have to purchase anything at the store. All that was necessary was that they be 20 years old or over, and come in one load. Charles Head, of Macon county, won the prize. He put a hay-rack on his sled, hitched up four horses and then toured the country in search of women. He managed to squeeze forty-eight on the rack, but there wasn't room enough to have added a doll baby. Charles Barr brought in thirty-eight women, and Rade Long could only find room for sixteen. Great crowds were in the store all day watching the sleds come in and the management says the store did the biggest business in its history.—Merchants' Journal.

Window Signs in Colored Cotton.

The window sign idea may be worked out in novel form by going to a little extra trouble.

Instead of painting your phrase on a card, put it on the inside of the window glass in colored cotton of various shades.

Take some pieces of wire, bend them to the shape of the desired letter, and cover each with cotton. Then attach each letter to the glass by means of liquid glue.

As the letters will of necessity be rather large, short phrases will be found best for this purpose, such as "Choice Mackerel," or "Our Fish are O. K."

The cotton used should be of bright hue, red or pink, or a rich shade of green being preferable.

"Try one of these," the latter of course, in connection with a bulk display of something you wish to exploit

NAME OR QUALITY.

The Question as to What it is That Consumers of Coffee Wish to Pay For.

Retail merchants wish to present their customers with the coffee they wish to buy:

What is it?

Do customers want to buy coffee of a certain name or do they want to buy coffee that will satisfy their taste?

We would suggest that the grocer who would retain his coffee trade must give his customers the coffee that pleases them best when it is smoking in the cup before them without regard to what its name may be.

In regard to the matter of the name we question whether there is one grocer in a thousand who can tell by the coffee itself where it comes from.

Does your Java come from Java or Mocha from Mocha or Peaberry from Peaberry?

Who knows?

As a matter of fact, what is the difference where it comes from?

It is better for the dealer to buy coffee for value rather than for the name by which it may be known. The most exacting coffee roasters are now giving very careful attention to selecting coffees of whose uniform excellence they can rest assured. These coffees they market in cartons or air tight tins without naming the country or origin.

They advertise their excellence. They then depend upon the quality of the coffee being satisfactory to insure repeated demands for the same. In other words ,they lend their own names to the coffee they put up under their special brands, and thus assume the responsibility for the quality.

This is the policy of A. Schilling & Co. Their "Schilling's Best" coffee is guaranted to be of a quality equivalent to the responsibility of A. Schilling & Co. The dealer that offers his trade "Schilling's Best" coffee as a superior article knows that it possesses quality of high degree, just as he knows that A. Schilling & Co. possesses responsibility of the highest degree.

It is worthy of note that it is through the high grade package coffee that can be "money back" and are advertised in other ways that the retail grocers are getting back some considerable part of the coffee trade which has been drifting away gradually because of the efforts of the coffee peddlers.

Some of the Advantages the Grocer Derives:

1—They give the correct value of the article being weighed.
2—They prevent loss from errors in calculation.
3—They save time required in making calculation.
4—They are made better than ordinary scales.
5—With proper care they will last an ordinary life-time.
6—The pivots are of hardened tool steel, and with agate bearings inserted at the proper point, are practically indestructible.
7—They are sensitive to the very small fraction of an ounce.
8—They are an ornament to any store.
9—They are the only scale that is mechanically honest.
10—Customers, knowing them to be an honest scale, like to have their purchases weighed on them.

ORGANIZATION TRIUMPHS.

measure which had just been passed by that body.

It was exactly the same as that which the Senate Judiciary Committee had reported unfavorably upon. But the committee took up the Assembly bill that afternoon and reported favorably upon it, advising that it be made a law.

When this measure was voted on by the Senate, there were 14 votes in favor of it and 15 votes against it.

How the Vote Stood.

Those favoring the bill were: Anderson, Broughton, Hahn, Irish, Lenvitt, Leeke, Lukens, Lynch, McKee, Muenter, Pendleton, Rowell, Ward, Wolfe.

Those voting against the measure were:

Bauer, Belshaw, Carter, Coggins, Diggs, Haskins, Mattos, Nelson, Ralston, Rambo, Rush, Sanford, Savage, Selvage, Shortridge, Simpson.

Absent: Welch, Woodward, Mackey, Greenwell, Curtin, Keane.

The constituents of the men who did not vote for the measure were notified by telegram and telephone on Wednesday. They expressed their desires by wire.

The bill came up for final passage on Thursday. The Advocate hopes to hear of its final passage before we go to press.

The work done on the Keane Anti-Trading Stamp, Anti-Premium law is told in another column.

Administration Helps Grocers.

One of the strongest factors for success was the aid given the grocers by the present local administration. It will be hard to make the members of the Grocers' Association believe the stories of "graft" so widely published by sensational papers. They know that the only question they have been asked was: "What is the nature of the measure?" The help they got was on the merits of their bills.

The lesson of our Legislative experience is that if the merchants of the State want anything they must be able to ask for it as an organized body if they expect to receive recognition.

We have also stopped the passage of a half dozen measures that would have been hurtful to merchants. A full review of these will be given in another article.

Now, brother, write to the Governor about the two bills he hasn't signed. Let him know how many merchants want them.

NEW BOTTLING PLANT.

The Sunset Bottling Co., which for the past three or more years has operated their plant on Howard street, have now established a new and up-to-date bottling and cold-storage plant at 3109 Twentieth street. This same building was formerly occupied by Mr. Cuneo for bottling B. B. Beer, but the new proprietors, A. V. Sorich and M. Sosich, have made great and important changes in it. They have put in an ice plant and cold-storage capacity of two carloads of beer and largely increased the bottling capacity of the plant. The Sunset Bottling Co. will handle the popular Salem beer, made in Salem, Oregon. This beer is of a fine quality and has a good reputation over the Pacific Coast. The newly painted wagons of the Sunset Bottling Co., advertising the Salem beer made by the Salem Brewing Association, present a neat appearance on the street. Messrs. Sorich and Sosich, who are already well known to the trade, are now prepared to furnish them with a fine grade of bottled beer as they will bring it in car lots to their new cold-storage vaults and be able at all times to meet any and all possible demands.

STOLE WOLKING'S SUGAR.

H. Wolking of 565 Fourth street left four sacks of sugar in his wagon on Monday, March 6th, while he stepped into his store. When he returned, the horse and wagon were gone. It was found standing on Golden Gate Avenue and Laguna street a few hours later by [illegible] boys of the neighborhood. The sugar was then missing.

Cigars and Tobacco

Major F. S. Burrows, Pacific Coast representative of E. M. Schwarz & Co. and the Jose Lovera Co., has been suffering several days with a severe attack of rheumatism in the arm.

The Pauly cigar store at Wallapia is reported dissolved, James Brewer continuing.

Wood Blain has started a cigar and confectionery store at Colfax, Washington.

Zundel & Pauley have succeeded A. J. Palmer, cigars and confectionery, at Butte, Montana.

The cigar factory of Boltz, Clymer & Co., at Coopersburg, Pa., where about thirty hands were employed, has been closed because of scarcity of help.

J. L. Jerichau, San Francisco distributor for the Rough Rider cigars, has placed them in nearly 300 stands and reports that orders are coming in "to beat the band."

Mr. J. M. Gamble of the American Tobacco Company has returned from the home offices of his company. He reports that business in the East is in a very satisfactory condition and that all indications point to a most prosperous year.

Tilmann & Bendel have received 500,000 Floradoras, which they are offering to the trade at a price that enables them to sell them at 3 for 5 cents and make a good profit. The Floradoras are of the same size formerly retailed at 3 for 10 cents. Tilmann & Bendel are doing a big trade in drop shipment plug tobacco.

Messrs. Spaulding & Merrick offer a special allowance of one cent per pound on all Red Bell plug cut smoking tobacco purchased direct from them during the month of March, 1905.

The Tampa correspondent of "Tobacco" writes to that journal: "A. Santaella & Co. are on rush orders for Optimos. It is 'rush' all the time in this fine factory. With close to 500 cigarmakers, and shipments of 15 to 25 cases of cigars daily, it is next to impossible to promptly meet the demands of their trade."

It is generally known that President Roosevelt, unlike his predecessors in the White House, does not smoke. Neither cigars nor cigarettes, nor yet a pipe, have heretofore possessed any potent charm for him. He unbent sufficiently, however, at the recent dinner tendered him by the Hungarian Republican Club, at New York's famous Bohemian resort, Little Hungary, to indulge in a few whiffs of a cigarette. He couldn't resist the temptation.

Sol Hamburger, of A. Santaella & Co., is in the city visiting the San Francisco agents of his firm, Messrs Ehrman Bros. & Co. The Santaella factory is being tested to the limits of its capacity in filling orders for their leader—the Optimo, of which Ehrman Bros. & Co. alone handle upward of three-quarters of a million every month. Mr. Hamburger reports that the cigar trade is in splendid condition throughout the country. Mr. and Mrs. Hamburger spent three weeks at the Hotel del Coronado before coming to San Francisco and will remain here about two weeks.

The record of the month of January, 1905, and seven months of the fiscal year shows a substantial increase in all varieties of manufactured goods, excepting cigarettes, says "Tobacco." They fell behind last year's output for both periods. The output of cigars for January, 1905, was 517,075,061, compared with 468,275,715 during the corresponding month of 1904. This shows an increase of 48,799,846 in one month, a gratifying showing. For the seven months of the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1904, the total production was 4,074,600,211, compared with 4,021,4430,-875 during the corresponding period of the previous fiscal year, an increase of 53,169,336.

GROCERS ENTERTAINED.

California Grocery Keepers Handsomely Entertained by Carter and Wolfensparger.

A Dayton, Ohio, daily paper, in its issue of January 28, says:

Quite a party of prominent California grocers were entertained in Dayton Friday by A. J. Carter and H. B. Wolfensparger. They were en route home to California from the Cincinnati convention, and stopped over in Dayton upon invitation of the Daytonians for a visit to view the Gem City and visit the N. C. R. The Westerners were handsomely entertained by Messrs. Carter and Wolfensparger and they expressed themselves in enthusiastic terms over Dayton and its attractions. In the party were: F. B. Connolly of San Francisco, vice-president of the San Francisco Grocers' Association; Joseph A. Stulz of San Francisco, vice-president of the Pacific Coast Retail Grocers' Association; C. B. Pearson and wife of Stockton, Cal., president of the California State Association; Ludwig Warnke of Alameda, Cal., president of the Alameda County Association; J. T. Williams, George H. Filbert and John G. Sheehan of Minneapolis; S. Westfield and R. H. Liddell of Chicago. The entire party left Friday evening for their Western homes.

MERIT WINS SUCCESS.

Necessity of Pleasing Customers if Their Trade Is to Be Retained.

Many grocers have only a small portion of the business they might control, generally because their customers are not sure they can get what they want at the store and the grocer does not rouse their interest by giving them something a little bit nicer than they can get anywhere else.

Many retail grocers sell very few pickles.

It is their own fault usually.

They carry a stock in line of tough, undigestible and unappetizing pickles that are not particularly pleasing and do not tempt the customer to buy more. Their only excuse is that the pickles don't cost much. If these retail grocers were to supply their trade with a really first class pickle they would be surprised to find how many pickles their customers would eat and how many more pickles they would buy.

The only permanent success in the pickle business comes from quality. The Pacific Vinegar and Pickle Works realized this fact and all the goods they pack under the "California Home" brand is of so high a quality that they authorize the dealers to refund the full purchase price to the customer if any article bearing that brand fails to give entire satisfaction.

They are able to give this sweeping guarantee because they make their pickles from cucumbers specially grown for their factory. These cucumbers are the product of careful study and experimenting. Another important factor is that the cucumber is processed while it is fresh and is not allowed to become stale and leathery through long standing.

The Sweet Pickles they are advertising in this week's issue of the Advocate are really preserved cucumbers. They are carefully processed with granulated cane sugar and the highest grade of spices. They are what their name indicates, a "sweet pickle," and are very different from the ordinary so-called sweet pickles, which are nothing but common pickles carried in sweetened vinegar.

The dealer will be doubly safe in placing an order with the Pacific Vinegar and Pickle Works for their sweet pickles, since they not only allow the dealer to "money back" the quality but also agree that if, on their arrival, the dealer does not find them the best value he has ever bought, then the company agrees to accept any price the dealer himself may deem fit to place on them.

Clerk's Corner

THE DODGER.

A writer in the American Merchant tells of an affliction in most stores where many clerks are employed. It is the man who dodges his duty—the clerk who will expend more brain and physical energy dodging duty than would be expended performing that duty.

I believe you'd all recognize him. He would not be a drawing card in a dime museum. There's too many of them scattered around. He's too common.

He is the fellow, who, when there's a big box of dry goods unloaded by the drayman, to be opened, marked and placed on the shelves, seems to scent them before they are in a hundred yards of the store.

If he is not busy at the time with a customer, he is as busy as a bee lining up a tier of shoes, which is not out of line, while some one else, less gifted in foresight, opens up the heavy box of goods.

How He Evades Duty.

The only time he is ever known to straighten up stock, without a special invitation from the boss, is when he is dodging, as in the present instance, a more decided piece of work.

He is an honored member of the "Anti-Sweats" and high calish of the society for the Prevention of Labor. He husbands his energy like a miser husbands his gold. If, for instance the store where he is working has five hands besides himself, he takes the sixth customer. He seems to have an iron-clad contract with himself that he doesn't belong to the game until all the other available hands are busy.

Under no circumstances does he figure on doing more than one-sixth of the work. That's the limit. He never goes over; but he does get as much below his pro rata as he can.

Regular at Dinner Time.

He has a certain hour to go to dinner, which is, of course, not criminal; but I have known of clerks who would allow their meals to go uneaten fifteen minutes over time. In case of a fire in the store, right at their meal time, they have been known to stay and help put it out.

It takes a callous and gally customer indeed to hold a dodger thirty minutes past his dinner hour. He gets tied up with a customer of this kind once in a while, I am happy to say—tied up with a customer who persists in finishing his purchases then and there, dinner or no dinner. A customer who heeds not the withering glances shot at him from the angry eyes of the dodger, and who takes no hint from the frequent and irritated snapping of the dodger's watch case, but who leisurely inspects the few pieces of goods which the dodger has snappishly spread before him, and then gazes expectantly at the goods still in the shelves and says, "Hand me down that lower piece in the left-hand stack on the second shelf." All this time the dodger's dinner hour is getting farther into the past.

I cannot recall now any particular instance where the dodger has committed felonious assault under circumstances of this kind; but the painter who could put the dodger's face on canvas—his disgusted features and all—when he's in on a deal of this kind would make his fortune on the painting.

I know a clerk of this kind. I know more than one, but this one will answer the purpose now. He knows every customer in the county who's hard to sell to. When a customer of this kind comes in, this clerk doesn't need to look up—he seems to detect trouble by intuition. There may not be anything going on in the store when a customer of this kind shows up, but this clerk will find something needing fixing. He'll not wait on that customer, you can bank on that. He'll get busy if he is compelled to knock a box of hats on the floor in order to pick them up again.

Don't Want Hard Customers.

He never waits upon a party who's hard to sell to when he's at himself, and his bump of caution is almost always in good working order.

If this late buyer happens to center on Tom—that's the clerk I'm telling you about—Tom will say, "Is there something you wish to look at to-night?" with much inflection and emphasis on the word "to-night."

This is intended by Tom to convey to the interloper that it's shutting-up time, and late at that; and that he should state his wants in a few words, buy or not buy, no monkey business, and get out quick.

CROP AND CLIMATE.

Many varieties of deciduous fruits are in full bloom and others are advancing rapidly. If the recent frosts caused any serious damage to early fruits in bloom the reports of correspondents do not show it, and it is probable the cold weather was more beneficial than otherwise. The outlook for good crops was never better at this time of the year. In Southern California orange trees are starting new growth and lemon trees are in bloom. Orchards and vineyards are being cultivated.

SUGAR MARKET.

There was a decline of 10 cents (to $5.80) in cane sugar on Wednesday afternoon, although beet remained the same.

The decline was unexpected as there has been an advance in raws since the last decline and sugar was already too low to be on even a parity with Eastern sugar. If it were not for the presence of the sugar of the Honolulu Plantation Co. being in the market sugar would be from ½c to 1c higher than at present.

U. S. Consul Hossfeld, at Trieste, Austria, says:

"Owing to the very dry summer, the sugar beet crop of Europe is about 20 per cent less than it was in 1903. The shortage is about 1,122,000 pounds. On September 1, 1903, the world's surplus of sugar was, in round numbers, 2,000,000 tons. At the beginning of the present season this surplus was reduced to 1,427,000 tons. Adding this to the estimated production of the year 1904-5, namely, 4,623,000 tons of beet sugar and 6,900,000 tons of cane sugar, we have for the current year a total of 12,950,000 tons available for consumption. As the world's consumption in the year ended August 30, 1094, was somewhat in excess of 13,000,000 tons, this explains the recent sharp rise in the price of the article. It is, however, not likely that the present prices will continue for more than eight or ten months. There will be, in consequence of the high price which sugar now commands, not only a decrease in the consumption of the article, but also a large increase in the acreage of beets and cane planted; and a propitious season may cause prices to be lower next autumn."

MOLASSES.

It is reported that the production of molasses in Louisiana and Porto Rico is much less than usual this season because the producers are reboiling the molasses in order to get all the sugar possible out of it. This process is made profitable because of the present high prices of sugar.

MAPLE SUGAR.

Lowville, N. Y., Feb. 25th.—R. J. Richardson & Son report: "We expect a good crop of maple this year since we have had exceptionaly cold weather. We do not think prices will be less than those of last year and if the season should be early they might be much higher."

Bellefontaine, O., Feb. 26th—The F. M. Johnson Co. report: "We expect a short season in Ohio and Pennsylvania since the flow of sap which usually opens early in February or the last of January, has not yet begun. Surplus stock is fast going into consumption and we think that the trade which have not already contracted for their year's supply will have to pay more than if they had ordered a month ago. One reason for the firmness of the maple market is the fact that so many states are enforcing the pure food laws in regard to syrups and sugars that the market for maple has been greatly broadened."

COFFEE MARKET.

Considerable green coffee has changed hands in the local market, buyers taking advantage of the shading of prices by holders.

C. Bickford says on March 4th:
